Dear Sirs:-

We are sending herewith a photograph of our automobile delivery No. 2 which we have installed. As you will remember, we sent you a picture of our first car about a year ago, which has been so satisfactory that we deemed it necessary to install a second one.

We have looked over all of the cars on the market and upon investigation we find that the White is the most satisfactory truck made for the money. A very few of the automobile factories will take your order for an automobile truck complete, but this one was shipped to us right from the factory just as it is now.

Yours very truly,

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

RETAIL ADVERTISING.

There are few among the retail florists who have made more successful use of newspaper advertising than has Penn, of Boston. This store has been advertised, in the leading Boston daily, extensively and persistently for several years. The results have justified the expenditure.

The manager of the Penn advertising has got down to facts. He does not place his business in a paper because he is urged to do so—the papers are selected to reach the greatest number of readers at the minimum of cost—no retail flower store can afford to pay for small or duplicate circulations. Claims of solicitors count for nothing; circulation must be authenticated.

Penn's places great importance on copy. Original cuts are used and the reading matter is prepared with much care, to convey to the reader in few words and to the point just what is offered for sale.

Penn's say: "We have studied the effect of featuring one particular thing in an ad and have found that the public will not only call for that article but ask for it in much the same words used to describe it in the ad, which is absolute proof that advertising pays. In fact, we lay most of our success of last season to our advertising and shall do still heavier advertising all through the present season."

DESIGNED ADVERTISEMENTS.

Among the old school of high class retail florists there still is a feeling that advertising in the newspapers is incompatible with the tone the florist seeks to maintain. It is an outgrown notion in so far as the younger element is concerned. The progressive generation in the trade recognizes that no loss of dignity or standing comes from the use of suitable advertisements—quite the contrary, the reputation of the best of stores may be enhanced through appropriate advertising.

No experienced advertising man would recommend a high class florist to use the "19-cents-per-bunch-for-violets" class of advertising. Bargain prices are for the advertising of the store that caters to the transient trade. This is the class of advertising which brings the most immediate and direct returns. But beneficial general publicity can be obtained for the stores which cater to the best element in any community by using designed advertisements. By designed advertisements the advertising fraternity means advertisements which are prepared through the use of the artist's brush and pencil, rather than those executed by the typesetter. Frequently just the right effect can be produced by a combination of the two.

The Hayward Floral Co., Los Angeles, has this autumn been running a series of designed advertisements in the leading local daily. One of these is reproduced herewith, considerably reduced in size, to give an idea of the character of display. These advertisements make no direct offer, and no direct return is to be expected. But the stimulating qualities of the advertising have been easily apparent in the increased business.

WOMAN IN THE FLOWER TRADE.

[An essay by Miss Emma Baumer, of Louisville, awarded second prize in a contest conducted by the Kentucky Society of Florists.]

In using the word "woman" in the title of this essay, I mean any female who goes into a flower store to earn a living.

There are many advantages and per-of it, I shall confine myself to that end of the business entirely. Like a woman, I do not exactly know how to start a paper of this kind, but will begin by telling some of the qualifications required in order to be successful.

Some Necessary Qualifications.

First, the woman florist must be healthy. Even if I do believe that plants and flowers help to improve the health and keep it in good condition, yet if one is weak or sickly one cannot stand the moisture that is naturally connected with our business or the extreme nervous strain that is so often experienced in the rush times.

Second, one should be even-tempered and without that system known as "nerves," for as sure as you easily lose hold of your temper or let yourself know that you have nerves, you will be sure to go to pieces when under some unusual strain incident to the business.

Third, one must be diplomatic, for there are many times when we must not appear to realize what we hear or know what we see.

Fourth, one should have a good haps more disadvantages connected with the retail florists' business, and more qualifications are required than in any other line of retail trade. As my experience in this business has been obtained entirely in the retail store end memory; or, in other words, should be a good saleslady, for in this business, as in any other where art enters into the work, the ordinary or general customer depends much on the saleslady's opinion or advice, and if your first effort to sell to a customer has pleased her, and if she comes in again and you can tell her what she had before and suggest something different, the sale is more easily made.

Fifth, there must be willingness to work, for the nature of our business demands that our hours be uncertain, that the day's work cannot always begin at a certain hour and that you cannot always stop at the same time.

Sixth, one must be a true lover of nature's beauties, to be able to work among them with success, for without that love one cannot give to the flowers that delicate attention they require.

Some Advantages.

There are many other qualifications required, but I trust the discussion will bring them out.

Now for a few of the advantages in retail store work.

First, the work is refining, as in none of its branches is there anything coarse, degrading or offensively suggestive about it, but the flowers themselves are only suggestive of the great-our artistic taste and creative ability, for at the numerous present-day functions at which flowers are used, one must be able to suggest and create the artistic arrangements that are suitable.

Fourth, the work never becomes monotonous, because of the fact that the supply and variety of flowers are constantly changing, as also is the manner of arrangement. This fact proves the necessity of continuous study and reading upon the part of the successful female flower worker, so as to keep up with the progress of our business.

There are also many other advantages, but the discussion will disclose them.

Now for the disadvantages.

Some Disadvantages.

First, the uncertainty of the working hours, for one can never be certain what the day will bring forth, and as they will not detain a funeral or let a train wait until the florist can conveniently bring his materials, it is up to the florist to get the work out on must be done under an extreme nervous strain. This peculiarity of the work makes it necessary for a florists' woman not to have "nerves." As I am not a boss but have always worked under one, I cannot from experience say so, but from observation I know this is especially necessary in a lady boss, for I am sure that the natural worry incident to managing a business, and this unnatural strain that it is so often necessary to exert to get all orders out properly and on time, are most destructive to the nerves.

Fourth, the dampness that one is always working in.

Fifth, at certain times, the disagreeableness of handling the cut flowers. By this I mean that when business is slack and flowers begin to accumulate for several days or until the stems begin to decay, then the flowers, especially such flowers as chrysanthemums, dahlias, bulbous stock and many of the soft-wooded outdoor stock, become, in plain language, "nasty" things to handle.

Sixth—and this is a really serious disadvantage for a woman—she cannot possibly keep pretty hands if she is compelled to work with roses and their thorns, which keep the hands all pricked up, or with the many varieties of flowers that discolor the skin of the hands.

There are many other disadvantages, but as I have already talked longer than a woman usually does, I will leave it to the discussions to bring out the others.

THE CLERK SHOULD KNOW—

That he is never too old to learn.

That his employer's success is his success.

That his advancement depends entirely upon his own individual efforts.

That success is never attained without hard work.

That he will never get something for nothing.

That he need never be ashamed to do for his employer what he would have others do for him.

That he is not paid merely for his presence, but for his work—and is judged accordingly.

That it is his efforts and not his influence which brings promotion.

That persistency, consistency and integrity are the three virtues of success.

That if he gives his best to his employer, the best possible comes back to him in skill, training, shrewdness, acumen and power.

That no customer wants to trade with a clerk who does not know the business.

That the clerk who accomplishes most is the one who makes the least fuss about it.

That politeness pays the biggest dividends.

That the individual who is too lazy to do a thing will find plenty of excuses for not doing it.

That many a man loses his opportunity by slighting his work.

That a real salesman is one part talk and nine parts judgment, and that he uses the nine parts of judgment to tell when to use the one part of talk.

A Large Table for a Luncheon, Decorated Exclusively with Mrs. Jardine Roses.

DECORATING A LARGE TABLE.

When a large luncheon party is to be seated at one table, the florist has before him decorative opportunities not possible where the space is more restricted. The accompanying illustration shows a luncheon decoration by John Mangel, Chicago, in the French room of the Blackstone hotel, where the guests, numbering twenty-four, were all at one table. The center was occupied by a tall vase arising from a centerpiece. At each end of the table there was a small basket of flowers trimmed with ribbon. The guests all were women, and at each plate a corsage bouquet was placed, consisting of a half dozen fine flowers tied with a ribbon to match. The only flowers used on the table were Mrs. Jardine roses. The use of the tall vase was most happy; it relieved an otherwise flat effect and, at the same time, the thin-stemmed vase carried the decoration above the eyes of the guests. It never is desirable to destroy the view across the table by a decoration which can neither be seen over nor seen under.

CALIFORNIA RESTRICTIONS.

Regarding the experience of W. E. Johnston, of Nevada City, Cal., having a shipment of galax leaves destroyed by the Commissioner of Horticulture on the claim that they were infested with white fly, we had a similar experience with a shipment of Ficus pandurata to that state. The shipment was refused entry and destroyed upon our unwillingness to pay transportation charges for its return, although quite free from that insect aforementioned, or any other. We have never noticed the Ficus pandurata, or any other variety, infested with white fly. Conceding the right of a state to guard against the entry of any injurious insect pests, we consider the California regulations rather harsh. To bar certain plants which are known to be breeding places for injurious insects would be no more than right, but those which upon examination by horticultural experts are found free from injurious insects and their larvæ, ought to be allowed to enter. The white fly is not confined to the southern states; greenhousemen at northern points have their troubles with them also. We have often received plants infested with them. Of course they increase in our milder climate much more rapidly than in a colder locality. We would advise any florist receiving orders from that state to inquire if entry will be allowed before making shipment, in order to avoid loss.

THE S. A. F. CONVENTIONS.

First and last, the S. A. F. is a business organization. It should adjust its convention program so that all topics relating to given subjects will occur on given days. One subject that merits discussion is "Credits and the Credit System," as especially applied to florists. We should also consider the appointment of an arbitration board to adjust matters between florists when disagreements arise; let us eliminate the jury and lawyers and sensibly adjudicate matters in which florists understand the ups and downs. This could be made a good feature of the S. A. F.'s work.

If the local societies, in the cities where the conventions are held, want to spend money, why not use that money toward a big midsummer show? A show worthy the name could be given. A special showing of table decorations, vasing, baskets, etc., would aid in building up a higher and more artistic taste and demand among the florists, so that the money spent in connection with the convention would be an investment rather than a burden.

We should be independent, pay our way and leave the meeting place better than we found it.

Are we using the S. A. F. meetings to our best advantage? Wherein are our weaknesses and how would they best be eliminated? Are we choosing men with the best ideas for our officers and directors? One should not forget that a hard-headed business man may make and save money and yet be barren of ideas and up-to-date initiative.

Let us now start the ball a-rolling, to the end that florists and those in the allied trades may all be bettered by it. Among other things, the florists, seedsmen, nurserymen and orchardists should have a co-working organization, by means of which any legislation inimical to our common interests would be fought and reasonable legislation would be secured.

Let us make the S. A. F. and the florists' trade as up-to-date as other businesses. Let us end the cutting of prices, which lands so many in the bankrupt courts. It might not be amiss to consider the question whether the charging of high prices at Christmas and other dates is not a foolish practice. Is it to our best interests?

Let us all hope that "Progress" shall be our watchword for 1913.

TROUBLE WITH CYCLAMENS.

I have a lot of cyclamens in 3-inch pots, with nice tops and good color, showing buds. I would like to know what to feed the plants with to make them grow more steadily; they seem to have not enough roots for the size of the tops. Should I shift them into 5-inch pots after I feed them a while? I should like to have them in bloom in February and March.

C. F. B.

It is now getting late to shift the cyclamens for flowering at the date named. I would prefer to feed them well in their present pots, or, if you want to shift them, give them 4-inch pots. Any potting should be done at once. If you do not pot them, feed once a week with weak cow manure water, or use one of the highly concentrated chemical fertilizers like Imperial Plant Food, Clay's Fertilizer or Bon Arbor, dissolving these in the water at the strength advised on the packages. Grow the plants cool and airy to hold them in good condition until the time you want them in flower.

WOLFE OF WACO.

The firm, Wolfe the Florist, Waco, Texas, consists of T. J. Wolfe, Mrs. M. V. Wolfe and E. A. Wolfe. The accompanying illustration shows a portion of their greenhouse establishment, which is one of the largest in Texas. Although located in the heart of Texas, this is a Chicago establishment. The material for the greenhouses was turned out in two Chicago material mills, and there are two Kroeschell boilers in operation.

The illustration shows only half the establishment. It was begun in a modest way, the first house being only 10x12. Later two houses 20x60 were added, which sufficed for twelve years, until the death of the founder, James Wolfe. When T. J. Wolfe, his oldest son, took charge he rebuilt the greenhouses, two structures each 20x80. The following year he added two more, each 20x120. The next year he built six houses, each 21x125. These were followed by the last addition shown in the illustration, five houses 35x135 and one house 20x135. Since the picture was made another house 50x135 has been put up for Asparagus plumosus.

A general line of stock is grown, mostly for the retail trade, principally chrysanthemums, roses, carnations and bedding plants. Mr. Wolfe's sister and partner runs the store, and her abilities as a maker of designs and bouquets are known all over Texas.

out any of the lilies, the best plan is to set them singly in 5-inch or 6-inch pots, according to size of bulbs, and carry them over winter in a coldframe or cellar, planting them out when frost has left the ground and taking care to cover them several inches deeper when doing so.

To precede these outdoor lilies, pot up a good batch, using 8-inch or 10-inch pots, or boxes six inches deep, in preference to small pots. L. speciosum album is the most valuable variety for the florist. The pure white flowers of this variety are grand for all kinds of design work, and through the summer months, when choice white flowers are not at all plentiful, they will come in particularly useful. Do not leave any of these lily bulbs lying around a day longer than is necessary. When the scales begin to shrivel, the bulbs rapidly deteriorate in quality.

Genistas.

There is ample time in which to flower genistas for Easter, but it is well to have a few coming along all the time, as they are readily salable as pot plants. Do not give them a warm house, or you will spoil them; 45 to 48 degrees at night will give you flowers of good substance which will not fall to pieces forty-eight hours after reaching the store, as so many warmer grown ones do. Keep the Easter stock in a temperature of 38 to 40 degrees at night, giving it 5 degrees more heat early in January. At this season cuttings root readily in any cool propagating house, such as is used for chrysanthemums or carnations. Started now, they will make nice plants in 6-inch pots for Easter, 1914.

Propagation.

Cuttings of a number of bedding plants, in addition to bedding geraniums, should now help to keep the cutting benches well filled. Given porous sand with ample drainage, careful shading and necessary watering, few of these should fail to root. Now is the time to increase your stock of heliotropes, fuchsias, ageratums, coleus, alternantheras, salvias, variegated and green vincas and other plants. Use the bottom shoots of the vincas, a few inches long, and few should fail to root. Stock plants of any of these will soon produce quantities more of good cuttings, if kept in a fairly warm greenhouse.

Calceolarias.

The months with the lowest temperatures suit calceolarias to a nicety. They dislike hot weather and always Marguerites.

Up to the present time the flowers produced on marguerites grown for producing cut flowers have been somewhat small and short-stemmed, but that they are popular in the markets is evidenced by the fact that even these sell quickly at satisfactory prices. From January onward the flowers will increase in size and will come with better stems. Where stock is planted out in beds or benches, few flowers will be produced in midwinter as compared with those which are in pots or boxes. I find it a good plan to grow the plants in fairly large pots and allow them to root through the bottoms into the benches. This gives them some additional root run and materially improves the quality of the flowers. Do not grow the marguerites too warm; a temperature of 50 degrees at night is suitable.

Plants wanted for Easter should not be pinched after the early part of January, and any potting needed should be done then. Give them a rich soil. Ram the soil firmly and be sure to leave a liberal space for water, as marguerites are notoriously thirsty subjects and it is hardly possible to overwater them. The present is a good time to root a good batch of cuttings to produce plants which will sell well in April and May. Marguerites are rapid growing plants and it will probably be found necessary to give plants for Easter and later sales a fresh stand once a fortnight. Do not overlook Queen Alexandra and Mrs. Sander among whites. Both are good. Keep a close watch for leaf-miners on the foliage. If any appear, remove and burn the affected foliage and spray the plants twice a week with nicotine, taking care to damp every part of the foliage. In the case of badly affected stock it will be advisable to destroy it. If you do not want to do this, dip the heads in a tub containing some one of the tobacco extracts. Keep the plants immersed a full minute. I find this kills a large part of the leaf-miners, which often so seriously disfigure the foliage.

Lilium Speciosum.

Where any planting of Lilium speciosum has been planned outdoors and the ground has been mulched to exclude frost, the present month is the best in the whole year to get the bulbs in. Be sure not to use any fresh manure about them. Plant nine or ten inches deep and cover the bulbs with sand. After planting, mulch with straw or leaves. I like to loosen the ground to a depth of two feet where these lilies are to go. Then there is a certainty of good results. The large and showy L. auratum should also be planted now. If the ground is frozen tightly and it is not possible to plant grow best in midwinter, doing especially well in a house which feels cold and clammy and lacks the geniality of atmosphere so conducive to the welfare of the majority of greenhouse plants. As the calceolarias are now at their period of most rapid growth, they should never be allowed to become stunted in their pots. Use a light but fairly rich soil and one which will be at the same time quite porous. I like a compost of fibrous, yellow loam, to which is added some cow manure, well dried, and passed through a half-inch screen, some leaf-mold, sand, soot and fine charcoal. Thoroughly mix these together and you will find that the plants will revel in it. Always keep them as close to the glass as possible and give them an abundance of air. Remember always that green aphid is the arch enemy of calceolarias, and if they are not fumigated weekly they will soon get into a condition which will qualify them for the rubbish heap.

Fibrous-rooted Begonias.

The last part of December or early January is a good time to make sowings of any of the fibrous-rooted begonias, such as Erfordii, Vernon in its several colors, Snow Queen, semperflorens rosea, Fairy Queen and others, which are becoming increasingly popular as bedding plants. The fact that they are persistent bloomers, of a neat habit, and succeed equally well in either sunshine or shade, marks them at once as a class of plants which have come to stay. Be sure the pans in which these are to be sown are well drained; one and one-half to two inches of fine soil over a coarser material is sufficient. Water the pans well before sowing the seeds, and as these are fine they must be sown with great care and not covered at all. Cover the pans with glass, keep shaded, and in a close, moist house they will not be long in germinating, when they must have full light and be gradually moved to slightly cooler quarters.

Sweet-scented Verbenas.

Move one or two of the old verberna plants into a warm, moist house. Spray freely and they will soon throw out a nice crop of succulent cuttings. These, rubbed off with a heel and inserted in a warm cutting bench, should nearly all root, provided the sand is porous and the cuttings are not overwatered. No mistake will be made in working up a good-sized batch of this always popular, sweet-scented plant, which every plant purchaser seems to want.

Dimorphotheca Aurantiaca.

Where a really quick crop is wanted, the charming South African annual, Dimorphotheca aurantiaca, should be tried. The fine orange-yellow flowers have a faculty of closing up the first night after being cut, but later stay fully expanded and are satisfactory keepers. Seed sown now can be flowered within a couple of months. Try a few on a shallow bench or in flats. Do not sow too thickly if you want plants which will carry good stems. This plant succeeds well in a carnation temperature.

DASYLIRION AS A LAWN PLANT.

A translation of the word dasyllirion would seem to be "hairy lily," but above ground there is in this plant no noticeable hairiness on the leaves or about the flowers, so it may be that the vestiture of the bulb is hairlike, otherwise the reason for the name hairy lily appears to be one of those things which no one can find out. The Indian name is "sotol" (accent on second syllable), but what sotol means is also unknown to me.

Dasyllirion wheeleri is a native of New Mexico and the eastern half of Arizona, where on its native heath it grows four or five feet high, being apparently dwarfed by aridity and sterility of the soil, or its non-cultivation, but it takes kindly to cultivation and to the influences of civilization as exemplified by irrigation, and in lawns and gardens grows much larger and finer than in its desert home.

The plant shown herewith, growing at San Bernardino, Cal., is nearly fourteen feet high. The color of the flowers is cream-white or ivory-white. The flowers are sweet, and attractive to bees and flies. The leaves are nearly flat, three feet long, slender and narrow, and bordered with small sharp hooks pointing outward to the tip of the leaves. This flower stem grew up as in a night, or to be more exact, in about three weeks. The flowers are clustered along the caudex on little branchlets which cling closely to the main stem, so that the caudex looks like a long club of matted flowers. The flowers, of course, are individually quite small and inconspicuous, so that the whole flower stem looks like one large, long flower.

WEAK PLANTS, POOR BLOOMS.

I am sending you a sample of my carnations and also some of the soil. Something is wrong with them and I should like to have A. F. J. B.'s opinion of them. The carnations were planted in the benches August 8 and did not grow as strongly as they should. As I thought they had been a little too dry, I gave them more water. There is not much manure in the soil, so about November 1 I put on a light top-dressing of bone and wood ashes, but this did not seem to do much good. The plants are weak and the blooms are poor. The white ones show a dirty white color before they open, and the pink ones are sleepy. I have been told lately that the soil had been in the benches for five years, but that the grower had good carnations growing in it last winter. When I water the benches they do not dry out enough to be watered again until about ten days or two weeks have passed. The night temperature is from 48 to 52 degrees; on clear days it is 60 to 68 degrees, with air on. I should be glad to hear what A. F. J. B. has to say about them. G. A. R.

The specimens forwarded disclosed two things: First, your carnations are infested with thrips. Nearly every bloom had several of the insects on it. That is what causes those brown edges. If you have watched these columns lately, you will know that the remedy for this pest is nicotine.

The second disclosure is that your soil lacks humus and is in what may be termed a flat condition. The fact that this soil grew good carnations last year is no sign that it would repeat the success this year, without anything being added to it. Had you procured some well rotted manure and mixed a wheelbarrow load for each six lineal feet of a 5-foot bench, you would have improved it wonderfully. A hundred pounds of sheep manure added to each 100-foot bench, in addition to the other, would have improved it still more. From the appearance of the soil submitted I would imagine that, if handled as suggested above, it would grow fair stock. The application of bone and wood ashes you gave last fall could not be expected to correct the trouble. Had you given a mulch of manure, you would have seen better results.

This matter of using soil several years without change has not been solved by a long way. Now and then we hear some grower assert that he has used soil so and so many years without change, and grown fine stock on it. We always take such statements with a grain of salt. Usually inquiry discloses the fact that, in spite of these excellent results, the grower has been afraid to adopt the plan any further than just on this experimental space. Granting that the grower is quite honest in his statements, there is still the question of what is good stock, as there is a wide variation between what one grower would call good stock and what another would consider such, and there is also a question as to how much one would allow his interest in the matter to sway his judgment.

Our own experiments along this line, while not altogether discouraging, have not proved satisfactory. We find that the plants will not start off as vigorously as in new soil, and consequently enough is lost in the early part of the season to more than offset the saving in soil and refilling. A. F. J. B.

CARNATION RUST.

Enclosed you will find some carnation leaves that have black spots on them, and the trouble is becoming general in the house. Please tell me what it is and what is a good remedy for it. C. & W.

The spots you notice on the foliage of your plants are caused by the common carnation rust. When a little farther advanced in development, these raised places burst open and release a brown, powdery substance. These are the spores by which the rust is propagated. They scatter about, and wherever they alight new ruptures will occur.

Diminish your syringing as much as possible, always keeping a sharp eye out for red spider. Dust your plants lightly with either hydrated lime or, better still, with Grape Dust. As the days grow longer and the sunlight stronger, you will have less trouble along this line. A. F. J. B.

GREEN MOSS ON SOIL.

I am sending you some samples that show the nature of the trouble we are having with our carnations this year. In former seasons we have had the best of blooms and an abundance of them, but this year they are of no account. This trouble is spreading all through the beds. When we brought in the soil in the fall we took some sheep manure, which had been in a pile outdoors for two years, and mixed it with the soil in the beds. We mixed it thoroughly as we brought it in. Our soil becomes covered with green moss in a little while. Please let us know what we must do. G. G.

While it is possible that the sheep manure is the cause of your soil being covered with moss, etc., yet I would be sure about it. If the soil did not contain sufficient fibrous material at the time it was brought into the house, it would act just as you describe, even though no manure had been mixed with it. I would suggest that you apply a sprinkling of lime to the beds now, and if the trouble continues, repeat it in about three weeks. Apply about a scant 3-inch potful of the lime to each row, halfway across a 5-foot bench. A. F. J. B.

GERANIUMS FOR BEDDING.

It is now possible to give geraniums, the most valuable of all bedding plants, some of the additional space they have for some time been so sorely needing. Such as are in 2-inch pots and getting potbound will be better shifted into 3-inch pots. Some growers, in an effort to save labor, like to put them in 4-inch pots and save one potting. It does not pay. The plants with two shifts will easily beat the others, no matter how carefully these are watered. Any which for lack of space have been kept in flats should be potted at once. I would not use more than a pinch of fine bone at this potting, but apply it more freely at the next shift.

While the days are short and we have much dark and possibly damp weather, let the plants run pretty well on the dry side. Look them over occasionally and remove decaying leaves and weeds, giving any a fresh stand which are crowded. Any plants showing signs of leaf disease should have the affected foliage removed. This disease seems constitutional in certain varieties, but much can be done to keep it in check by running plants a little on the dry side, avoiding overhead syringing and keeping the air pure and sweet by free ventilation.

Stock plants grown in benches will be yielding lots of nice cuttings now, and as bottom heat is more steady these should root with a small percentage of loss in any sand which passes water freely through it.

GOOD SINGLE GERANIUMS.

Will you please give me the names of three or four good varieties of single geraniums? Kindly name sorts that make cuttings freely. We have the Wonder, which is a fine variety, but it is hard to get enough cuttings from it. E. F. C.

Excellent varieties for either pot culture or bedding are: Jacquerie, crimson, immense trusses; Paul Crampe, brilliant vermilion scarlet, compact habit, wonderfully floriferous; Snowdrop, pure white, the best of its color; Mrs. Brown Potter, clear pink; Telegraph, Lincoln red; Granville, rose pink. All these varieties can be relied upon to bed out well and make cuttings freely. C. W.

APHIS ON ROSES.

The leaves of my rose bushes have a sticky substance on them. They look as though they were immersed in syrup or oil of some kind, and then they become yellow. Please inform me as to the cause and remedy. J. R. D.

The leaves, from their sticky appearance, would seem to have been badly attacked by green aphids. Some of these pests were still seen on the leaves when closely examined. To clean these out effectively, you should fumigate or spray with some insecticide, such as one of the nicotine extracts, Ivory soap or one of the other oil or soap sprays. A couple of fumigations may be needed to clean the house thoroughly. Then see that an application is given once a week, even though you do not see any pests, for prevention is vastly better than cure. When roses are allowed to get into this condition they are seriously injured and you must use every care to prevent any recurrence of this in the future. C. W.

FUNGUS ON ROSE ROOTS.

We lifted some rose bushes that had been blooming inside in ground beds for eighteen months. Around the crown and large roots was a white coating like a fungus. Does that injure them to any extent? I heeled them in outside in September to let them rest and freeze some and now am pruning and potting them. Will they come all right? K. K.

The coating referred to is not likely to be anything which will injure the roses. If you find any of it on them when lifting, dip them in some fungoid preparation like Bordeaux mixture. I see no reason why they should not come along all right. C. W.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The prize list for the coming exhibition, as part of the National Flower Show, has been issued. There will be additional special prizes.

The annual bulletin for 1912 will be an interesting document. This record of events of the society is steadily in demand by libraries and students.

The correspondence up to this date shows that interest in the exhibition is already alive among the growers of roses, and they are determined to make good in New York. No flower show would be complete unless the roses were there in full force. These flower shows are effective as trade getters in this wise: The fame of them goes broadcast. In the city of New York, within a radius of twelve miles from the location of the Grand Central Station, where the show is to be held, there are 5,000,000 people, and to cultivate the taste of this great population is the effect.

There is a place in popular favor for the small roses. The rambler rose is becoming more and more in evidence the country over. During the growing season this class of roses, if you look for them, you will find frequently in the small dooryards of the cities. They do look pretty.

STORING DAHLIAS.

I notice constant reference to rotting of dahlia roots in storage. Mine always rotted until I learned better than to cut them off the stem. Since then I have had no trouble. Possibly there are still in existence a few people as ignorant as I was.

DRACÆNA LOSES FOLIAGE.

Enclosed you will find two leaves of a dracæna which is in bad shape. I have quite a number of dracænas and other decorative plants under my care in the same house. The foliage of the plant from which the enclosed leaves were taken seems to be always decaying and falling off, which makes it unsalable. As to the name of the variety, I am not sure whether it is Massangeana or Lindeni, but should be pleased to know. Also, I have the green variety with yellow through the center, and it never goes off like the enclosed leaves. I keep the house at 65 degrees in the daytime and 60 degrees at night, or sometimes a little over. Any information as to how to prevent this trouble will be much appreciated. H. G.

The leaves in question are from Dracæna Lindeni, and show a fungoid disease that is not uncommon on this plant. This disease is encouraged by too much water, accompanied by low temperature, and it would be advisable to keep the plants somewhat drier, both at the root and overhead, especially during the winter. Also give full exposure to the sun at this season, with a day temperature of 70 to 75 degrees and at night 60 to 65 degrees. A rather open and well drained soil is best for these variegated dracænas, and in bright weather they enjoy syringing freely, but on dull days the foliage should be kept dry. W. H. T.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Washington dealers, as a whole, are well pleased with their holiday business. With but few exceptions the stores were busier than ever before, and cut flowers moved nicely. Potted plants, also, were in large demand and only the greens suffered. There was a marked oversupply of wreaths and Christmas trees. The belief that there would be a shortage of this class of stock caused excessive quantities to be cut and that some of those who carried trees and greens found a lot left over was not due to the fact that sales were lower than in previous years, but because the supply exceeded all possible demands. The shipping business was heavy and telegraphic orders to and from this city were more plentiful than before. Washington being the capital and the seat of the social world of the country, it was to be expected that its florists would be called to make many deliveries on orders received by mail and from florists in other cities.

Carnations, colored, were perhaps the only flowers of which there was any semblance of a scarcity, and it would have been impossible under any but the best conditions to supply anything like the demand that was felt during the last week. Azaleas cleaned up well, with the result that some of the stores moved all on hand. Begonias, cyclamens, poinsettias and ardisias were much in demand, while heather and lilacs were in big favor. Made-up baskets, as is usual at this time of year, were present in large quantities and sold unusually well.

Carnations are now bringing from $6 to $10 per hundred; lilies, $12.50. Roses are averaging from $6 to about $10 per hundred, but some good stock is to be had at figures much in advance. Sweet peas are $1 per hundred; violets, $1 and $1.50 per hundred. American Beauties are bringing from $3 to $7.50, according to quality and length of stem. Lupines and snapdragons are scarce.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club will be held in the club's quarters at 1214 F street, Northwest, Tuesday evening, January 7.

The flange of the return pipe on the fifty horse-power engine at the plant of J. M. Hammer broke just before the holidays and, although no stock was lost, considerable difficulty was experienced. For about ten days it was found necessary to heat the houses with bonfires.

The Market.

From a buoyant market December 23, with every indication of a profitable clean-up for everybody, there developed the heaviest snowfall in a generation and "the night before Christmas" saw accumulation from delayed shipments, lack of enthusiasm and losses running up to many thousands of dollars, to both wholesalers and retailers. Ten to twelve inches of snow on the level was too great a handicap to overcome and so Christmas of 1912, instead of the best ever known here, as it would have been without the storm, became just an ordinary holiday, filled with disappointment and to many unprofitable. Owing to the delay of many hours in the arrival of shipments, trains and Jersey expresses coming in many hours behind the schedule, it was not until evening that any life was visible in the wholesale market. This delay held the market steady during the day, and top prices were realized, but as the night wore on values gradually declined. Christmas morning found an abundance of everything for all possible demands. Fine weather Christmas day was helpful and a visit to the retailers on Christmas eve found every plant and plant combination sold, as usual, and wrecks replacing the artistic groupings of the first part of the week, when the retail florists' windows were the most attractive displays to be seen anywhere in the big city.

American Beauties, when perfect, sold at $1 each, wholesale, for Christmas. Before Saturday night the price had dwindled to 50 cents and the tendency still was downward. All roses have followed Beauties in the retrograde movement. The novelties sold at high figures early in the week and some grand Richmond and Russell from New England were not far behind Beauty in price and popularity. Milady, Mrs. Shawyer and Sunburst also shared in the society recognition. Killarney was most abundant and its white and double pink varieties were in general demand. Ward, Bulgarie, Taft and Hillingdon were all called for; only the older varieties dragged, and this because of delay in arrival and occasional evidence of stock having been held over for the holiday by the grower.

The red varieties of carnations were all sold at good prices, 12 cents being top, falling to 10 cents at the close. The latter figure was high tide for all other varieties, even the novelties, and many thousands sold at 8 cents on Christmas morning. Prices this week are lower, and likely to remain steady at present quotations. There was a large supply of poinsettias in pans and cut, some exceptionally fine stock of the latter bringing $4 and $5 per dozen. There were also plenty of orchids and values did not advance, nor was the holiday demand so large as was anticipated. There was, however, a good market for all the gardenias, some fine stock touching $6 per dozen. Valley and lilies did not advance. In fact, the best valley sold as low as $4 per hundred. The violet supply was short and prices were raised to $1 per hundred, and occasionally above this. They have fallen low enough and probably have seen their top record for the season. The regular daily supply of lilac, daisies, sweet peas, hyacinths, narcissi, mignonette and wallflowers continues, with no change in prices. There were a few mums for Christmas, and good ones, too, that sold at $3 per dozen. Mums have had a wonderful year, and now gracefully retire from the field.

The social season now is in full swing and business should show steadiness and reasonable profit for all the retail trade from now on to Easter, March 23.

Various Notes.

Now the decks are cleared for the National Flower Show. Everybody in New York has been resting on his oars, waiting for the passing of the holidays, and now, apart from Easter, there is no topic of such importance to the New York florists. Chairman Totty, and his big force of assistants, are working, planning and preparing for "the greatest show on earth," and from now until the doors of the Grand Central palace are thrown open to the expected multitude there will be no

Christmas proved a boon to the dealers in southern supplies and northern greens. Never was there so much holly used in wreaths and roping. Of mistletoe and good holly there was a serious shortage.

The florists' supply houses had a wonderful holiday trade, and the plantmen were everywhere jubilant, for all deliveries were made days before the storm and while the weather made wrapping unnecessary.

The horticultural banquet season opens Wednesday evening, January 8, with the Tarrytown society's fourteenth annual dinner at the Florence Inn, Tarrytown, N. Y. On the following Wednesday evening, January 15, the New Jersey society will enjoy its eighteenth annual dinner and dance at English hall, East Orange, N. J. Then will quickly follow the banquets of the Madison, Yonkers, Glen Cove, Oyster Bay, White Plains, Stamford, Poughkeepsie, Red Bank, Elberon, Tuxedo and other local societies, and the annual feasts of the N. Y. & N. J. Plant Growers' and the New York Florists' Club must not be forgotten.

The Cut Flower Exchange held its usual Christmas raffle last week. The 18-pound turkey was won by J. Volke, manager for W. H. Siebrecht, of Astoria, and the 16-pound bird was won by Alex. Smith, of Woodside. As usual, Thos. H. Jackson, manager of the exchange, was turkey-holder and master of ceremonies.

The Greek ball January 2 will see a great gathering of the florists of that nationality, as well as many of the wholesale and retail florists of American birth.

Many of the wholesale florists are handling potted blooming plants, especially poinsettias and primroses, of both of which the supply this season seems to have exceeded the demand.

The plantmen on Twenty-eighth street, Wm. Kessler and Woodrow & Markatos, sold out several times before Christmas and were obliged to replenish.

The retail florists of Broadway, Fifth avenue and Madison avenue all report a splendid Christmas.

The Brooklyn wholesale houses all express themselves as well pleased with the Christmas trade.

W. H. Siebrecht, of Chappaqua, president-elect of the N. Y. Florists' Club, is now associated with the wholesale house of Siebrecht & Siebrecht, Inc.

Several of the wholesale florists are distributing handsome calendars this winter. In Brooklyn Bonnet & Blake have used this method of wishing their growers a happy New Year.

The seed houses are all busy sending out their new catalogues. Those which handled Christmas goods sold out clean. The MacNiff Co. sold many hundreds of boxes of holly at auction. Those with the foresight and enterprise to buy doubled their money.

J. D. Nicholas, on East Forty-second street, will open his new store at the main entrance of the New York Central Terminal building in time, he now expects, for the Easter trade. The store will be forty-five feet on Forty-second street, and fifty feet deep, built entirely of glass and white marble, with tiled floors. A marble ice-box will be 10x25. The counters are all to be of marble; offices the same. He will have high grade flower, fruit and seed departments.

Rupert Hall, formerly with Reed & Keller, has joined the staff of travelers for Wertheimer Bros. Mr. Hall will cover central and southwestern territory.

LANCASTER, PA.

December 19 there was the usual large attendance at the meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Club. A good paper was read by Harry Weaver, of Bird-in-Hand, on the subject, "Should We Grow More of a Variety for Christmas?" He emphasized the fact that the grower who is supplying the wholesale market through a commission house is better off if he sticks to one or two things and grows them well. In the discussion that followed it was generally conceded that, situated as Lancaster growers are, a considerable distance from market, it is best to stick to the standard flowers where growing cut flowers.

A committee was appointed to arrange for a banquet after the next meeting, which will be a sort of banner affair, starting with a visiting trip to Strasburg at 1 p. m. Thursday, January 16; return to Lancaster for the meeting, and after the meeting the banquet in the form of a social session. Any out-of-town florists who happen to be in the city on this date should meet the crowd at the traction waiting room.

GREENHOUSE PHOTOGRAPHY.

Making a thoroughly good photograph of a modern greenhouse is not usually the easiest thing a camera man does—the up-to-date greenhouse is so long in comparison with its height that the lens either takes in only a part of the house or else is set so far away that most of the detail is lost. The Review has previously published pictures of the new range at Gregg's Station, Ill., and the reason for showing the accompanying illustrations is that the photographs are the best that have thus far been made. The range consists of five houses, each 34x599 feet. The type of construction is what is known as the steel flat rafter house, with steel gutters. The sashbars are only 1½x1¾, and carry comparatively little of the strain, the strength of the house being in the steel frame. In these houses, thirty-four feet wide, there are only two lines of purlin supports. There is a detached service building of fireproof construction.

These houses form the nucleus around which Bassett & Washburn purpose to centralize their glass. The older houses at Hinsdale will in the end all be removed to the new location. Work now is in progress on twelve of the houses, each 25x200. The John C. Moninger Co., which had the contract for the long houses, is furnishing such new material as is required, but a considerable part of the roof will come out of the old houses: cypress gutters, bars and ventilators will be used again, and it is an interesting indication of the permanence of well built greenhouses of even the older type that some of this woodwork has done service for twenty years and still is in condition to go into construction that is expected to stand for another long period. In these rebuilt houses Bassett & Washburn are using galvanized pipe posts for walls, with angle iron purlins. They are putting in a complete new heating plant.

BOSTON.

The Christmas Market.

Growers, wholesalers and retailers are agreed that it was the greatest Christmas ever, and are tired but happy. But for the severe driving snowstorm, which started at daylight December 24 and continued until dark, disorganizing steam and street traffic, the stores would have been practically swamped. As it was, they had all they could attend to, but deliveries were difficult, owing to the snow blockade.

Plants easily asserted their supremacy over cut flowers and the high prices of the latter greatly increased the call for plants. All growers were well cleaned out and did a splendid business. Poinsettias were the leaders; then came cyclamens; after that, azaleas, berried plants, oranges, ericas, primulas, Cincinnati and Lorraine begonias and bulb pans. The demand for Lorraine begonias was far below that for Cincinnati.

Coming to cut flowers, Beauties and Russells shared honors as leaders, but some wonderful Richmonds were not far behind. These latter made $6 to $35 per hundred, with some specials at $50. Killarney, White Killarney and Killarney Queen made $6 to $25; Ward, $6 to $30; Hillingdon and Sunburst, $6 to $25; Christy Miller, $4 to $50. Carnations were in strong demand. Owing to many growers being in light crop, the supply was less than normal. Good stock realized $8 to $10; extra fancies, in one or two cases, $12 to $15; ordinary stock, $4 to $6. Carnations never realized better Christmas prices. Violets averaged $1.50, but a few went to $2. Sweet peas made $1 and $1.50 per hundred; valley, $3 to $5; tulips and trumpet narcissi, $4 to $6; freesia, $8; mignonette, $1 to $2 per dozen; snapdragons, $6 to $10; marguerites, $1 to $2; poinsettias, $2 to $5 per dozen; lilies, $10 to $12.50 per hundred; cattleyas, $4 to $8 per dozen, and gardenias, $4 to $6 per dozen. The call for asparagus and ferns was not heavy, owing to the abundance of other greens. The flowers which suffered most from the storm and tie-up in transportation facilities were roses, which slumped quite a little late in the day. On Christmas morning flowers which appeared sold well. With clear skies, the demand was quite good.

Flowers since Christmas have not been abundant and the demand has kept them well cleaned up. Prices have dropped to normal. Rose prices are cut in half; carnations are making $2 to $6; violets, $1, and bulbous stock has taken a considerable drop.

All dealers in Christmas greens, wreaths, etc., agree that business with them easily broke all records. They experienced great trouble in delivering late orders.

Various Notes.

J. R. Shield, of North Woburn, hit the Christmas holidays just right with a splendid crop of carnations. His leaders are Beacon, White Wonder, Pink Delight and Fenn.

A. A. Pembroke picked 30,000 high grade carnations during the two weeks ending December 28, and the prices were the highest he has ever received.

Attendance steadily increases at the landscape gardening classes of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club and pupils all seem keenly interested.

Many growers have cause to remember the snow storm of December 24, 1912. Transportation facilities became utterly demoralized in midafternoon. Terminal stations were crowded and delays of from three to six hours in trains leaving were the average. Those who went home early were fortunate. Quite a few were stranded in the city over night.

Welch Bros. Co. had far the heaviest Christmas business in its history. The high price of flowers somewhat restricted sales of these, but trade in greens was record-breaking.

John Barr secured as high as $12 and $15 per hundred for some of his fancy carnations, of which he had a heavy pick for the holidays. Beacon and his new variegated, Mrs. B. P. Cheney, were top-notchers.

Andrew Christensen, of Stoneham, who grows 40,000 carnations, is well pleased with Rosette and Benora, among the new varieties. St. Nicholas comes rather slowly. Of older varieties, White Wonder, Beacon, White Enchantress and Pink Delight are the leaders.

William Sim marketed 150,000 single violets for the holidays. He will not start picking sweet peas until early in February.

The W. W. Edgar Co. hardly had a salable plant left. They have 10,000 lilies and a host of other plants coming along for Easter.

The Flower Growers' Sales Co. had splendid business, both in plants and cut flowers. They had 45,000 sweet peas from Thomas Roland's big new house at Revere.

L. E. Small, of Tewksbury, and West Street Greenhouses, of Reading, are large shippers of bachelor's buttons to W. R. Holden.

Donald Carmichael, of Wellesley, has had splendid success with mignonette and carnations this season.

"Never saw anything like it," is the report of H. M. Robinson & Co., on Christmas trade. They were well cleaned out.

Everett E. Cummings, of Woburn, had 43,000 Princess of Wales violets for the holidays.

A. G. Lake, of Wellesley Hills, has a heavy cut of yellow marguerites, in addition to his carnations.

The Massachusetts Moss & Greenery Co. reports a great sale of all lines of Christmas supplies.

Arthur Griffin, of Woburn, finds Pink Delight, White Wonder and Beacon the best of their color. He will grow less of Gloriosa another season.

Penn's report that their holiday trade was a banner one. They advertised heavily in the newspaper, making cyclamens and poinsettias leaders.

Montrose Greenhouses had a fine Christmas crop of roses. Killarney, Richmond and Ward are their specialties, although some Sunburst are grown. Ward with them is good.

Freesia from W. R. Nicholson, H. W. Vose, S. J. Goddard and Sutermeister Estate was unusually abundant and good for the holidays and sold finely.

McAlpine Bros., of Exeter, N. H., had a superb cut of Richmond for Christmas. There were many thousands of them and plenty had stems four to six feet long.

I regret to report the death of the wife of Geo. C. Harbison, the well-known foreman for W. H. Elliott, at Brighton. Mr. Harbison has the sincere sympathy of many friends in his affliction. Among the pallbearers at the funeral, December 24, were W. H. Elliott and Peter M. Miller.

Peter M. Miller is on a business trip to Bar Harbor, Me.

John Stafford, of Bar Harbor, Me., and his nephew, James Morrison, are visitors this week. W. N. Craig.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

As a surprise, the weather man sent us a heavy snow for Christmas. There was a snowfall on Monday, but it melted off about noon. That night the snow fell again, about six inches deep, and remained until after Christmas. No more ideal Christmas weather could be expected, but so many were afraid of the cold that it undoubtedly hurt the flower trade on Tuesday and on Wednesday forenoon. In spite of this, the sales were the largest that were ever known here for Christmas. Deliveries were hard to make on account of the cold and snow, which were not expected and were not prepared for. But there was no loss and all deliveries were made by working late.

As a rule the prices remained firm, though we have reports of some selling of carnations at cut prices. The day after Christmas, a glance at the stock that was left showed that everything had been cleaned up as closely as could be done without the danger of serious shortages later. Carnations were all sold, one might say; so were the made-up baskets and pots. Azaleas were cleaned up so closely that there were not enough for the trade that always comes the next few days. Roses were the only item that was left in any quantity at all. Most of these were cleaned up before Saturday night, so that the close of the week found everyone happy.

Trade is lighter now than is usual after the holiday season, and everyone is making use of the respite to get ready to push the stock for Easter. Funeral work is especially light, an unusual thing just after Christmas. Inquiries lead to the belief that crops are in good condition, and that there should be a full crop of lilies and other plants for Easter here. Should they make good, this will be a bumper year for the business here, as all the trade enjoyed exceptional sales at both Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Various Notes.

Haury & Sons report their best Christmas season. They were especially strong in Lorraine begonias and made-up baskets. They cleaned out almost every salable plant in these. Their delivery boy had an accident December 24 that might have been serious. In making a crossing the wagon was struck by a street car. The damage to stock was slight and the boy escaped with nothing more serious than a severely bruised shoulder.

Geny Bros. had a large stock of as good azaleas as could be found anywhere, but they were all sold out. Their baskets were fine and everyone was sold, and more had to be made up on the spur of the moment. They had the heaviest cut of carnations that they have ever had, but sold out closely. They say they have never bought so little for the holiday trade and never before had so satisfactory a business.

I was unable to visit McIntyre Bros., but understand that they got their full share of the business. I am told that they had a good supply of mighty fine late chrysanthemums, which sold well.

The Joy Floral Co. had an extra heavy supply of as fine roses as were ever seen in the city. While they did not entirely clean up on them, they managed to make a good clean-up by the end of the week. A steam pipe burst one night in their Beauty house and cooked one end of one bed. But for the fortunate circumstance that a man was in the range at the time and turned off the steam at once, the results would have been serious. They say they have had a good trade since Christmas, especially out of town.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Christmas business proved good for everyone. The wholesalers cleaned up and might have sold more, particularly in roses and carnations, had they been forthcoming. Every retailer in town sold out and could have used more stock had it been available. In fact, their business was limited only by the supply. A few double violets alone were held over. Plants, too, sold well. Begonia Glory of Cincinnati, poinsettias, azaleas and cyclamens were the leaders, in the order named, in blooming plants. A great many ferns, Bostons, Whitmani and Farleyense, also were used.

In decorative material, boxwood ran short. For the four or five days preceding Christmas the only supply was the limited quantities that were rushed in by express. Holly sold well, but not quite as quickly as other years. The average quality was high. The supply of laurel roping was shorter than other years, but the quantity offered sufficed to go around. Deep inroads were made into the supply of immortelles. Red and green ruscus sold well. Wild smilax was an exceptionally good seller.

The outlook, in the immediate future, for flowers is bright. The average supply in each line is on the increase. The average quality is high. With this in view, the wholesalers should easily be able to take care of all calls on them for stock.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell was the first in the market to offer Mexican ivy this fall.

P. J. Olinger repeated his usual Christmas performance. He came into

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

Business during Christmas week broke all previous records, especially in potted plants and basket work. Azaleas were good and sold well. Vervaneana was the leader as usual. Begonias, Lorraine and Cincinnati, went fast. Practically every one was sold by Christmas eve. The demand for begonias seems to grow more each year. Poinsettias were hard to get, especially with good foliage. This made it quite hard for the retailers to fill their orders. Weather conditions had no doubt advanced them too much and it was hard to hold them back. The bench-grown plants were a great deal better and seemed to have more foliage. As a whole, poinsettias were not so good as last year. Cyclamens and other potted plants sold well and were good. It seemed that any plant with a bloom on it sold without the least trouble.

There was an abundance of roses for Christmas trade and they sold fast with the retailers. Carnations were rather scarce, as they were within the purchasing price of the majority of people. Red carnations could not be had from the wholesale people at any price. Christmas eve red carnations sold as high as $3 per dozen. There was an abundance of violets and narcissi on the market, but, like every other bloom, they went fast.

Various Notes.

Henry Kusik & Co. were surprised at the amount of stock that was sold the day before Christmas, as it was thought that a great deal of stock would be left on hand. This concern had a good run on supplies.

The Rosary had an excellent Christmas week. They sold out of everything, as business was far better than was expected.

The trade regrets to hear of the death of Ford Brown, who died suddenly, Thursday, December 26. We all extend our sympathy to the family. R. S. Brown, the father, has just undergone an operation for appendicitis, but is greatly improved and able to sit up.

W. J. Barnes during the rush, the day before Christmas, had trouble with his delivery car. Orders stacked high, but, as luck would have it, he was able to secure two cars, which he kept busy till twelve o'clock Christmas day.

Samuel Murray reports business as being past his expectations. Fancy pot plants were the best sellers. He grows his plants at his own greenhouses, and they cannot be beaten.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. reports this Christmas business immense. Good pot plants and fancy basket work appeared to be what the people wanted.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Cut Flower & Plant Co. reports the sale of 5,000 Richmond roses Christmas week, in addition to a great many pot plants.

E. A. Humfeld reports a good business. His Chadwick mums did not sell up to his expectations, however.

The Alpha Floral Co. believes that the individual buyer did not spend as much this year, but more people purchased than ever before.

T. A. Moseley has good news for the trade. The stork visited his home last week and left an 8-pound baby girl. Congratulations are now in order.

A. F. Barbee cleaned up entirely on cut flowers last week. Pot plants went better with him this week than ever before.

Miss Jennie E. Murray reports business more than good. She is feeling elated over last week's sales.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Christmas business was the best generally that has been experienced here in several years, notwithstanding the severe snow storm of the preceding day. While the storm interfered somewhat with sales on that day, it was more noticeable in the difficulties of delivery. Several florists had automobiles and wagons stalled in the snow, and plants and flowers nipped. There was a good supply of flowers and plants and all met with ready sale. Prices were up about double the normal market. Carnations ranged from 5 to 10 cents at wholesale; roses, from 6 to 20 cents; violets, $1 to $1.50 per hundred; valley, $3 to $5 per hundred; mignonette, $2 to $3 per hundred, and poinsettias, 25 to 40 cents each.

DETROIT.

Christmas trade in Detroit, north of Grand Circus park, among the florists has been the best they have ever had. M. G. Paterson's force was on until after midnight. W. B. Brown worked all night. Mr. Carey cleaned up his stock, as did James Taylor, both working overtime getting orders ready for Christmas day.

The Detroit Cut Flower House did the largest business it has ever had, owing to the push of the new manager, C. H. Maynard, who is known to the trade all over the country. One shipment of 2,500 Killarney roses came in the day before Christmas. An extra force was put on Tuesday and Wednesday.

M. M.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The Market.

More seasonable weather could not have prevailed for Christmas than we had in Buffalo: just enough snow to cover the ground, and not too cold. We could hardly expect the temperature above freezing, but it was so close to it that the usual inconvenience was done away with. Trade started early and kept on until the last. Every department seemed to increase, and the sale of plants was tremendous, especially the poinsettias. Everything was cleaned out. Begonias, cyclamens and azaleas were much in demand, and there was the usual call for ferns and palms. Cut stock sold well and at good prices, as all lines were scarce, with the exception of roses. Violets brought $3 per hundred and valley $2 per bunch. Decorations of every description were used more freely than usual this season, and while this means a lot of work at the last minute, it all makes big sales. The dwellings demanded a Christmas look this year, which is somewhat new, but no doubt brought about by the sight of the many stores, with the red and green appearance. Hardly a store of any description lacked in this respect.

Various Notes.

The long coming spirit of advertising struck Buffalo florists by storm this season, and the result was no less than five stores with attractive spaces. This no doubt helped everybody, for the ideas advanced made many more people wish for a plant as a Christmas gift, and in turn to send one.

One of the worst things which could happen to a flower store one week before Christmas is a fire. The Lenox Flower Shop, owned and managed by E. H. Altman, had this experience. The fire broke out early in the morning, from an overheated furnace, and while the fire was mostly confined to the basement, the smoke and water did enough damage to wreck the place completely. Fortunately, the building was left intact and Mr. Altman, ever ready for anything, managed affairs so effectively that he opened the next morning for business. Through the courtesy of some of the dealers his wires were answered promptly, and he is proud to say that this Christmas he enjoyed the best business of his career. In connection we will say that Miss Irma Altman's name has been added to the letter-head. R. A. S.

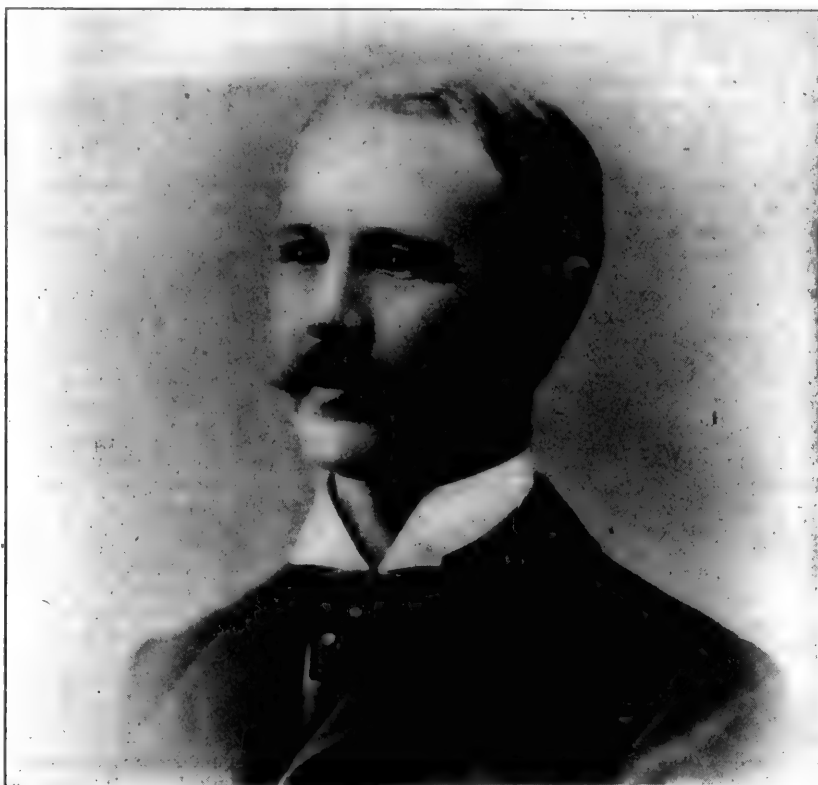

WATERLOO, IA.

The Market.

The weather here for the last few weeks has been the most ideal that we have ever experienced at this time of the year. Christmas day and the days before were rather warm, thus saving a great deal of time in the wrapping of plants and cut flowers. Saturday, December 28, was even warmer. All the growers are hoping that it will last a while longer, as it helps cut down on the coal bills.

Christmas in this locality is becoming more and more of a plant holiday. The high cost of cut flowers is thought to be the reason. The best sellers in the plant line are azaleas, cyclamens, primulas and poinsettias. Paper Whites in pots are also good sellers. Good poinsettias were scarce, but it appears

NEW S. A. F. DIRECTOR

Thomas F. Roland.

IN naming Thomas F. Roland, of Nahant, Mass., as a member of the board of directors of the Society of American Florists, President Farquhar has chosen one of New England's most skillful plantmen. There is none among the visitors to the National Flower Show in Boston last year who does not hold in pleasant memory the group of hard-wooded plants Mr. Roland staged there. Its like never has been seen in America. And his rose garden at the same exhibition was not less notable. Mr. Roland's establishment at Nahant has been the Mecca to which many pilgrim plantmen have journeyed for inspiration, and he recently has built a new plant at Revere, Mass., where he has one of the largest houses in New England, devoted to sweet peas. Mr. Roland is still a young man, full of energy, and will be a distinct acquisition to the list of active workers of the national society.

that the growers here were not the only ones who had poor stock.

Roses and carnations were plentiful and good with some of the growers, and just the reverse with others. Christmas greens of all kinds sold better than ever. Some thought that they had an oversupply a few days before Christmas, but found that they did not have enough to meet the demand.

Funeral work has been exceptionally heavy this fall and kept all surplus stock pretty well cleaned up.

Various Notes.

N. H. Loomis, who has space in one of the well-known dry goods stores, says he is well satisfied with the business that he has picked up since he came here several months ago. Christmas trade was exceptionally good.

Crittenden & Kemble, formerly Crittenden & Daniel, report that they had a fairly good Christmas and cleaned up almost everything.

Geo. Bancroft, of Jos. Bancroft & Son, Cedar Falls, seemed to be much pleased with the business they enjoyed at Christmas. While their roses were a bit off crop, they had a good cut of carnations. Christmas trees, holly and other green stock sold better than ever, he stated.

The New York Floral Co., a Greek concern, is no longer in existence. Chas. Sherwood bought it out January 1 and closed up the place.

Chas. Sherwood had an abundance of good stock except poinsettias. He went in heavily on these, but they did not turn out well. Mr. Sherwood states that while there was only a slight increase in business over last year, there were a great many more buyers, the majority of them wanting pot plants. Checks ranging in amounts from $2 to $10 were given to all the employees as Christmas gifts.

John Pegler, with the Sherman Nursery Co., Charles City, Ia., who was operated on at one of the local hospitals several weeks ago, last week returned to his home.

Harry Daniel, who sold out his interest in the firm of Crittenden & Daniel to Mr. Kemble, of Marshalltown, will spend the winter in Texas.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Executive Board Appointments.

President J. K. M. L. Farquhar has appointed August F. Poehlmann, of Morton Grove, Ill., and Thomas F. Roland, of Nahant, Mass., members of the board of directors to serve three years from January 1, 1913.

John Young, Sec'y.

The year of the S. A. F. ends December 31, and New Year's day J. K. M. L. Farquhar succeeded R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md., in the presidency, Theodore Wirth, of Minneapolis, becoming vice-president in place of A. F. Poehlmann. John Young, secretary, and W. F. Kasting, treasurer, were re-elected at the Chicago convention to serve through 1913. The board of directors for the new year, in addition to the officers, consists of E. Allan Peirce, Waltham, Mass.; Harry A. Bunyard, New York city; C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.; John A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.; R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md. The retiring members of the board were W. N. Rudd, Robert Craig and George Asmus.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

The week before Christmas the weather was somewhat cloudy, with rain the first day or two, but the week closed with the finest kind of shopping weather, which continued until the night of December 22. A fall of snow that night made it quite disagreeable for the day before Christmas, but at least gave us a white Christmas, and relieved the minds of those who are superstitious. This has been a good season so far, and Christmas proved no exception. One could hardly say it was phenomenal, but it certainly was satisfactory. Of course there were plenty of flowers, excepting carnations, and, at the price, there were about enough of them to satisfy all comers. Lilies were in rather unusual demand for Christmas and were on the short side, but one could hardly say that of anything else. Good roses were plentiful and, when that is the case, Beauties are not so much in demand if the prices are high. There was an unusual quantity of orchids used, and it seemed that the smallest dealers had demand for them, showing their increasing popularity. Violets were plentiful, and reasonable in price, cleaning up nicely. Yellow trumpet narcissi also seemed to be in demand, but these and yellow daisies are the only really yellow flowers we have. One might be safe in saying that, from the wholesaler's standpoint, it was a most satisfactory week. Sunday came in just right to help make it easy in getting out the stock.

The retailers, as usual, were nearly worked to death. The quantities of plants and made-up pots and baskets handled exceeded any previous Christmas. The plants and decorations were finer, and the increased sales caused some of the trade to claim that by pushing plants, the sale of flowers will be cut down and prices will be more reasonable. Our observations, to the contrary, tell us the greater effort made to push plants only increases the demand for cut flowers. All retailers report stock to have been good and the sales satisfactory.

NEW S. A. F. DIRECTOR

August F. Poehlmann.

BY appointing August F. Poehlmann as a director in the Society of American Florists, President Farquhar has kept in the executive body one of those most familiar with the society's affairs, for Mr. Poehlmann served last year as vice-president and was chairman of the executive committee of the Chicago convention organization. Mr. Poehlmann is well known as the treasurer of Poehlmann Bros. Co., and as an active worker in many trade societies. He only recently retired after two terms as president of the American Rose Society and his knowledge of trade organization work probably is as broad as that of any man in the business. Mr. Poehlmann was 43 years of age October 21, 1912, and has the energy to not only look after his own large business affairs but for many outside activities, including the presidency of his home town at Morton Grove, Ill.

Green goods were cleaned up in good shape. Some trees remained on hand here and there, but the general market was satisfactory, as also were the prices.

There was a large number of social functions scheduled from Christmas until after New Year's. The larger retail shops have not let down a minute since last week, and will not until after New Year's.

Various Notes.

Samuel McClements, of Randolph & McClements, is still confined to his home, which is certainly trying at a time when his house is crowded with decorations.

W. Puhlman, of Carnegie, was in the city last Saturday with his automobile, buying greens for his trade. He was accidentally struck by another machine and is still confined to the hospital, but hopes to get home in a day or two.

Geo. Crosby, well known among the decorators and now working for R. J. Daschbach, fell and broke his leg the week before Christmas.

John M. Blaha died Saturday, December 21, after a long illness. He was in his twenty-fourth year and was a son of Michael Blaha, the well known florist, of Aspinwall, Pa. He had been in the employ of his father, having had charge of the market stand for years.

W. A. Clarke, of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., celebrated his thirty-fifth Christmas in the business this year.

Paul Randolph, while in the city December 28, became ill and one of his customers had to arrange to get him home. Hoo-Hoo.

IT IS TO LAUGH.

A Chicago paper that has taken unto itself the title "The World's Greatest Newspaper," in its New Year's review of business prints the following in the form of a quoted interview, but does not divulge the identity of the Chicago wholesaler who ships cut flowers to Nova Scotia and San Diego:

"Chicago is the greatest flower market in the world. The European traveler and especially the man who signs 'New York' in big letters on the hotel register, although he probably hails from Newark, N. J., probably will try to argue when he hears this. But there's no argument possible. Cold, convincing figures are to be had and they bring any contemplated discussion to an abrupt ending.

"Sales of posies of all sorts by Chicago dealers in 1912 were the largest in the history of the business. Unless old Sol burns up all the flowers next summer or something unforeseen happens, 1913 will be even larger.

"The fact that the average Chicagoan is a greater lover of nature and nature's prettiest and most artistic product—the flower—than the dweller in New York and other great cities is directly responsible for the reputation we enjoy in the florists' trade. Added to the tremendous amount of buying by Chicagoans is the out-of-town trade, which has grown to enormous proportions.

"Chicago's fame as a flower center has spread so rapidly and so far that, instead of seeking trade, it has reached a point where many big orders have to go unfilled, the preference being given to local customers.

"For example, this concern today shipped flowers to Winnipeg, San Francisco, San Diego, El Paso, New Orleans, New York city, Boston, and to two points in Nova Scotia. I name merely the farthest points. There are hundreds of big cities between these where Chicago grown flowers will be used for holiday decorations.

"It may seem like sending coals to Newcastle to ship flowers to San Diego or New Orleans, but here are the orders to prove they actually have purchased them. New York at one time was the chief flower market of the western hemisphere, but Chicago took the lead several years ago and has no intention of taking second place again.

"We can get an order of flowers to any point in the country by express without their being wilted or damaged in any way. New York city, of course, cannot hope to compete with us west of the Alleghanies. Not content with taking first place, Chicago has reached out and secured much of the New York city market along the coast.

"Chicago has more retail florist stores than any other great city in the world. New York has comparatively few. It follows that Chicago has the most extensive greenhouses in the world. But in addition they are the best constructed and best equipped. Practically every commercial greenhouse in the city has equipment for the propagation of plants and flowers which never has been duplicated in any other city."

The Review prints the above for the smile it will contain for many of its readers, and also for the opportunity it affords of deprecating the misrepresentation of the trade in the papers read by the general public. There is enough of interest in the flower business to make misrepresentation or exaggeration unjustifiable.

CHRISTMAS BUSINESS

Wichita, Kan.—C. F. Mueller says that for Christmas he sent letters and telegrams to ten of the most prominent florists in the country ordering carnations, but that only one promised to send him any, and in that case only a part of his order.

New Albany, Ind.—William Julius says the Christmas trade was the best in years, carnations realizing better prices than usual, but roses also selling well. There was a good business in pot plants, but he was able to push carnations and roses, as he had a fine crop of both. The sale of Christmas greens was the best ever.

Newburyport, Mass.—C. J. McGregor says every flower in the city was sold before Christmas evening, many funeral orders creating an unforeseen demand. A driving snow, December 24, made delivery difficult, but Christmas day was perfect. Two or three days of zero weather will clean up every pound of coal in the city, as the dealers are now unable to supply fuel in the quantity ordered.

Traverse City, Mich.—Frank M. Paine says Christmas trade was fairly good, with the weather perfect for delivery. Both carnations and roses brought good prices, $1 to $1.25 for carnations other than red, and $2 to $2.50 for the best roses. There was a noticeable increase in the demand for potted plants, particularly primroses and cyclamens. Considerable shipping business was done to surrounding towns.

Hutchinson, Kan.—John Stamm is one of the leading business men of the city; he has been a florist here for over fifteen years. Starting with a small greenhouse, he now does a large local business and ships many orders to surrounding towns. Mrs. Stamm is his "right-hand man."

NEWS, NOTES, AND COMMENTS

Shepardsville, Mich.—Claud L. Going, of this town, has completed the erection of his greenhouse on East Grand River street, in Williamston, Mich. He expects to remain in Shepardsville, however, until spring.

Valparaiso, Ind.—A. Londenbergs & Son are getting ready to build three new houses, 34x120, early in the spring. They have at present about 10,000 feet of glass here, and about 12,000 feet at their place at Hobart, Ind.

Brampton, Ont.—Mark Henderson, proprietor of the greenhouses at the south end of the town, has been approached by many who wish to see him elected on this year's town council, and he probably will allow himself to be nominated.

Oshkosh, Wis.—Fugleberg & Flister have no complaint to make with regard to the amount of business, but they have had some difficulty recently in obtaining the needed stock. The output of their greenhouses is all sold in the local market and is not nearly sufficient to meet the demand.

Portland, Me.—Dyer's, Inc., will shortly move across the street, where a building is being remodeled to give more than twice the present frontage and other improved facilities. The president of the corporation is Henry G. Beyer, Jr., and the treasurer is Albert W. Dyer, who has been many years in the business.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The Dwelle-Kaiser Co. has bought the plant of the Jewett Refrigerator Co., which is to be materially improved and made into an up-to-date jobbing and manufacturing warehouse for the glass and paint business. It will afford the company greatly increased space and an opportunity for the extension of its business.

Brookings, S. D.—N. E. Hansen, of this city, who is secretary of the South Dakota State Horticultural Society, announces that the twenty-fourth annual meeting of the society will be held in Redfield, S. D., January 21 to 23, 1913. He states that a school of practical instruction in fruit tree propagation and pruning will be a part of the daily program. Mr. Hansen is connected with the South Dakota Experiment Station.

Phoenix, Ariz.—Richard Altman, who for the last year has had charge of the flower department in Hamburger's store, Los Angeles, has opened a flower store on Center street, opposite the postoffice, in this city. The stock to be handled by him will be shipped from Los Angeles. A short time ago, when the Los Angeles Times celebrated the opening of its new building, Mr. Altman had charge of the decorations. He has had more than twenty years' experience in the trade.

Henderson, Minn.—Miss Mathilda Kemp is having a large greenhouse erected.

Racine, Wis.—The Flower Shop is the name of a new store opened by Joe Rehl, at 617 Main street, just above the postoffice. The store will be in charge of C. L. Achenbach, from Chicago.

Buffalo, N. Y.—W. J. Smith, on East street, has just completed a new store which is the finest in the district, if not as good as any in the city. Mr. Smith believes in going ahead of the community and letting the community catch up with him.

Dubuque, Ia.—Fred Ullman, until recently in business at Strawberry Point, Ia., is now proprietor of the greenhouses formerly conducted here by G. A. Heyne. Mr. Ullman has also removed his Strawberry Point greenhouses to this city and will rebuild them in connection with the Heyne houses.

New Galilee, Pa.—August Pajonk, formerly with Fred Burki on Crystal Farm, at Gibsonsia, Pa., is now with the W. F. Lauch Floral Co., in this town.

Marysville, Kan.—H. R. Fisher reports business better than ever this season. He cleaned up all his mums in fine shape and carnations now are blooming freely and selling well.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y.—The long established business of T. J. Totten has been turned into a stock company by incorporation under the state law as T. J. Totten, Inc., capital $10,000. The incorporators are Thomas J. Totten, William J. Totten and Andrew J. Dunleavey.

Tampa, Fla.—Louis Lecluse, on Bayshore boulevard, has had plenty of business recently, with unusually favorable weather. He reports that the Knull Floral Co., in Court Arcade, has recently made some important improvements in its store and has a prosperous trade.

Albany, N. Y.—The Albany Cut Flower Exchange has been incorporated, with a capital of $25,000, to deal in flowers and plants at wholesale. The incorporators are P. Welch, of Boston; E. P. Tracey and T. F. Tracey, of this city. The company has certified that $17,000 of the capital has been paid in, $5,000 in cash and $12,000 in property.

Ottawa, Kan.—A recent fire at the Lester Greenhouses caused a loss that was estimated at $3,000. The building occupied by the workroom and potting room was destroyed, with a large stock of supplies. The new office, built last summer, was damaged by smoke and water. One end of a rose house and of two carnation houses was also burned.

San Benito, Tex.—At the recent two-day meeting of the Rio Grande Horticultural Society, held here, the principal addresses were delivered by members of the trade and were of a thoroughly practical character. Among the speakers were: Eltweed Pomeroy, of Donna, president of the society; J. H. Arbenz, of Sarita, vice-president of the society; A. L. Stanford, of Lyford, and J. George Bowyer, owner of the San Benito Semi-tropical Nursery.

Albion, N. Y.—The Burt Olney Canning Co. has devoted five greenhouses here, each 30x150, to the growing of flowers, with E. H. Kipp as superintendent. The growing is under the efficient management of Percy Rogers, who has had a life experience in such work, in this country and abroad. These houses are stocked principally with roses, though one house was used for chrysanthemums. The company also has four houses at Medina, in which carnations and sweet peas are grown. The blooms are shipped to Rochester and Buffalo.

Pensacola, Fla.—At an early hour December 21 fire destroyed the house occupied by Andrew Hauge, manager of the San Carlos Greenery, located north of this city, on the hard road between Goulding and Brent. A considerable portion of the greenhouse and a number of plants, as well as all of the household furniture of the manager, were destroyed and Mr. Hauge and his wife barely escaped being burned to death. This was a comparatively new business and the manager said that he had been meeting with unexpected encouragement and was just getting the business well established when this fire occurred.

The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.THE postoffice department has issued the necessary orders to make the several plant quarantines apply to parcels in the mails the same as to those handled by other transportation agencies.THE more one studies the parcel post system that went into operation January 1 the less satisfactory it appears to be.
Apparently there will be much confusion and the mail service is likely to be nowhere near so good as usual for some time to come.THERE are a lot of funny little quirks to the parcel post system that went into operation yesterday. For instance, if an advertiser wishes to mail an electrotype to The Review he must now take it to the postoffice to mail or, if it goes into a street box, put letter postage on it.THE trade at large approves The Review's policy of the same price to everyone for the same service. When a publication cuts prices, prints free ads, overruns an order, donates circulars or half-tones, offers write-ups or other "inducements," it generally is taken as a confession of weakness in circulation, and knowing advertisers do not care to use such a paper on any terms. Also, when any cut in price is offered it leads to the suspicion that perhaps it is not, after all, as great a concession as is given to others.

HORTICULTURAL LECTURES.

The program of the annual winter course of lectures on subjects of horticultural interest has been announced by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The lectures are free and will be given at Horticultural hall, Boston, on Saturday afternoons at 2 o'clock.
An interesting feature of the lectures is the opportunity afforded for a general discussion of the subjects treated.

The program is as follows:

January 11—"Planting Fruit Trees Propagated from Strains of Known Worth," by Samuel Fraser, Genesee, N. Y.February 1—"Factors Influencing the Forma-

CHRISTMAS BUSINESS.

Summing up the Christmas trade reports in this issue of The Review, which covers all the principal flower-selling centers from the Atlantic to the Pacific, it is apparent that the rank and file of the trade have had a banner holiday business. Along the eastern edge of the country, and extending inland to eastern Ohio, heavy snow fell when the holiday rush was at its height, in many instances seriously impeding traffic and cutting a big hole into business. Except for the cities where the snow deterred the shoppers and made deliveries difficult, the rest of the country appears to have been favored with exceptionally good weather; indeed, some of the correspondents remark that weather conditions were more like Easter than Christmas. This, no doubt, added largely to the volume of business.Practically everywhere plants were featured, but one correspondent, himself interested in the cut flower department of the business, comments truthfully that the more the retailers feature plants, the more cut flowers are sold. Here and there small lots of plants failed to sell, but this must have been due to special causes, as, generally speaking, a clean sweep was made. By and large, there were enough cut flowers so that all demands could be met. Rose crops were heavy everywhere, for the growers can time the varieties now forced in quantity with sufficient accuracy to get their crops approximately when they want them. Carnations appear to be generally backward this season, but the supply proved larger than anyone anticipated, though readily cleaned up. All the lesser items in cut flowers appear to have been generally in good supply and to have sold well.The business in Christmas greens easily set a new record. Where bouquet green roping is less popular than formerly, holly wreaths sell better than ever.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Unfortunately, writing of the Christmas business on the last day of the year, it is not possible to be so enthusiastic as was the case when writing amid the rush of Christmas trade. The fact is that it was more or less the old story over again. There was an enormous volume of business, at least equaling and probably eclipsing the best records of the past, but there was a decided slump Christmas eve and Christmas morning. The wholesalers also have been hard pressed to explain to their customers why the Killarneys were so badly off color. Up to a few days before Christmas the roses were excellent. Then there came a succession of dark days and the color faded.
Scarcely was the Christmas crop made when the weather cleared, and a few days of bright sun put the pink into the petals again. The color was fine just before the holidays, and it became fine immediately the big demand was satisfied, but during the time of highest prices the roses were too pale to please. The protests that followed proved how particular the people are when they pay the fancy prices that prevail at a holiday. Roses sold fairly well until after the shipping orders

To Our Friends and Patrons: Greeting!

STANDING at the opening of a New Year, it seems appropriate to devote this advertisement to an expression of appreciation of the patronage given us by the buyers of Cut Flowers during 1912, and of the friendly words and acts of encouragement of those not buyers. It has been our good fortune to do, in 1912, much the largest business in our history—and it has been our pleasure to have gained many good friends; indeed, we have come to know what it means to be “advertised by our friends.”

It has been our aim to develop here the most dependable source of Cut Flower supply in the United States. We have sought quality first, knowing that quantity would promptly follow. We have aimed to handle every flower so carefully that it would go out in even better condition than it came in, and we have steadily maintained our facilities a step in advance of the needs of the business.

This policy, coupled with an unfaltering determination to give everyone absolutely honorable treatment, has brought an increase in business far greater than we anticipated at the time we laid down the rules on which this house has been conducted—and we are truly grateful.

We pledge ourselves now to spare no effort to maintain the reputation we have gained—for good stock, modern methods and fair dealing. We shall not sell off our good name. We mean to keep the place we have gained—to push forward along the same lines as in the past.

were out, when there proved to be too many for the city demand. Prices receded sharply. Beauties did better. The supply was well cleaned up, even the off-grade stock selling at good prices.

The carnation shortage proved not nearly so pronounced as had generally been predicted. No one had booked orders with the usual freedom, and some dealers found it difficult to fill the orders taken, but others were able to meet all demands at the prices and on Christmas eve carnations, as well as roses, became an oversupply; there are reports of clean-up sales Christmas day at $2 to $3 per hundred for first-class stock. Of course, white suffered the worst.

Violets sold well for Christmas, but did not clean up until concessions were offered. Then, since shipments following Christmas were light, the market became stronger than it had been for the holiday itself. Poinsettias did not sell so well as a few years ago. Shipments of cattleyas from the east broke the local market. Good mignonette was soft. Sweet peas cleaned up well. There was an abundance of valley and of lilies, also Paper Whites, Romans and short-stemmed tulips. Stevia sold well. Boxwood was scarce and some of those holding good stock were able to get much better prices than had previously prevailed.

There was no special demand following Christmas, but the way the buyers came back December 26 indicated that the retail trade had been good. Business steadily gathered volume until the opening of the present week, the last two days of the year, found the market enjoying an excellent New Year's demand, with an abundance of stock. Rose crops are on the down grade, but carnations are coming stronger every day. The weather has been bright and the stock is fine.

Various Notes.

It could not have been Santa Claus who visited the home of John Poehlmann Christmas eve, as entrance was had through a window instead of down the chimney and, far from filling stockings with gifts, the upper floors were ransacked and jewelry to the value of nearly $1,400 taken. The thieves worked while the family were at dinner. Mr. Poehlmann was at the store, filling Christmas orders.

Aaron T. Pyfer says it was the best Christmas the Chicago Carnation Co. has ever had. The cut was within 1,800 flowers of last year and the average price more than made up the difference. To celebrate the New Year Peter Olsem, at the Joliet greenhouses, shipped the first 20,000 cuttings of The Herald.

According to the real estate columns of the daily papers, Marshall Field & Co. will begin the demolition of the Trude and Le Moyne buildings May 1, 1913. It is in the latter building that Lubliner & Trinz have their store, with a 10-year lease drawing toward a close.

John P. Degnan is rapidly closing up the work on the spring catalogue of Winterson's Seed Store. The book will be sixteen pages larger than heretofore. Perennials will be featured.

O. Johnson says it is many weeks since he has "seen" the greenhouses of his concern, the Batavia Greenhouse Co., though he lives close by. He leaves home before daylight and does not reach Batavia again until long after dark.

C. W. McKellar reports that Paul M. Palez, well known in this market, received as a Christmas present an election as alderman at Little Rock by a large majority.

E. E. Pieser says Kennicott Bros. Co. received, December 27, 156 cases of boxwood that were shipped to be in time for the Christmas trade. He thinks it will be good property just the same.

In the florists' supplies department the A. L. Randall Co. has been busy with inventory since Christmas. The offices are being moved from the rear of the second floor to the front of the third floor, where more room will be available. The space formerly occupied will be added to the salesroom for supplies, where it has been badly needed, especially just before Christmas.

Wendland & Keimel, Elmhurst, are said to have cut 52,000 roses for Christmas.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., reports as one of the curious features of the Christmas business that, while everything else was selling better than usual, there was no special demand for the new yellow roses. They sold well enough when the customers' attention was drawn to them, but were not asked for.

Peter Reinberg, as is his custom, spent the days before Christmas in the store, watching the disposition of the holiday cuts and greeting the trade. He said he never before had cut so many roses in a week and at first was in doubt about their cleaning up, but Tim Matchen says there was nothing left at closing time Christmas day.

It is said the Fleischman Floral Co., as one item, used 3,000 Beauties for Christmas.

Miss L. A. Tonner leaves January 7 for a trip to her pecan plantation at Baconton, Ga.

E. E. Pieser was born New Year's day, 1863. Consequently he completed his half century yesterday. The celebration is today.

August Poehlmann, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., says the cut flower department never faced a demand at Christmas time like the one experienced during 1912 and that it was impossible to fill all the calls that were received in the last stages of the rush. The same was true of the plant department, blooming varieties being cleaned up early.

William Kidwell says the retail Christmas trade was never better than it was in 1912 and it was necessary for his store staff to work into the wee hours of the morning in order to take care of the rush deliveries. Plants found an excellent market at the Forty-third street store and cleaned out entirely.

W. E. Lynch, of A. L. Vaughan & Co., thinks there was less pickled stock on the market during the holidays this year than for a number of seasons. Owing to the good prices obtainable previous to the first rush, there was hardly any incentive for the growers to hold their cuts.

Charles Erne, of Erne & Klingel, is of the opinion that Killarneys were of better grade and brought better prices than in other holiday seasons, although some were lacking in color.

John F. Kidwell, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, says they had no trouble with Christmas shipments, although some went to points where adverse weather conditions made it difficult to get the flowers through in the best of shape.

Henry Wittbold had two big decorating jobs for New Year's, one being at the Chicago Athletic Club and the other at the Grand Pacific hotel.

Kyle & Foerster say the shipping trade for the holidays was above what they expected.

J. A. Budlong's store staff found plenty to do during the holidays and more shipping orders were taken care of than ever before, according to Phil Schupp.

Miss Pauline Anderson, who was a member of the office force of A. Henderson & Co., is now located with Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Morton Grove, where her father is in charge of the plant department.

With the arrival of 1913 W. N. Rudd completed three years' service on the board of directors of the S. A. F. George Asmus completed his year on the board as junior ex-president. Chicago does not cease to be represented among the directors, however, as the incoming president has appointed August Poehlmann a member to serve until January 1, 1916.

The notice of the Florists' Club's meeting received in the New Year's mail contained an error. The date is not January 2, but January 9, at the Union. President Foley will step out and President-elect French will step in.

The Examiner December 31 contained a three-column cut of Miss Virginia Poehlmann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August Poehlmann, showing her in the fancy dancing costume in which she appeared as one of the entertainers at the children's party at the Edgewater Country Club. Miss Poehlmann, besides having a mum named for her, has danced for the entertainment of the S. A. F. at several convention social affairs.

W. J. Smyth spent the holidays with his hip in a plaster cast. His address will be St. Luke's Hospital for at least another month, but he thinks he is getting along as well as could be expected.

shoppers. By noon hundreds left the stores disappointed because everything was sold out. This can be said especially of red and pink carnations and the same colors of roses, azaleas and cyclamens. Many florists could have sold several hundred additional roses and carnations. The magic change from a gloomy business outlook to the record breaking rush within twenty-four hours was pleasing to the florists.

The Market.

In most cases business was pronounced equal to last year, and in some cases better. It was noticeable that the better class of stock was in demand this year. In plants, the higher priced arrangements and plant baskets were in demand. In cut flowers roses were well in the lead. Roses were about equal to the demand, the better grades bringing from $3 to $5 per dozen. American Beauties were to be had at from $12 to $24 per dozen. Carnations were hardly equal to the demand at from $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen. Lily of the valley, sweet peas and orchids with valley were in good demand for corsages. Poinsettias had a ready call at from $3 to $9 per dozen. Stevia and Paper Whites were to be had in almost any quantity.

Various Notes.

Albert G. Pittet has been cutting quantities of his new seedling peas. This new one is popular with the store men and Mr. Pittet could dispose of an unlimited quantity of them.

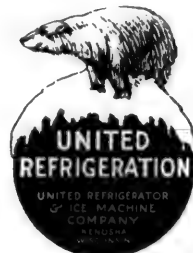

The Hill-Heller Co. reports a most satisfactory Christmas trade. Mr. Kester deserves a great deal of credit for the numerous tastily arranged baskets and novelties which he has on display.

George Wiegand leaves this week for Florida. He says that he is going to forget that he ever was in the florists' business, for a month, anyway.

John Rieman says that his Christmas business was fully as good as heretofore.

The Pahud Floral Co. says that this was the best Christmas it has ever had. The fine weather brought the people out to the cemetery by the hundreds. This concern had a fine cut of carnations out of its new house, having enough cut blooms for its own trade and quite a few to wholesale.

A. Wiegand & Sons were well satisfied with their Christmas business this year. This firm had an unusually fine stock of blooming plants, all of which were sold. They also had a good cut of orchids. A shipment of 6,000 violets to

They will keep fresh in the absolutely even atmosphere produced by a Brunswick Refrigerating and Ice-Making Plant.

You can maintain just the degree of humidity you require and your stock will be kept in condition to command the best prices. A Brunswick makes it possible to store lily bulbs, valley pips, etc., on the place.

The advantage to the grower of a Brunswick lies more in the improved condition of his stock than in the saving in cost, yet a Brunswick can be run at one-third less expense than an ice-cooling system.

BRUNSWICK Refrigerating and Ice-Making Plant

The convenience and economy of a Brunswick plant will be especially appreciated by retail florists. Pennock Bros., Philadelphia, saved nearly $200 a year by substituting a Brunswick for their old ice-cooling system.

Brunswick plants are simple, compact, easily and economically operated and maintained. They cut out the expense and nuisance of ice. Every plant is designed for the place in which it is to be located and is absolutely guaranteed.

The Christmas Market.

It was a white Christmas. It was also the best Christmas that the cut flower market has ever experienced. Perfect weather prevailed up to the night of December 23, when a heavy snow storm set in that raged for twelve hours, checking shopping, impeding transportation and causing the only cloud on the general result. The volume of business was larger than ever before, a remarkable fact when the great increase in the holiday plant business is considered. The out-of-town orders occupied the night of December 21, all day Sunday, December 22, and part of the following day. The local demand was strong through December 23, making that day an extremely busy one. The snow storm checked the demand December 24, which was rather dull until the evening, when there was some activity. There was little business done on Christmas day. The storm caused some delay in express deliveries, local points suffering much more than through shipments. It also greatly hampered retail deliveries—the motor trucks proved in many cases slower and less reliable than wagons. Some stock was ruined and some was held up until too late. The storm also played havoc with the business of the cemetery florists, who were unable to dispose of their stock of designs, greens and flowers, their customers not venturing out with three inches of snow on the ground.

Roses formed one-half in value of the cut flowers marketed at Christmas. Beauties led, the price ranging from $12 per dozen to $85 per hundred for the specials. Extras brought $75 per hundred, while mediums brought from $6 to $7.50 per dozen, good flowers in these grades realizing unusually good prices. Beauties were in brisk demand throughout the four days. Many were shipped out of the city, some to be returned to satisfy orders here. The supply of Richmond was the heaviest on record, yet the supply was all consumed. A few fancies brought $35, $40 and $50 per hundred; most of the fine stock brought $20 and $25 per hundred and the bulk of the medium and short grades were sold from $15 to $8 per hundred. Killarney was offered in larger quantity than any other rose. A few fancies realized from $25 to $35 per hundred, but most of the stock sold at from $6 to $20. The strength of the demand for Killarney was increased by the carnation shortage. Though the supply of White Killarney was not large, as nobody crops for Christmas, they accumulated on the last two days. My Maryland was inclined to be off color and did not sell so well as Killarney. Sunburst led the novelties; 25-cent stock was surprisingly short-stemmed when compared with Killarney.

Carnations were in short supply until December 24. Prices reached $16 per hundred for fancy red, $12 per hundred for the Wards, and so on down to $8 for well grown stock. On the day before Christmas the growers sent in flowers that would have brought fine prices earlier and overstocked the market, in the absence of demand. White of course suffered most.

Violets were in good demand at from $1 to $1.75 per hundred. Hudson river Marie Louise continued favorites for shipping, but Lady Campbell and fancy singles were preferred in the city.

TWO NEW ROSES EVERY GROWER WILL WANT NEXT YEAR

Irish Fire Flame

The dainty new Single Rose, trimmest and sweetest little bud ever seen—and well named as to its lovely color. A Dickson seedling of strong, vigorous growth, very free, particularly during the winter; color, fiery crimson, shading to a rich orange salmon at the base; foliage a dark green, reverse side of leaf deep bronze, a distinct novelty; nothing to compare with it; a new departure in roses, beautiful and charming; a favorite wherever shown.

Mrs. Charles Russell

A new American pedigree seedling. Of American Beauty size and fragrance; color a lighter cerise that does not fade to blue, but to a lighter rose as the flowers age; a strong, vigorous grower; good heavy stems; flowers carried erect; no weak necks; no blind wood like Beauty; very prolific, remarkably so, considering its size. As tested in the various shows over the country this fall, it has proven a wonderful keeper and established itself at once as a rose of unusual merit, creating a sensation wherever shown, and attracting not only the commercial man, but the public as well.

Large orders were filled at $125 for 10,000. The snow storm seriously curtailed the demand for this flower. Valley sold well at $4 per hundred. Catleyas moved freely at $50, $60 and $75 per hundred, usually ungraded except at the last named figure. Gardenias were not overplentiful. There was a good demand. Prices ranged from $3 to $6 per dozen. Bouvardia brought $5 to $6; mignonette, $6 to $10; sweet peas, $1 to $1.50; Paper Whites, $3; Trumpet Major, $4 to $5; Romans, $2 to $3; daisies, $1.50 to $2, and stevia,

$1. There was some activity in poinsettias as the holiday approached; $3 per dozen was the usual price. White lilac was popular at $1.50 per bunch and snapdragon at $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen. Asparagus and smilax were little used.

Business was excellent on the day after Christmas, indicating that there was little stock left in the hands of the buyers. Prices fell slowly. There was a brisk demand for white flowers for funeral work, which helped clear up the only Christmas oversupply.

Violets, in the absence of receipts unwisely held back, maintained their Christmas price, with little trading. The heavier shipments of carnations indicate that the plants are coming into crop. While business continues to decrease, the prospects for New Year's are excellent, although there are few advance orders.

Christmas Trade.

The volume of business done this Christmas was at least as good as last year, if not better, and the same trouble as last year was to be contended with, namely, the scarcity of stock. Carnations were the greatest problem. Not only were they scarce, but extremely high-priced, selling in many places for $2 and $2.50 per dozen, a much higher price than has ever been charged here before. Scarce as they were, however, the quality was good. The rose supply, though a little heavier than that of carnations, was unequal to the demand and also brought fine prices. Poinsettias, both cut and in pots, sold at a good price and none were left over. Everything along the cut flower line sold well, regardless of quality. Violets, valley, orchids, sweet peas and Romans were in popular demand for the Christmas corsage. Yellow and white narcissi and stevias came in well for bouquet work. Easter lilies were scarce, but, fortunately, there was but little demand for them.

Speaking of pot plants, there was a vast improvement in demand along this line. Though most of the florists had an abundant supply of azaleas and Begonia Glory of Cincinnati, these were all sold or engaged several days before Christmas, and many more could have been disposed of. Rhododendrons easily brought $10 each, while pot poinsettias sold at an extravagant price. The smaller plants, such as, cyclamens, cinerarias, primroses, etc., also brought good prices. Fancy baskets and hampers of assorted plants were popular and sold readily. Other profitable items were wreaths and bouquets for cemetery use, made of red ruscus, boxwood, winter berries and immortelles. The florists did not realize so much on holly this year, as so many outsiders were handling it and selling at low prices. Red ruscus, sold in loose bunches, was used extensively for house decorations and its sales far exceeded those of any previous year.

The outlook for New Year's day thus far is encouraging.

Various Notes.

Leo Asher has been on the sick list since the Christmas rush.

Julius Hendrichs, who has been in the east for the last six weeks, came home to spend Christmas with his mother, Mrs. Bertha Hendrichs.

The Heiss Co. is well pleased with the Christmas trade. The firm made a clean sweep on stock, both cut flowers and pot plants.

Mrs. L. D. Johnson tells us that her holiday trade surpassed all expectations.

BATAVIA, N. Y.

The Market.

The weather, Christmas day and the day after, was all that could be desired, the weather man giving us all the sun possible. Christmas trade was satisfactory to everyone and a large quantity of cut flowers and pot plants were disposed of. Carnations, which for some time have been scarce, are now doing better in both quality and quantity.

Various Notes.

Gustave Noack and L. C. Stroh & Sons report the sale of cut flowers and potted plants to have been far ahead of any previous season. Mr. Noack has some choice calla lilies coming into bloom. This has always been a specialty of his and he has had great success. Business has been quite brisk with him, being about all he can handle, in the line of weddings, funerals, etc.

The Market.

Real winter weather set in just before Christmas, and a severe snow storm December 24 interfered somewhat with business, especially with the deliveries. Trade in general was good. Notwithstanding the fact that the Consumers' League had urged the public to shop early, the rush in the flower stores was limited to the last three days and few advance orders had been placed. Roses were rather scarce and there were few red flowers of any kind, with the exception of poinsettias. There was an abundance of such carnations as White Wonder, Pink Delight, Ward, May Day, Benora, etc., but red carnations were extremely scarce. Violets were good. Orchids and valley were fine and sold well. There were few Romans or narcissi to be had. American Beauties were high in price and consequently few were sold.

Plants of all kinds sold well, especially poinsettias, heather, begonias, azaleas, rhododendrons, baby ramblers, cyclamens and Boston ferns. Partridge berry globes were in great demand. Christmas baskets filled with boxwood, elder berries, statice, heather and ruscus had a large sale.

Various Notes.

William Schlatter & Son report a big Christmas trade. Baskets of statice, sweet peas and mignonette were among their leading novelties.

Miss Barker had some bouquets for a Christmas wedding.

Osterman & Steele did a big business. They had some fine box balls and statice baskets. Several decorations were booked for the holidays.

Mark Aitken did an artistic decoration at the home of Robert Knight, on Temple street, for a Christmas reception. It consisted of laurel roping, holly, southern smilax, poinsettias and bells, and was quite elaborate. Holiday trade was excellent at the store. Baby ramblers, which were unusually fine, were sold in great quantities.

T. F. Sheehan had an annex for the holidays and says that his business was beyond his expectations. He decorated nine churches for Christmas.

The Flower Mart did a fair business for Christmas.

N. F. Higgins has some good snapdragons, Harrisii, lilies and cattleyas on sale. For the holidays he had some attractive birch bark baskets, filled with assorted crotons, which found a ready sale. His store decorations were good. A birch bark church, covered with mosses and lichens, added to his interior decorations.

Charles Eisele was ill last week.

L. D. Robinson, on Main street, says that business has been good with him. He has some excellent daffodils, Golden Spur and Campenelle, the earliest he has ever cut.

Meacham & Hassell's holiday trade was fine. Azaleas and poinsettias sold best of all. "We had all we could do," Mr. Hassell said.

Canary birds and goldfish were sold in large numbers during the holidays.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., shipped some good Milady and Killarney roses to this city for the holiday trade.

Christmas Trade.

With a temperature of 52 degrees December 25, it was more like Easter than Christmas. Everybody in the trade reports a more than satisfactory business. These reports come from florists in all sections of the city, and from these we can safely say that this Christmas was the best on record. From the looks of the show houses of the florists in the west end and along Grand avenue, there must have been a record sale in plants. The weather could not have been improved on for the delivery of plants, and saved much time and labor.

Poinsettias, both plants and cut, were much in evidence in the windows of the retailers; also arrangements of short plants in pans dressed in red were quick sellers. Azaleas led among large plants. These were somewhat scarce this year. Arrangements of mixed plants in baskets went well.

The leading florists say they pushed plants, as cut stock was entirely too high this year.

As to cut stock, the wholesale prices held up to Christmas morning and then broke, owing to the many unlooked for consignments that came in. The day closed with a lot of stock on hand.

The market this week has been alive with stock of almost everything in season and job-lot sales prevailed at some of the markets. Roses are plentiful and $10 buys the extra fancy stock in hundred lots. Carnations, too, are coming in heavily and are offered at low prices, at $5 for the extra fancy. Violets are down to $1 per hundred again. These sold well all through Christmas week. All other stock, such as Romans, Paper Whites, valley, Easter lilies and callas, is more than enough for the demand.

Not so much is expected for New Year's among the trade; still, some of the large up-town florists say they have a considerable number of orders booked ahead for New Year's day delivery, and some report quite a few decorations for New Year's eve, at both hotels and private houses, at which a lot of cut flowers will be used.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

The Christmas business seemed to be far in excess of that of any other year, at least with some of the florists. The weather was fine December 24 and 25. December 23, there was a snow storm, but it did not last long. The store people and others worked from early Monday morning till Christmas night without much rest or much attention to meals and they surely were a tired looking bunch, but happy.

All kinds of flowers and plants went fast and a great quantity of holly was sold, made into wreaths or loose. A noticeable fact was the large demand for American Beauties, a much larger demand than at any other Christmas, and the call was for long stems. The Killarneys and My Maryland were fine. Carnations were good and about equal to the demand. Twenty-six weddings and some funeral work helped to clean up the odds and ends.

several salespeople as extra help and all were kept busy from Monday till Wednesday night. They had an immense lot of plants and flowers of all kinds, to suit every possible customer. The roses and carnations were fine. The demand for Beauties was larger than ever and they brought a high price.

Julius Niednagel & Sons hardly ate or slept for forty-eight hours. Business was far greater than at any other Christmas. They had large cuts of roses, carnations and all other flowers, and still did not have enough. Plants were in great demand and the variety was good. The auto delivery came in mighty handy and, being much faster than horse delivery, proved its value.

C. L. Niednagel had large cuts of Killarney, My Maryland and Beauties—about 400 of the latter. Most of his cut was handled by the other place to fine advantage.

J. C. Elspermann did a big business and had a large supply of plants and carnations, but was forced to buy, also. His carnations were fine and he cut lots of them. He used about twenty cases of holly.

Miss Nellie Goodge did her usual large business with holly, making lots of wreaths and sending out boys with Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

RALPH M. WARD, of New York, spent Christmas at Lake Tohopekaliga, Kissimmee, Fla.

CHARLES N. PAGE, Des Moines, spent the holidays with Mrs. Page and their three children, who are wintering at San Diego, Cal.

THE German seeds have been coming in slowly for weeks, but the boats that have reached New York in the last week of the year have brought heavy shipments.

SEVEN-TOP turnip in Tennessee has had a favorable season thus far, according to McKay, Reece & Co., who have a considerable acreage near Nashville.

THE December 12 list of Kelway & Son, Langport, England, which came to hand December 27, is interesting as affording an idea of the British notion of how prices for 1913 crop compare with those for present delivery.

DELIVERIES of beans are turning out as bad as anyone feared. One house reports that eighty-five per cent is the highest delivery it has been assured on any variety, while on some sorts the delivery has been as low as ten per cent.

SAYS W. Atlee Burpee in a letter agent the parcel post: "To me it seems it would take a Philadelphia lawyer to handle this zone system and personally I am glad indeed that seeds are exempted from this annoyance." And Mr. Burpee is absolutely right, as usual.

THE Rudy-Patrick Seed Co. has removed to 1306-08 West Eighth street, where there will be much more space for the transaction of business and much better switching facilities than at the former location. The company is also installing additional cleaning machinery and other equipments.

BIDS for the government seed order for the congressional free distribution of 1914 will be opened at Washington January 7. As usual, the order is subject to Congress making the customary appropriation. Copies of the specifications have been in the hands of the trade for some time. The contracts will call for about 50,000 pounds of flower seeds and 1,200,000 pounds of vegetable seeds, with small quantities of other items.

MARSHALL HUMPHREY, who has been manager for the Arizona Seed Co., at Phoenix, Ariz., since it was established a year and a half ago, is now manager of the store of the Sturges Hay & Grain Co., at 125 East Jefferson street, Phoenix. He is succeeded at the office of the Arizona Seed Co. by F. D. Rennison. Under Mr. Humphrey's management, the Sturges Hay & Grain Co. will engage in the seed and poultry supply business on an extensive scale.

HORSESHOE BRAND LILIUM FORMOSUM

From the islands south of Japan. These bulbs vary in quality and owing to the mixture of varieties, do not flower uniformly. They are much earlier, however, than other Lily varieties, and are especially recommended for florists who do not have much heat. The Horseshoe Brand Formosas will contain as little mixture as possible in 1913, and will be very carefully graded. They are practically free from disease.

SENTIMENT in business seldom pays dividends. To buy bulbs for sentimental reasons is the poorest kind of business judgment. When you buy Lily Bulbs you are buying something which, by your efforts, will net you an income—provided you buy right. Practically all bulbs have value only as they offer present or prospective income—Lily Bulbs being chiefly prospective as to income. As a security they may be classed with the most risky, since the profit derived from them depends upon their flowering capacity, under the supervision of various growers, and the marketing of the blooms. The ratio of profit is of course commensurate with the risk involved; large risk—large profit if successful. Therefore isn't it most important to buy only the very best bulbs—Horseshoe Brand Giganteum—and minimize the risk? It is by far the best and safest brand as a basis for such an investment because the general average of Horseshoe Brand Giganteum is so far above any other that the risk is at a minimum. They cost more per bulb to produce than most brands and the general opinion is the price is higher as a natural consequence. The fact is, however, they cost no more than inferior brands. This is because of the large volume of business done in the most direct way with the consumer under favorable conditions existing in Japan. Horseshoe Brand Giganteum are produced by about forty-five experienced growers under the best conditions possible—absolutely the Cream of the Crop—they will net more actual profit than any other brand known.

On the opposite page are the present prices for 1913 deliveries of fresh bulbs—they are the right prices for the right kind of bulbs—the kind your business needs. Order now. It's a good opportunity to buy right.

NOTE.—The saving in freight by getting deliveries near home is considerable when you total it all up.

generally, for the few cases in which normal quantities of good seeds are to be found in the markets scarcely affect the general yields. Moreover, while last year the crops were also light, the quality uncommonly high and the percentage of germination extraordinary, this season there is no such compensation, for much loss has been experienced in the cleaning and grading, and the germinating qualities may prove to be moderate and disappointing.

"Speaking first of flower seeds, it may be said that, at the commencement, seedling plants of perennials and biennials were extremely scarce in the autumn of 1911. These plants stood the winter well, but during the flowering season (April and May) the want of rain, the prevalence of cold, with two or three sharp frosts, and the drying winds, checked the flowering and seeding of such plants as polyanthus, primroses, auriculas and sweet williams. Canterbury bells likewise suffered from the same cause, and the supply is deficient, although somewhat better than last year. Myosotis was injured by the cold winds of April and May, and an indifferent crop resulted. Wallflowers fared rather better, and produced a fair crop of good seed, but, owing to the shortage of plants, the seed available is of a limited quantity. The continuous wet of August, followed by a dry September, caused plants of antirrhinum to bloom freely a second time, and this fact somewhat destroyed the bright outlook of a good crop; still the supply is moderately good.

"Taking annuals collectively, the crops are light to medium. A few kinds, such as candytuft, gypsophila and nemesia, are good, but many other popular annuals are scarce. At one time sweet peas promised to be a good crop, but they finished one of the worst on record. The crops in America and other countries were as bad, or worse, and the supply will not be equal to the demand. Mignonette produced good crops in certain districts, but in other localities the yield was deficient. However, as a whole the supply is of medium quantity. China asters suffered from the wet of July and August, more especially the early varieties, which were then in bloom. Medium and late flowering varieties, improving greatly during the favorable weather in September, produced a fair crop. The percentage of germination, however, cannot be expected to reach a high standard, and this remark may apply to most flower seeds this year. Heavy rains during August destroyed the bright prospects of a heavy crop of nasturtium. The plants grew to leaf too freely, instead of throwing an abundance of flowers. The supply is moderate. It is, however, among the late-seeding annuals that the greatest shortages are felt, such as ageratum, calliopsis, godetia, larkspur, lobelia, marigold, scabious and stock. These were extremely late in blooming, and they were suddenly checked by the frosts of early October.

"Turning to the vegetable crops, beet plants were unable to get a good start owing to the spring drought, and later

FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertisers

BIG thoughts are conducive to big events; a man's world is just as wide as his mind. Dream big dreams; if they never come true, you are ahead of the game even at that, for sometimes anticipation is better than realization; so smile, turn on the sunshine, dream and hustle; it is lots of fun (sometimes—not). Reading along theological lines, as well as in scientific pursuits, we find the greatest successes are preceded by apparent rank failures. The fellow who thinks he can climb the ladder to success without a few backslides and hard knocks, is usually classed with the fellow who does climb by easy stages and washes windows when he reaches the top; he won't put much over on Saint Peter when he dies either—he has to work sometime, somewhere. (Where?)

It is an old foggy idea, that if a woman is given much liberty in the business world she will immediately break the strength of her moral character and lose her high regard for man. This type would last long enough to turn around and walk out, in a hurry, too. There is no lack of opportunities in all directions, and life would be a terrible struggle without the men; the angels are absolutely indispensable; still, arms' length is a safe distance and, to the fellow venturing any nearer—give him a black eye; a man—a real man—never chances the second treatment. The clinging type of woman is very sweet to dream of, but I feel sorry for the poor "vine" when the storms of reverses and adversity try the strength of the husky support, and what an awakening when we discover women were made for helpmates and not ornaments!

I have been hustling at the bulb business for the past nine years and am still working on my first "million." I may reach there if I sell enough Gladioli for spring. However, a large shipment of Speciosum lilies and Giganteum has arrived from the jeweler; they are gilt edged; also Peach Blossom and Blushing Bride Gladioli from my private estate in Holland (I can tell a few, too). The best way to know what I can do is to try me with an order. I am quoting on Paper White for fall, 1913, from one dozen to one hundred thousand cases.

fair supply of seeds. Cabbage and similar crops encountered unsuitable conditions throughout the season. Great difficulty was experienced in getting the plants through the ground in the autumn of 1911, and they were small. As a result many failed to run in the spring. Those that did were badly affected by the drought and much blighted. The seed supply is deficient. The carrot crop was fairly good as a rule, although many fields were destroyed entirely by the heavy rains of the late summer. The great majority of celery plants failed to stand the winter. Soup celery is an abnormal price this year, and celery seed generally is scarce. The leek supply is deficient, owing to the lack of plants. It was extremely difficult to raise plants during the summer of 1911. In most cases lettuces failed completely. The plants were healthy, and promised full crops up to the middle of July, but cold and damp weather set in just as they were in full bloom, with the consequent ruin of the crop. The acreage planted with onions was much below the average, owing to the shortness of bulbs, but the crop was fairly satisfactory and the supply of seed is moderate. Parsley was one of the worst crops; as the plants were so small when planted out in the autumn, the majority of them failed to run to seed. The parsnip crop, usually one of the most reliable, was this year practically a failure. The small quantity of seed harvested was of poor quality. There is a certain amount of foreign seed, but it is doubtful whether the produce of such seed will be appreciated by English growers. At one time it was feared that the radish crop would be a failure, as the seed failed to germinate owing to the dry weather which set in immediately after it was sown. It came up unevenly, and the plants made no headway for a long time. Rains fell just in time to save it, but the crop was extremely late. Spinach was the best crop of the year. Turnips suffered severely from the drought and subsequent blight, and were a light crop. Swede, like turnip, is a poor supply. Mangold wurzel was a fair crop, but many fields suffered severely from the spring drought, and failed to recover."

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

CALIFORNIA LAWS.

I noticed the item, "Inspector Destroys Galax," in The Review of December 19 and wish to say that the California inspection law was one of the topics I recently discussed with one of the inspectors for Pasadena and vicinity. He definitely stated that there is a state law prohibiting the importation of any horticultural or floricultural products into California from any of the southern states, whether proven to be infested or not. He even cited a recent case of Christmas greens shipped from Chicago, which were destroyed on the assumption that they might have come from the south, although it is well known that Wisconsin is also a large source of supply for these greens. The question of whether that particular shipment was infested or not was not considered. Lack of evidence definitely proving the shipment did not come from the south was sufficient excuse for its total destruction without further investigation.

No doubt a complete copy of the law could be obtained by writing to the officials at Sacramento.

The Market.

The present Christmas is likely to go down as the best Christmas in the history of the trade in this section. Stock has been coming in large quantities, yet the demand is unsatisfied and a great many more flowers could have been sold had they been at command. Writing just before Christmas, it is too early to say exactly how things will go, but already there are more plants sold than last year and deliveries are far ahead. These advance orders help out, as it is possible to get so much of the work done before the great day and this lessens the burden. Still, all the wholesalers and most of the retailers have been rushed with orders and the staff at each place is worked early and late, though much extra help has been put on. There were no "best sellers" this year; everything is selling well and the trouble in all cases has been to get enough.

There has been a decided improvement in the baskets and jardinières shown this year, much more taste being displayed in their arrangement. Again, however, I have to chronicle the fact that nearly all the choice little decorative stock was grown elsewhere and shipped from a distance. When will our plant growers get next to the fact that there is money—and big, real money—in small decorative stock, well grown and shipped? The local-grown poinsettias, Boston and other ferns, azaleas and such stock are all that could be desired, but there is nothing new, nothing different from the old, stereotyped stock that has been grown for years. Azaleas at the last turned out better than had been anticipated, but they cannot be classed as first-rate.

Greens sold well, remarkably well, and there were many late inquiries for holly that could not be filled. Christmas trees were on almost every street corner, ranging from little ones, eighteen inches high, to fine 10-foot specimens. English hollies, grown in Oregon, were freely displayed, but another year's growth would have benefited most of them. The plants are grafted, probably on a native ilex.

Various Notes.

The wholesalers were all rushed with orders right up to the last minute and none of them had time to go into any details with regard to business; hence many of the particulars must be left until next week.

Too much praise can hardly be given O. C. Saakes for the fine showing of Christmas baskets made. Every one showed excellent taste, and there was a finish and freshness about them that it was a pleasure to see and also to chronicle. The little plants of Asplenium Nidus Avis, in white jardinières, were perfect, as also were the larger, more imposing baskets. One large arrangement of flowering azaleas and Rivina humilis was especially good, the bright red of the ribbons just matching the rivina berries.

At the store of the Redondo Floral Co. the windows were treated with virgin cork and azaleas, a unique and pretty display.

Morris Goldenson had one window entirely filled with poinsettias and the other with elegant azaleas. Both were splendidly decorated and nicely shown. The store, also, was well lighted and arranged.

Howard & Smith opened their new store at Ninth and Olive streets in time for Christmas, with an elegant line of stock.

The Freeman-Lewis Co. ran heavily on ferns and begonias, and some of the effects Mr. Lewis obtained were excellent. The windows were a striking tribute to his artistic skill.

Wright's Flower Shop, ablaze with light and full of elegant stock, was a lively place during the rush. The colored electric light bulbs in the window were good and proved a great attraction. A choice cut of Lælia anceps was quite a feature here.

J. W. Wolters' first Christmas in his new store was surely a record, even for this skillful and successful florist. The immense store and basement were filled with some of the choicest and best flowering plants ever seen in Los An-

With Christmas over and business again back to normal, a reflection on the week creates a smile for the florist. To all inquiries the reply is unanimous. Business exceeded expectations and was way ahead of former years. Practically everything sold out. One of the leading florists closed the doors at 5 p. m. Christmas eve and displayed a "Sold Out" sign. It was necessary to check up to find out where they stood. Red roses and carnations were in the greatest demand, but everything moved well. Poinsettias, azaleas, cyclamens and Lorraines brought firm prices. With replenished stock, business was resumed Christmas day, but with the same result, being practically exhausted by noon. Holly wreaths and all decorative greens moved well. Violets, local and California, were handled in enormous quantities, only to be exhausted before the day was finished.

Christmas business in flowers this year may fairly be said to have eclipsed any previous year. The stores were all heavily stocked and at the close of December 25 there was hardly a cut flower or pot plant remaining. The public seemed to spend money much more freely than other years and expensive plants, that usually are slow to sell, moved off as fast as the cheaper grades. While the sale of growing things and cut flowers was a phenomenal one, there was a larger demand than ever before for artificial flowers. Made-up baskets of these were constantly called for. The stock of cut flowers was unusually large and most growers of carnations in this vicinity were in heavy crop, but, notwithstanding the extra supply, orders had to be turned down wholesale. The average price was $1.50 and $2 per dozen. Roses, which came from far and near, were cleaned up as fast as they arrived. A few chrysanthemums were on sale, but they were all gone early the Tuesday before Christmas. Bulbous stock was anything but plentiful, as nothing but Romans and Paper Whites were offered. The general display of pot plants was superior to that of former years, fine plants of Lorraine, Cincinnati, cyclamens, primulas, poinsettias, Christmas cherries, etc., attracting buyer and seller alike. Alleys and vacant blocks were filled with venders of Christmas trees, holly wreaths, etc., and at every possible when flower stores were fewer than they are now.

Miss Lulu Risdon did a good business in the Arcade. She says it was much better than last year, when she was on the other and busier side of the avenue.

The Harrington Co., at both the Second and Fourth avenue stores, did splendidly. A fine display of pot plants, notably Christmas cherries, appeared in each place.

Rosaia Bros. state they did the biggest business in the history of the firm. They usually buy largely and this year more so than ever, but there was little left.

Mrs. L. W. McCoy, whose store was specially attractive, had all the business the increased staff could handle.

The Burns Floral Co., in addition to the usual heavy Christmas trade, had a large share of the passing business.

The Butler Florists were busy at their old location and also did well at their new store on Third avenue.

H. Davis opened a new store on Second avenue, in a good location, and found good business.

The members of the Seattle Florists' Club gave their president a handsome Christmas present in the form of a gold watch. He is exceedingly grateful for this token of good will and will wear it with pride. T. W.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Never in the history of the local trade have climatic conditions been more favorable for holiday shoppers. Warm, sunny days and pleasant nights have been the rule for the last week and the thousands of town and out-of-town people have given the florists a merry time. The trade has been so gradual, for the same reason, that there was no really big rush at any time, and the situation was much more pleasant than when it was necessary to handle the entire business in a couple of days, as is usually the case when the weather is bad. Some of the retailers are inclined to think that orders were not as heavy this year as in former times, but the chances are that when the full summary is made, in a week or so, it will be found that they are ahead considerably. Nevertheless, it must be admitted that the sales generally were for smaller amounts than those of the last two years, which means, of course, much more work in handling than was necessary formerly. One reason for this may have been the fact that there was not as much large-sized stock shown. This refers to specimen azaleas, poinsettias, nephrolepis and many other articles. As a consequence, the buying public had to be contented with well grown but smaller sized plants. Cyclamens were shown to better advantage than has ever been attempted before. Begonias were not as plentiful as one might wish and most of the poinsettias were of the smaller sizes. Cut poinsettias from the San Diego growers made a striking wealth of color.

Valley and Romans were only in fair supply. Carnations of all colors were good and cheap, except that there was a slight shortage of the red varieties in some quarters. Roses were in fair supply and were of good quality. Some of the growers asked rather stiff prices all the week, but on the average the retailers had little to complain of. As already stated, while the individual sales were probably smaller than those of one year ago, the sum total was undoubtedly as large, and everyone will find this to be the case when results are added. The country shipping trade was better than ever before, and those dealers who cater to that class of trade had their hands well filled.

But little is known of his family affiliations, as he lived alone for many years on One Hundred and Fifth avenue, Elmhurst.

So great was the demand for California Christmas berries this season that practically all the green goods men were sold out on the evening before Christmas. The prices charged the retailers ranged from $2.50 to $3.50 per hundred pounds.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1912-1913: Pres., Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa.; Vice-Pres., J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-eighth annual meeting, Portland, Ore., June, 1913.

THE Amity Nursery Co., of Amity, Ark., has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $25,000, of which $6,300 has been subscribed.

NEWTON WALKER, nurseryman, has been elected mayor of the newly incorporated city of Donald, Ore., by a majority of nine votes.

THE Morton Sons Nursery & Plant Co. has been organized at Pottsville, Ark. Charles B. Morton, founder of the Pope County Nursery Co., is general manager and secretary of the new concern. He was with the Pope County Nursery Co. up till three years ago.

PRACTICAL nurserymen will be well represented in the program of the twenty-sixth annual convention of the Peninsula Horticultural Society, to be held at Wilmington, Del., January 14 to 16. Among those scheduled to speak are: Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; D. S. Collins, Milford, Del.; J. W. Killen, Felton, Del.; J. W. Kerr, Denton, Md., and W. F. Allen, Salisbury, Md. Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., will deliver an illustrated lecture on floriculture.

A NEW greenhouse has just been completed at the grounds of the Kavan Nurseries, located at 1415 Arrowhead avenue, San Bernardino, Cal. The house will be used exclusively for propagating olive trees and will hold 250,000 of them. A force of employees are now making cuttings, which, of course, must be taken from choice trees only. Besides some 2-year trees for the 1913 market, the firm has on hand a fine stock of olive trees about fourteen inches high, which were rooted last year and which will go to the nursery rows next March. This firm is one of the largest propagators of olive trees in southern California, and also carries general nursery stock.

TREES FOR SANDY SOIL.

Will you kindly give us some suggestions as to the best trees and shrubs for use where the soil is sandy, along the coast in mild climate of the Pacific northwest?
E. R. C.

The following trees and shrubs are adapted for seaside planting and all named should prove hardy on your coast: Araucaria imbricata, Pinus Austriaca, Tilia Europea and T. Americana; elders, green and golden; Grise-linia littoralis, black Italian poplar,

We are in a Position to quote prices on specimen Evergreens that will be decidedly attractive to anyone who is BUYING to SELL AGAIN. If you are in the market for anything from Norway Spruce to the finer varieties of Evergreens, send in your lists and we will give you a figure that will make you money.

New American Beauty Geranium

We take great pleasure in introducing to our many customers for 1913 the New American Beauty Geranium. For the first time, after working on this wonderful new Geranium for nearly three years, we are offering it for sale. It originated from a novelty collection and has stood the test now nearly three years.

Our Claim for American Beauty Geranium

is that it surpasses all other Geraniums in its real American Beauty color—

1. In brilliancy of color.
2. In size of its large blooms.
3. In earliness of bloom.
4. In constancy of bloom.
5. In vigor, strength and stocky plants.
6. In propagating quality.
7. In number of large clusters of blooms.
8. In selling quality.
9. In a wonderful ability to retain its color in cool or the hottest weather.
10. In a Geranium that has come to stay as a money maker.

AMERICAN BEAUTY is semi-double, of the purest American Beauty color. It is so distinct that no difference can be detected in the color of an American Beauty Rose. The only Geranium of its color ever introduced. It flowers freely the entire season. It grows compact, medium dwarf, of stately shape with lustrous green foliage, slightly corrugated, with a brownish circle. It produces gigantic flower heads very freely the entire season. We claim it to have larger flower heads than any other variety of its kind. The individual blooms measure $2\frac{3}{4}$ inches across and have as many as eight fully opened, gigantic flower spikes and several half open and more in bud, in eight-inch pots.

All orders are filled in rotation, so place your orders early with cash accompanying. Stock ready for shipment in January, 1913. Price to the trade from 2½-inch pots, 50c each, $5.00 per dozen, $30.00 per 100, $275.00 per 1000; from 3-inch pots, $1.00 each, $10.00 per dozen, 75.00 per 100, $700.00 per 1000. Write for colored cut.

ternata and Elaeagnus argentea. The foregoing may not all prove perfectly hardy with you, but all do well at the seaside and are worthy of a fair trial. C. W.

Somersworth, N. H.—A recent fire at the greenhouses of William H. Wilder, on Green street, caused a loss of about $1,000. The boiler room, where the flames originated, was completely destroyed and one greenhouse was badly damaged. A large part of the stock was ruined by exposure to smoke and the cold atmosphere.

Springfield, Mo.—A. F. Shannon has added another greenhouse, 22x70, to his range at 210 East Park street. He razed an old residence in order to make room for it. He has increased his glass area each year for the last three years. His property is at the corner of Park and Boonville streets, where he has been located since 1883.

BETTER UNDERSTANDING

of our firm, its products and its method of doing business, means to you, the buyer, Better Service, Better Goods and Better Satisfaction. Our aim is to produce quality in quantity at reasonable prices.

Better business means to us better employees and to them a better living. We guarantee that you get 100 per cent of what you order in a quality that will be satisfactory to you as a buyer and to us as producers.

Selling job lots at low prices is not a business, and there is no standard of quality in job lot buying. From us you get a guaranteed quality at a price fair to the buyer, and at which there is a reasonable profit and an insurance against damage in transit. Our goods are insured to you against loss. Producing young stock is a business, and job lots at low prices are left-overs and culls.

Our Catalogue of Roses, Carnations, Chrysanthemums and Bedding Stock is yours for the asking.

BALTIMORE.

Business during the week following Christmas was quite good, crops of all kinds being on the short side. There was such a good demand at Christmas that everything cleaned up well. Consequently prices were pleasing in character. Red flowers were in big demand, and there was a shortage of Richmond roses. Boxwood and evergreens seemed to be in demand, as were other greens. A fine lot of poinsettias could be seen in all the stores, selling according to size at $3, $4, $6 and $9 per dozen.

In the plant line cyclamens were in the majority, great quantities being disposed of at from $1.50 to $3 each. Azaleas brought from $3 to $5. Poinsettia pans were, of course, great favorites with the public, selling at 35 to 45 cents per bloom. Palms and ferns cleaned up well with the rest. S. W.

DES MOINES, IA.

Sunday, December 22, we took a look in J. F. Marshall's carnation houses and were much pleased to find the entire place in excellent condition. He has some White Perfection that would be a credit to any grower and he ought to make some good money on them. He also has a seedling, now in its fifth or sixth year, that he has named Robert Marshall. Parentage: G. H. Crane on Prosperity. It has scarlet blooms three and three-quarters inches across, full and high in center, good stem and is a wonderfully free bloomer. This is without a doubt the best scarlet we have had the good fortune to see. When asked why he did not put it on

ENCHANTRESS SUPREME

THE best Sport of Enchantress up to date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguish its parent. Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching. A good all-round Carnation that retains its color at all seasons. Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster. The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years' duration convinces us of its great value.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The Market.

We had ideal Christmas weather here, with a foot of snow and a bright sun. Everybody was pleased as far as the weather was concerned. Tuesday morning, December 24, snow started to fall and kept up until evening, so that the retailers had some difficulty in delivering orders, as the going was bad. Trade was all that could be desired, although some kinds of flowers were scarce. More roses, carnations, violets and sweet peas would have been welcomed, as only orders for these flowers could be filled. Those buying at the counters had to be content with other than what they intended buying. Good prices were obtained, especially for Richmond and Killarney. White Killarney, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Lady Hillingdon have shortened up considerably. My Maryland and Taft were scarce. Dark Pink Killarney came in and the color was all that could be desired. Killarney Queen was much in demand, as the stems were long and the buds good. Beauties sold well, but were rather scarce. Carnations met with a good demand, which far exceeded the supply. Beacon, Rosette, Winsor and Pink Delight were grand, and in white, White Wonder led the way. No good sweet peas were left unsold early in the week and none were to be had for Christmas. Violets continue to be scarce, and especially so this week. Stevia was plentiful and sold fairly well. Gardenias and orchids cleaned up in good shape. Narcissi and Romans were in good demand. Few Lorraines, ardisias or poinsettias were left over. Green was extensively used and laurels and ruscus also were largely called for.

Various Notes.

The Bon Ton Flower Shop reports business good for Christmas, with a big demand for potted plants.

J. A. Brodrib has taken over the Quality Flower Shop and will continue to do business in the same store until the lease expires.

Poinsettias in pans were a big factor with the Spear & McManus Co. This concern also had some splendid carnations.

Florists' autos were here, there and everywhere, and were kept busy until noon Christmas day. W. S. C.

Bayonné, N. J.—Paul Stier has had an unusually successful season in the sale of plants, especially cyclamens, primroses and hyacinths. Everything in flower was disposed of.

The Herald is an early, free and continuous bloomer, giving a heavy crop for Christmas and afterwards. Cuttings propagated in March made large plants and were in full crop by October 1.

The flowers are large; full and deep calyx, which is absolutely non-bursting; stem long and stiff; color is a clear, even shade of scarlet.

Cuttings, strong and well rooted, ready for delivery, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000. All stock guaranteed.

Carnations!

A word to the grower of carnations!

This firm has 50,000 carnation plants that are grown exclusively for cuttings, and never allowed to flower.

It has been proved conclusively that plants will not yield cut flowers and give strong cuttings at the same time; compelling them to do this, gives weakened stock.

If your stock is lacking vigor, replace with some of these carefully handled cuttings; they will put you in good shape for another year.

We use science and efficiency methods in handling our carnations from start to finish; visit our place and see for yourself; you will not find a yellow or diseased plant.

We root our cuttings in clean Lake Michigan sand, freighted 200 miles.

We root them cool.

We shall have 200,000 cuttings ready for JANUARY delivery.

They embrace the following sorts:

Commodore . . . $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000

Richest crimson scarlet; the best keeper and traveler in the family; extremely free; the earliest scarlet to bloom; continues to the close of the season in fine color. Brings a big Christmas crop; won its honors at the Midwinter Exhibition at Detroit last year.

SCOTT BROS.

ELMSFORD NURSERIES ELMSFORD, N. Y.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

A committee of florists headed by Thomas Hobday, former superintendent of waterworks, appeared before the city commission December 18 to protest against the holiday sale of Christmas greens and cut flowers by the street corner vendors, contending that such competition is unfair to the merchants who pay licenses to the city the year around. As a result the commission issued an order that sales outside the business premises of the seller must cease December 19. That day F. H. Showell applied to the district court for an injunction against the city officials to prevent them from interfering with his business. He alleged that he had paid the city a merchant's license and is renting space for his business. He claimed that, under the city ordinances, he is entitled to three feet of sidewalk space to carry on his business, but that the city commission has issued an order to the chief of police to stop him and others from conducting business on the sidewalks and that the police were threatening to close up his business. Judge C. W. Morse signed an order to show cause, which restrained the chief of police and the commission from stopping Showell's business until after the case is heard on its merits. The order was made returnable January 2, which permitted the Christmas sales to go on within the limit.

Menominee, Mich.—Hans Larsen, who heretofore has confined his attention principally to the growing of vegetables, has enlarged his greenhouses and will use the added space for flowers. The business will be conducted by himself and his son, Louis Larsen.

White Plains, N. Y.—John Gussar, for a long time foreman at J. H. Laurens' greenhouses, has taken charge of the White Plains flower store of Arthur Dummett, Inc., of Mount Vernon, N. Y., and is meeting with good success, especially with the stock from the greenhouses of his neighbors, Scott Bros., J. H. Laurens and James Smith, as well as the Dutch bulb stock from Mr. Dummett's greenhouses at 91 Central avenue.

200,000 GIANT- FLOWERING CYCLAMEN

SEEDLINGS and BLOOMING PLANTS

FOR THE LAST 15 YEARS we have selected three-fourths of our seed-bearing Cyclamen stock before Xmas, to assure early-blooming plants, and claim the finest commercial strain in this country; no fizzle of many so-called English varieties. Our aim is strong growers that don't have to be potted to be grown into a choice, salable plant—a well built, five-petaled flower (many of them at one time), with well marked foliage; every plant an ideal, a prize-winner. Received First Prize at the Cleveland Show and First and Second at Toledo, early November, when blooming Cyclamens were scarce.

The Market.

As was predicted last week, the sales of pot plants for Christmas trade ran far ahead of any other year. Practically everyone was cleaned out on plants. Such stock as azaleas, good poinsettias and begonias was sold out as early as a day before Christmas. Cut flowers were equal to all demands, with the exception of red roses and red carnations.

Various Notes.

All of the downtown retailers say Christmas business went from twenty to fifty per cent ahead of any other year. The rush at the last minute was terrific. The forces at all the stores worked right through the night in order to get orders out.

The J. M. Gasser Co. is cutting early Golden Spurs, the first of the season.

C. Merkel & Son, Mentor, contemplate building three large houses next summer, to care for their rapidly increasing pot plant business. This firm is forcing about 6,000 to 8,000 rambler roses for Easter. They marketed over 2,000 azaleas Christmas week.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. had a fine cut of roses for Christmas, the best it ever had, they say. The Beacon carnations were also in good crop.

McCallum Co. was well supplied with cut stock of all kinds. A banner trade in all lines is reported.

The Cleveland Florists' Exchange handles Beauties grown by L. L. Lamborn, Alliance, O. They had a fine crop, which cleaned up on sight.

A meeting is arranged for next week, when the Florists' Club's committee on state license for boiler operators meets Chief Examiner Wirmel, of Columbus. They expect at this meeting to reach conclusions that will be of great benefit to steam users.

Opportunity Knocks

At your door to secure the very Best Silver Pink Snapdragon in existence. Will you accept it or remain in the same old rut, growing an inferior variety, and wonder why your competitor is prospering more than you?

Read what some of the Leading Florists have to say about Buxton's Silver Pink Snapdragon:

Mr. Geo. E. Buxton, Nashua, N. H.

October 19, 1912.

Dear Sir: Your light pink Snapdragon I consider the best color of any I have grown. Just the shade of a Killarney rose and one that the ladies like. I have watched all the pink ones that are sent to the Boston market, but they are away behind your variety. I am growing your variety now entirely.

Very truly yours,

S. J. GODDARD.

Mr. Geo. E. Buxton.

Dear Sir: The light pink Snapdragon you are shipping is a winner, commanding a good price and snapped up quick by the best buyers, on account of its beautiful soft pink coloring and good all-round habit. Grow more of it.

Yours very truly,

THOS. PEGLER.

Various Notes.

At the December meeting of the Florists' Association Fred C. W. Brown, of Buffalo, gave an interesting and instructive talk on the principles of design. The lecture was illustrated by stereopticon slides made by himself. Mr. Brown emphasized the necessity for simplicity in design. The tendency, he said, was to overdecorate. George Hart gave the association a report of a visit to some of the eastern markets.

The James Vick's Sons greenhouses at Barnard, N. Y., formerly the Vick & Hill place, were well supplied with stock for the Christmas trade. The 25,000 feet are devoted almost entirely to the growing of ferns, palms, bedding stock and perennials. They have, however, about 3,000 feet in carnations and a propagating house containing 4,000 feet. From the stock of Boston, Whitmani and Scottii they are expecting to get about 30,000 small ferns. They have 3,500 feet in kentias, 1 to 4 years old, that deserve mention. Besides the greenhouses, there are thirty-five acres of land well adapted to the raising of bulbs and perennials. The place is managed by Fred W. Vick and the propagating work is in the hands of Thomas Ewart.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram E. Wilson have gone to Winter Haven, Jacksonville, Fla., and expect to spend the winter there.

Schuyler Arnold.

Tampa, Fla.—Mrs. M. M. Himes is carrying on a retail business in plants and flowers at 801 Delaware avenue. She grows her own stock.

Milford, Mass.—W. D. Howard's new greenhouse, in South Milford, is complete. It is his sixth and will be planted with chrysanthemums for next season.

Jacksonville, Fla.—In a suit for $10,000 damages brought by A. Wansker against Mills The Florist, the jury returned a verdict for defendant, thus ending a trial that lasted for two days in the circuit court. The suit was brought for alleged personal injuries sustained in June, 1911, when defendant's automobile collided with plaintiff's wagon.

THE NEW PINK CARNATION.

NORTHPORT.

Color, cerise pink. This variety has been thoroughly tried out for the past five years and we offer it today with every confidence that it will ultimately take first place as the premier dark pink. The color is similar to Mrs. C. W. Ward without the objectionable streakiness and tendency to burst the calyx of the latter variety during the dark weather. The growth is wonderfully free and continuous and Northport will produce more flowers per plant than any other variety of its type. The calyx is practically non-bursting. Rooted cuttings, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

We have for immediate delivery Al rooted cuttings of Enchantress, White Enchantress and Beacon at $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

Jas. D. Cockcroft, Northport, L. I., N. Y.

MILWAUKEE.The Market.

At this writing the year 1912 is practically at an end and we have reasons to believe that all in all it was a good year, at least for the florists. The recent Thanksgiving business was fine and now come the reports that the Christmas business with the retailers and the wholesale houses was enormous. Of course, the different kinds of potted plants, both blooming and ornamental, reigned supreme. The supply and quality of the plants this year was way ahead of anything ever offered before.

The cut flower market was well supplied in most lines, with the exception of carnations, and red ones at that; a good many more could have been sold even though the asking price on red was $12 per hundred with $10 per hundred for the other colors. Roses, Beauties, valley, violets, sweet peas and stevia were cleaned up on sight. The supply of cut poinsettias kept pace with the demand till a short time before Christmas noon.

PLEASE MENTION THE REVIEW WHEN WRITING ANY OF THESE ADVERTISERS

Various Notes.

Fred W. Bliese, of Waukesha, Wis., who was a visitor December 28, says he was fortunate in not having to buy carnations for his Christmas trade. He had just enough of his own to fill all orders.

The M. A. McKenney Co. reports being so rushed that they did not get through till 6 p. m. December 25.

At the Edlefsen-Leideger Co. it was plants till one could not rest. Never before did they handle so many. Cut flowers were not slighted by any means.

Poinsettias in large pans and hampers were mostly called for at the store of Currie Bros. Co., in the plant line. More red roses and carnations could have been sold.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. cleaned up well on all pot plants and had a good lot of roses and carnations to fall back on.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. cut American Beauties of fine quality for the holidays and was right in crop with Killarney and White Killarney, which, owing to the shortage of carnations, came in especially handy. E. O.

Greenhouse Heating.

THE season is now at hand when the movement of coal cars is likely to become the slowest and most irregular of the year, for snow and severe cold are to be expected at any time. In this connection it is worth while noting that the American Railway Association, which keeps tab on the car situation, reported as of December 14 that the car shortage had developed until there was a shortage of 34,392 cars, as against a surplus of 76,814 cars at the corresponding date last year. Growers have not forgotten the trouble they had in getting coal during the severe weather last January and all save those whose habit it is to take chances will see to it that they have several weeks' supply of fuel on the place at once, as this year's car shortage will add to the difficulties of last year the moment real winter sets in.

IMPROVING THE CIRCULATION.

In The Review for December 13, page 142, M. L. asked the following question:

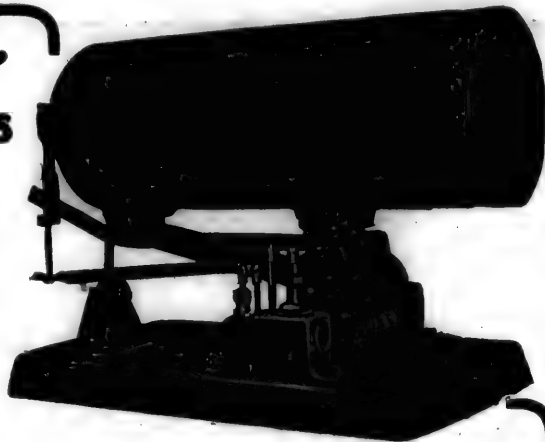

Please have your heating expert give me some information with reference to the kind of steam pump and receiver for the circulation of steam and for receiving the condensation which is returned to the boiler. What size of apparatus would be sufficient for 25,000 square feet of glass? The engineer who installed the boiler stated that the receiver of the pump should be three feet below the level of the pump. Please give me full information about the kind of pump, the size, installation, etc.

I have had considerable experience in these matters, being now with Mark Aitken, who has the largest establishment at Springfield, Mass., and perhaps I can help M. L. In the first place, there is no pump for the circulation of steam. Now, if I were going to answer the question, I should say that the first thing to be done is to put a reducing valve on the heating system. Then a middling high pressure can be carried on the boiler, reducing the pressure on the heating system, by means of the valve, to any pressure that is needed. A Duplex pump 3-2-4 would be ample to take care of 25,000 square feet of glass, and, with an automatic receiver and a steam trap or traps on the return, it would work all right. The reason that I mention traps is that if they are not used, then the steam will come back to the receiver through the returns and blow out of the vent pipe on top of the receiver, and would be wasted.

The inquirer also says that the engineer who installed the boiler stated that the receiver should be three feet below the pump. That is wrong; the receiver should be above the pump, so help to maintain a uniform temperature throughout the houses by keeping steam coils free and clear of condensation.

By automatically returning the condensation directly to boilers at almost evaporation temperature, "Detroit" Traps effect a great saving in coal.

that the hot water will run into the pump by gravity, as no pump will lift hot water. The plant in which I am engineer is in a range of greenhouses containing 92,000 square feet of glass. We carry forty pounds on the boiler and ten pounds on the heating system, by means of a reducing valve. Before we put in the reducing valve, pump, receiver and steam traps, the condensation was returned by gravity and the temperature of the return water was from 120 to 180 degrees; now the condensation comes back to the pump with a temperature of 200 to 210 degrees, which means a big saving in coal

H. Armstrong.

TWO REASONS FOR TROUBLE.

We have two greenhouses, each 16x60 and ten feet to the ridge, with twenty inches of side glass and concrete walls, three feet high. Each house is piped as follows: One 3-inch main, rising from the boiler about five feet, then pitching down to the farther end of the greenhouse and there dropping into fifteen 1½-inch returns under the benches, and one 1½-inch return along the side glass. The expansion tank is connected to both 3-inch mains at the highest point in the boiler shed. The boiler is cast-iron, a good make and rated at 1,250 feet of radiation. It has a grate 20x30 inches. The boiler room floor is about one foot lower than the paths of the greenhouses. We are not getting satisfactory results and we have to keep the boiler going at full force to get 60 degrees in moderately cold weather. In zero weather we cannot get a higher temperature than 40 degrees. We shall be pleased to get some advice through your columns. We are located in southwestern Michigan.

B. C. G.

From the description given, it would appear that at least two conditions have combined to cause the trouble. It is never advisable to use anything less than 1½-inch pipe, and 2-inch pipe is even better, unless the returns are five to eight feet above the top of the heater. The other contributing cause

THE SOIL CARRIER IN USE.

SAVES TIME, LABOR ^N_D MONEY

We call your attention to our Gravity Carriers for conveying soil into and out of greenhouses. You are aware of the great amount of labor necessary for changing the loam in your benches. It requires but a few feet of our Gravity Carriers to reduce this expense.

Carriers are made in eight and four foot sections, which can be instantly joined; the rollers are of the best seamless steel tubing, ball bearing, and are 14 inches in length by 2 1/4 inches in diameter. Cut shows how they operate.

A run of carrier is set up with one end projecting through a window and a cart containing the loam is placed at this end. The loam is shoveled into the boxes, which are pushed or conveyed by gravity into the house and dumped into the benches. Empty boxes are pushed back to cart over same run of carrier. When the beds within a convenient radius are filled, the carrier is set up at another window and the work continues until all benches are filled. For removing soil the process is, of course, similar.

We shall be pleased to furnish further details relative to construction and durability of the carriers; also, upon receipt of information relative to size of your greenhouses, furnish an estimate of the cost of a system for your requirements.

I have used the Imperial Plant Food, both in Powder and Biscuit form, and have always found it safe and reliable, as well as very marked in its effects on all classes of plants on which it has been used. For the commercial florist or private gardener who needs a really high-grade and quick-acting fertilizer, there is nothing superior to the Imperial Plant Food. Many skilled growers have been using it for years, and I have yet to meet one who does not commend it.

LOS ANGELES NOTES.

geles, and, in the words of one of Mr. Wolters' decorators, they "couldn't help selling." Magnificent cyclamens, skimmias, spiræas, azaleas, poinsettias and all the choicest stock obtainable were there, and everyone who knows the genial proprietor of this store and how hard he has worked for success will surely join me in congratulations for such grand results.

The Germain Seed & Plant Co. made an elegant display of pot plants and English holly in one of its large windows; also a big showing in the store, and the results were most encouraging. A big decoration at the Jonathan Club kept all busy.

The Roserie had a nice showing of pot plants and reports a big business.

Frank Lichtenberg got away from the stereotyped Christmas window with a lawn of real grass and a water garden, prettily planted with Japanese shrubs and containing goldfish. He had some of the finest azaleas in town.

The Hayward Floral Co. made a specialty of cyclamens in birch bark receptacles and also of Roman hyacinths and valley, each the best of its kind.

The Violet, at 201 Fifth street, made a fine Christmas showing, better than could have been expected in the space at command, and Mr. Wing expressed himself well satisfied with the business done. H. R. Richards.

Oakland, Cal.—Domoto Bros. are erecting another greenhouse at the corner of Eightieth and Olive avenues.

Eugene, Ore.—The Eugene Carnation Farm has recently completed two new greenhouses, doubling its glass area, which now amounts to 8,000 square feet.

Berkeley, Cal.—Professor John W. Gregg, formerly at the head of the courses in landscape gardening at the Pennsylvania State College, in State College, Pa., is now connected with the College of Agriculture in this city.

San Jose, Cal.—The office force of the Braslan Seed Growers Co. was entertained at a Christmas tree party at the home of Miss Alice O. Knox December 20. Among those present were: The Misses Weeks, Bullard, Reidy, Black, E. Natusch, R. Natusch, Lawrence, Moody, Knox and Mrs. Knox; Messrs. Natusch, Massol, Gagliardo, Castello and Rhein.

ITHACA, N. Y.

A bill asking for the appropriation of $30,000 for the establishment of greenhouses and for the carrying on of experimental work in the floricultural department of the university is to be introduced at the coming session of the state legislature.

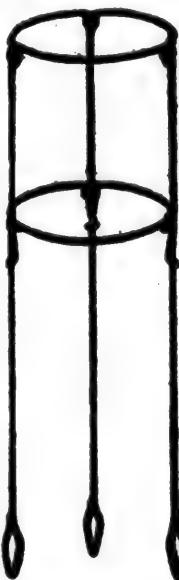

Acting in the interests of the State Federation of Florists' Clubs, under whose auspices the experimental work would be carried on at Cornell, F. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, Charles H. Vick, of Rochester, and Earl A. Bates, of Syracuse, met in Syracuse and incorporated the desire of the federation in a bill which will be introduced in both senate and assembly at Albany early in the session.

While not made a part of the general appropriation bill for state support of Cornell University during the coming year, the passage of the bill will not increase the customary allowance, as the officials of the State College of Agriculture here have cut down the annual budget with the expectation that a special fund will be available for floricultural research work.

The annual meeting of the State Federation of Florists' Clubs will be held in this city in conjunction with the annual Farmers' Week festivities.

Whitinsville, Mass.—George McWilliam, gardener on George Marston Whitin's estate, on Hill street, has received from the Massachusetts Horticultural Society a silver medal for a new orchid, which he has named Calanthe Whitini.

South Bend, Ind.—August F. Beyer, now the head of the Beyer Floral Co., in this city, was in his earlier years a soldier in the German army and he recently received one of the highest honors possible for a soldier in the service of the Fatherland. The award, a solid gold cross, was accompanied by a document bearing the proclamation that Mr. Beyer is so honored on account of distinguished services in the Austro-German war of 1866. The award carries with it a pension of $3 a month. It is estimated that Mr. Beyer will receive about $2,000 in back pay.

Owning Your Greenhouse—What It Means

This is the U-Bar—the Bar that makes U-Bar Greenhouses the famous greenhouses they are.

 You can talk about the things cold frames will do for you "until the cows come home," but if you want real flowers, real bedding plants that you can count on being top-notch year in and year out—then a greenhouse is the only thing. The only thing, because it is the sure thing. With a greenhouse your frames become doubly valuable, as then one helps the other, greatly to the advantage of both. With a greenhouse you can control temperatures and conditions and can have what you want when you want it. But don't allow anyone ever to persuade you that any other curved-eave house is just as good as the U-Bar. It's not so. We want to show you exactly why. Send for the catalogue as a starter.

Tomato Plants Grown by the Million in the Burt Olney Canning Co.'s Houses

THE problem that has confronted the Burt Olney Company for years was to get the growers from whom they buy their tomatoes to plant only good strong stocky plants that would stand early setting out, so that the crop could be rotated and not flood the canneries with tomatoes for a few short weeks.

Mr. Olney came to the conclusion that the only way to control the situation was to grow the plants themselves and furnish them to the growers at a price sufficient to cover the cost of producing them.

He had us erect for him nine iron frame houses, 33x150 ft., five at Albion, N. Y., and four at Medina.

This shows the strut on the compression truss. Note how the truss rods are securely bolted between the double strut plates. No threads to strip as in tension trusses.

The plants are grown by the million in the houses and hardened off as needed in frames.

After the tomato plants are out of the houses it was Mr. Olney's plan to use the space for growing chrysanthemums and other short crops.

With the same keen foresight so characteristic of this Canning Company's success, they put their money in the best iron frame houses money would buy. They did not hesitate to invest in houses that were a permanent investment.

If it is a good sense investment for this Canning Company to build iron frame houses to grow tomato plants in, it's a good sense investment for you, no matter what you grow.

When do you want to see one of our representatives about such an investment?

Increased facilities, more stock, more help, a larger office and a more efficient organization all the way through. We are ready for you, so get started early.

One new thing next year will be the Moninger refrigerating outfits. It's not new either, but has now undergone the final test and is ready to go on the market.

Then you are soon to hear about that wonderful iron paint for heating systems and all iron work. A really wonderful combination that has been in preparation almost five years. You will want some of this paint right off. We have ordered 10,000 gallons for the first six months and will be ready to deliver about January 15th.

1913 is going to be a big year. Get started early and reap the benefit.

During 1912 it was our pleasure to do more business than we ever did before and our customers are entirely responsible for it. Right here, Mr. Customer, we want to thank you for every dollar you spent with us. Come again when you need anything, for we appreciate your trade and will treat you fair and square.

Our watering systems were put on the market this year and some of our friends now have their pump and engine troubles out of the way forever. Better figure on getting a Moninger outfit next time you buy.

The new flat rafter house came out this season. It is the best house we make and we think the best that can be made by anybody.

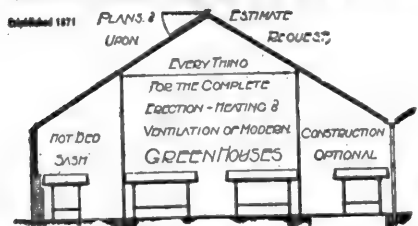

Yes, it was a good year all around and our customers are entitled to the credit.

THE PROFIT TO BE MADE

HAS HE DONE WELL?

It is with pleasure that The Review publishes the following from one of its subscribers:

"This is the time of year when everybody takes inventory and tries to determine whether he has made or lost during the preceding year; everybody but the florist, it seems. I have occasionally seen a question asked in The Review as to how much profit a place of a given size should yield, but the answer has not been especially explicit; naturally enough, so it seemed to me, because of the lack of data to figure from.

"I am going to confide to The Review some figures of my business during the year 1912, with the hope of seeing a discussion along the lines of the profit to be made in this trade, that I and others may judge whether we are realizing what we should from our time and investment. Of course, I know you will not use my name, so others may know the source.

"My place consists of 7,000 square feet of ground under glass; growing about half in lettuce and tomatoes in the spring. Half of the glass is in cut flowers, bulbs, etc., and bedding plants—no roses. I am doing a retail and wholesale business, wholesaling my surplus. Have about half an acre outdoors devoted to early vegetables and raising field plants for the greenhouses. Today's value of the land, including that covered by greenhouses, etc., is about $1,000. Houses and everything in use are kept up, so the depreciation is practically nothing. The houses are three to five years old, but have been repainted and bulbed this year.

"During 1912 my receipts were $3,287. Expenditures, including every cent paid out for help, new stock, etc., were $1,349. This does not include wages for myself. This gives me $1,928 for wages and interest on my investment. To be added to this is about $15 for permanent improvements and the heat and water for my residence, perhaps $50 per year.

"As nearly as possible I begin my working day at 7 a. m. and quit at 6 p. m. I am in a town of about 3,000 population and have a slight competition.

"I have set my head for another $500 clear money for 1913 and think I can get it out of the same equipment.

"Let's hear the truth, whether I have done well or not. I want to know."

The Review frequently is asked to state the profit that is to be made from a given quantity of glass, and invariably replies that it mostly depends on the man, only a little on the location and local conditions. One man makes himself fairly independent in a situation where another at best will only make a living.

A discussion of the subject may serve to invigorate some of the men who are getting less out of the business than they might have, and The Review will be pleased to publish other letters along this line. The writer's full name and address must be signed, although they will not be published.

POINSETTIAS AT BELMONT.

This has been a season which has given a great variety of results with poinsettias. Weather conditions appear to have been responsible for the unusual variations in the crop. Many growers lost a considerable part of their poinsettias, while others had them too early for Christmas. W. S. Richards, of Belmont Farm, Perrysburg, Poinsettias at Belmont Farm.

O., sends the photograph from which the accompanying illustration was prepared. It shows a bench of poinsettias, which, as he says, "made an unusually good growth." Bench in the first part of June, most of them reached a height of eight feet, and he adds, "We had a hard task to keep them from going through the glass." The bracts evidently were of fine quality and Mr. Richards says many of them were from fifteen to twenty inches across.

Cadillac, Mich.—W. H. Kane, who recently opened a florists' establishment here, has engaged Charles Craylie as manager. Mr. Craylie was formerly with Eli Cross, of Grand Rapids, Mich.

PARCEL POST RULES.

The regulations promulgated by the postmaster-general for the administration of the parcel post would set, in all, about a dozen columns of The Review. They are in part devoted to the details applicable to all parcels, such as rates, places of mailing, method of wrapping, delivery, etc., but a large part of the regulations are purely administrative matters and are of no interest to the public. The only paragraphs having special bearing on our trade are as follows, the first three being parts of Section 7:

"4. Seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants are matter of the fourth class, notwithstanding that a special rate of postage (1 cent for each two ounces or fraction thereof regardless of distance) applies thereto. The limit of weight is increased to eleven pounds by the parcel post law (see sec. 1), but no other change is made.

"5. Cut flowers, dried plants and botanical specimens not susceptible of propagation are transmissible at parcel post rates.

"6. Samples of wheat or other grain in its natural condition, potatoes, beans, peas, chestnuts, acorns, etc., when intended for planting must be prepaid at the special rate of postage prescribed in paragraph 4, but when intended to be used as food the parcel post rates apply.

"Sec. 26. Seeds and other admissible articles, which are liable from their form or nature to loss or damage unless specially protected, may be put up in sealed envelopes of material sufficiently transparent to show the contents clearly without opening.

"Sec. 30. Seeds of fruit, nursery stock, and all other plant products for propagation, may be mailed in accordance with the instructions of the Department of Agriculture as promulgated by Postoffice Department orders, No. 6313, of May 29, 1912; No. 6655, of November 16, 1912, and No. 6674, of November 27, 1912."

THE GLASS MARKET.

In its New Year's review of business conditions one of the Chicago dailies had the following by Lester E. Partridge:

"The general glass situation is in much better shape, from a price and consumptive standpoint, than it has been for several years.

"Owing to the new process of making window glass by machinery, there has been for several years an overproduction at certain seasons of the year that has forced prices to a low level.

"A year ago prices on window glass were the lowest in the history of the business. In fact, the skilled workmen were getting almost day laborers' wages and the manufacturers were actually losing money on every box produced. Wages have been increased since that time about sixty per cent, and, while these wages are still considerably less than the average pay received by the skilled trades in the manufacturing of glass, they are much more satisfactory to all concerned and allow the men to get out a better class of work.

"These higher wages and the increased cost of materials and fuel have forced the prices up considerably, but today's basis is what might be termed just a fair average price, and the prospects are that the present prices will prevail throughout the coming year, with probably some advance when the spring trade opens up.

"The latter half of 1912 has unquestionably seen the largest consumption of glass in the history of the country, and the present indications are that 1913 will be a banner year for building throughout the country, which will mean the largest demand for glass of all kinds that we ever have seen."

PROPAGATION OF CININNATI.

I would greatly appreciate it if you could tell me the proper way of propagating Begonia Glory of Cincinnati; also the proper time for it. C. A. R.

Begonia Glory of Cincinnati is propagated in the same manner as the ordinary Lorraine begonia, namely, by leaf cuttings, and early spring is the best time for the operation. W. H. T.

MEXICAN TUBEROSES.

I should like to ask when Mexican tuberoses should be taken up in the climate of southwestern Texas, how the bulbs should be separated and how handled for market. W. L. H.

Replying to the question about tuberoses in Texas: They do not have to be taken up in the winter south of Austin, or, I might say, in the south half of the state; but every two years they should be taken up and divided. We presume the best time to do it is in March or April, as one kills a crop of weeds at that time and tuberoses will not grow until the ground gets warm. If not divided after blooming for two years the flower stalks are short and slender.

In the north and northeastern part of the state they should be taken up after frost and dried and laid anywhere just so they do not freeze, and then planted in March or April.

About once in ten or twelve years the temperature here reaches zero, but only for a short time. If it continues a few days it kills the bulbs near the top of the ground. F. T. Ramsey.

TULIPS FOR EASTER.

I have 20,000 tulips of several varieties, many of them of the higher priced sorts. These are, however, single early. I have also a lot of Darwins of many varieties. I boxed them all about November 15, in what I call virgin soil of medium quality. I have not given them any manure. Do these bulbs want any feeding and what would it be best to give them? I do not expect to have them early, as I have no glass except coldframe sashes. Can I in any way manage, here in British Columbia, to have them in for Easter? Any suggestions regarding this will be highly appreciated.

C. V. A.

You should have no trouble in flowering any of the early varieties of tulips for Easter in your coldframe. Allow them to remain covered until they have sprouted two to three inches; then place them in the coldframe on a bed of coal ashes, which will help to keep out worms. On cold nights it may be necessary to protect the sashes with hotbed mats. Easter comes quite early in 1913, the date being March 23. Your tulips should therefore be placed in the light not later than the middle of February.

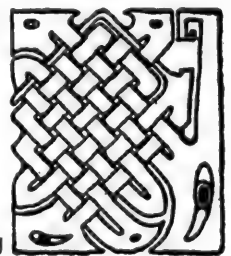

If you had mixed some sand and old, well decayed manure in your compost, your bulbs would have done better. However, seeing you have not done so, you can materially benefit them by watering with liquid cow manure once in four or five days, after they are placed in the frame. I do not know how low a temperature you get in February and March. If it is quite frosty it would be an advantage to use a few inches of warm horse manure in the frame. Tramp it firmly and evenly before spreading the coal ashes on.

The Darwin tulips will flower well during April. They would hardly be in condition for Easter. Another season endeavor to box your tulips a month earlier and they will do better; November 15 is rather late. C. W.

THE ART OF FLOWER ARRANGEMENT

By FRED C. W. BROWN

DOUBLE INTEREST DESIGNS.

The Broken Column.

In our last installment we introduced the subject of double interest designs and we wish here to emphasize more strongly the necessity of definiteness and simplicity in the construction.

It is composition that counts in these larger forms, and it would be well always to keep before you the fact that composition is like a monogram, in which the letters interlace one with another in pleasing proportion. So, also, in your designs, the parts must knit together into one harmonious whole.

Note the first of the two pictures of broken columns. This sort of design, because of its double interest, is necessarily complicated; hence we must be careful, in our treatment of it, to simplify it as much as possible.

The Barber-pole Twist.

We find that the double interest of shaft and base has been further complicated by the barber-pole effect, which almost seems to shout at you, "U. R. next!" This is poor treatment, for we find that it further intensifies the complexity of the subject.

Be simple, but in your simplicity be forcible.

Flowers might grow in some such simple form as is shown in the second illustration, where only half the material was used for the cluster, but they will never be considered graceful when placed with the mathematical accuracy of a barber-pole twist.

Just here I wish to deviate from the consideration of the art features and utter a strong warning against the use of those big designs that so many of us still seem to admire.

Opposition to Funeral Flowers.

Among the general public at the present time there is a custom, more or less prevalent, of inserting in the death notices in the newspapers a request that there be no flowers. It is impossible to estimate the loss to florists through this channel alone, and it is surprising that so little effort has been made to trace this public custom to its origin or to locate the cause. I have heard it suggested that it is simply a fashion or fad, and also that it is often done on account of a fear that there will not be a generous response of friends in sending floral tributes.

After careful investigation, however, the writer has come to the conclusion that this unfavorable attitude of certain of the public toward funeral flowers is largely due to our lack of understanding of the principles of art.

Flowers are sent to a bereaved home as an expression of sorrow, and are supposed to help remove some of the bitter thoughts of the human loss. Flowers have been chosen as the messengers of peace because of their simplicity and purity. Have we been faithful to what has been required of us?

Is It the Florists' Own Fault?

I believe we have only ourselves to blame for this "no flower" advertising.

We are supposed to understand our business and so we have been entrusted with the confidence of the buying public, for our customers generally accept our suggestions. But, through a lack of artistic training and understanding, we have abused the confidence placed in us, for we have offered, as a maximum of our skill, freak and cumbersome arrangements of flowers and have styled them "works of art." Unfortunately, they are frequently glaring examples of thoughtlessness and bad taste and so we find ourselves victims of these ridiculous creations of minds diseased by the greed for money. We have been trusted to produce soothing arrangements, but have gradually allowed our ideas to be so perverted that we have advocated these uncouth monstrosities, veritable travesties on sorrow, and have forced them on a bereaved home where only that which was simple, soothing and harmonious could possibly have been welcome.

Grotesque Masses of Flowers.

I sincerely believe we are the direct cause of these unwilling prohibitions of funeral flowers, for my investigations have proved, with reference to certain homes from which the strongest prohibitions were issued, that in some of these homes the most expensive floral arrangements were chosen—chosen because of their rich, soothing qualities and their artistic merit. This seems to refute the prevailing opinion that the forbidding of flowers is merely a fad or that flowers are not wanted, and seems to substantiate the argument that the real desire of the bereaved families is to be sure that their hour of trial and sorrow will not be ridiculed by the presence of grotesque masses of flowers, violated into the form of a steamboat, a train of cars, or some animal.

Art a Business Necessity.

I know that there are many who will disagree with the foregoing opinion. It is the hope of the writer, indeed, that these lines will be read by those who do differ, and that they will show the courage of their convictions by publicly expressing their ideas, for it is only by a free discussion of this and kindred subjects that we can expect to clear our atmosphere of such money-eating customs as requesting that there be no flowers at funerals.

The writer has no hesitation in asserting and reasserting that this great loss can be traced directly to our lack of understanding of art, and just as long as we persist in sending and suggesting these freak forms and sizes, just so long—and a little longer—will the loss continue.

I am aware that many of our florists rarely turn out these huge arrangements now, but have substituted the more simple forms and increased the value, when necessary, by using more expensive material, but there are just as many who think that to earn $25, $50 or $100 for a funeral emblem, they must use size for the sake of impressiveness.

There are a great many arguments, of course, that might be used to prove how necessary it is to supply the customer with what he wants, but does he really want it? Are you sure his demand is not the result of the years of public custom and of suggestion from you? In order to remedy the evil, it is essential that florists have a better understanding of their own business, so that they will not scoff at art, but realize, as they eventually will, that art is an absolute necessity because of its economy.

Fred C. W. Brown.

PUBLICITY.

"Holiday Flowers Will Be Costly" was the headline displayed in the New York Herald for Sunday, December 22, 1912, to a half-column article, stating that prices would be raised fifty per cent over preceding Christmas prices; that the entire stock, with a few minor exceptions, of all plant growers within easy reach of the metropolitan wholesale dealers was exhausted, and that there was no possibility of another cutting reaching the market before Christmas.

A prominent wholesaler was given as authority for this and a lot more, all of which was detrimental to the flower trade of New York city.

When the subject of publicity was brought up in Chicago, I, with a number of others, expected a real publicity campaign, headed by the S. A. F., with all the local clubs and associations as allies. We expected a vigorous handling of the press of the United States from a positive point of view and a strict censorship over all negative matter, such as the foregoing and occasionally other articles are.

Our trade is developing in spite of our lethargy, but other business has developed a hundred or two hundred-fold—yes, in some cases, five thousand-fold—through the aid of the press.

There is no other one business in the world that can adapt itself to press manipulation as well as ours, and an up-to-date newspaper man, assisted and advised by the good, live wires we have on our various publicity committees, would earn his salary ten times over.

If the S. A. F. is not able to finance such a proposition, and presuming that such a man could be employed for, say, $3,000 per annum, with an additional $2,000 for sundry expenses, I will be one of 500 to give $10 a year toward maintaining such a campaign for at least five years, and I am sure there are 499 others in the S. A. F. who will do the same.

This is not decrying the present publicity methods; it is the one thing we can not have too much of, and the right kind of a newspaper man could be a great help toward making these local attempts successful.

Grotesque Masses of Flowers.

I sincerely believe we are the direct cause of these unwilling prohibitions of funeral flowers, for my investigations have proved, with reference to certain homes from which the strongest prohibitions were issued, that in some of these homes the most expensive floral arrangements were chosen—chosen because of their rich, soothing qualities and their artistic merit. This seems to refute the prevailing opinion that the forbidding of flowers is merely a fad or that flowers are not wanted, and seems to substantiate the argument that the real desire of the bereaved families is to be sure that their hour of trial and sorrow will not be ridiculed by the presence of grotesque masses of flowers, violated into the form of a steamboat, a train of cars, or some animal.

Art a Business Necessity.

I know that there are many who will disagree with the foregoing opinion. It is the hope of the writer, indeed, that these lines will be read by those who do differ, and that they will show the courage of their convictions by publicly expressing their ideas, for it is only by a free discussion of this and kindred subjects that we can expect to clear our atmosphere of such money-eating customs as requesting that there be no flowers at funerals.

The writer has no hesitation in asserting and reasserting that this great loss can be traced directly to our lack of understanding of art, and just as long as we persist in sending and suggesting these freak forms and sizes, just so long—and a little longer—will the loss continue.

I am aware that many of our florists rarely turn out these huge arrangements now, but have substituted the more simple forms and increased the value, when necessary, by using more expensive material, but there are just as many who think that to earn $25, $50 or $100 for a funeral emblem, they must use size for the sake of impressiveness.

There are a great many arguments, of course, that might be used to prove how necessary it is to supply the customer with what he wants, but does he really want it? Are you sure his demand is not the result of the years of public custom and of suggestion from you? In order to remedy the evil, it is essential that florists have a better understanding of their own business, so that they will not scoff at art, but realize, as they eventually will, that art is an absolute necessity because of its economy.

PUBLICITY.

"Holiday Flowers Will Be Costly" was the headline displayed in the New York Herald for Sunday, December 22, 1912, to a half-column article, stating that prices would be raised fifty per cent over preceding Christmas prices; that the entire stock, with a few minor exceptions, of all plant growers within easy reach of the metropolitan wholesale dealers was exhausted, and that there was no possibility of another cutting reaching the market before Christmas.

A prominent wholesaler was given

as authority for this and a lot more, all of which was detrimental to the flower trade of New York city.

When the subject of publicity was brought up in Chicago, I, with a number of others, expected a real publicity campaign, headed by the S. A. F., with all the local clubs and associations as allies. We expected a vigorous handling of the press of the United States from a positive point of view and a strict censorship over all negative matter, such as the foregoing and occasionally other articles are.

Our trade is developing in spite of our lethargy, but other business has developed a hundred or two hundred-fold—yes, in some cases, five thousand-fold—through the aid of the press.

There is no other one business in the world that can adapt itself to press manipulation as well as ours, and an up-to-date newspaper man, assisted and advised by the good, live wires we have on our various publicity committees, would earn his salary ten times over.

If the S. A. F. is not able to finance such a proposition, and presuming that such a man could be employed for, say, $3,000 per annum, with an additional $2,000 for sundry expenses, I will be one of 500 to give $10 a year toward maintaining such a campaign for at least five years, and I am sure there are 199 others on the S. A. F. who will do the same.

This is not deceiving the present publicity methods; it is the one thing we can not have too much of, and the right kind of a newspaper man could be a great help toward making these local attempts successful.

Local clubs could, no doubt, be induced to contribute toward such a campaign, and I am sure our Lancaster County Florists' Club would be right in line with its contribution.

TEXAS PROGRESSIVE.

Those florists and florists' supply concerns that cater to the wholesale demand may have some appreciation of the rapidity with which the trade is progressing in the southwest, but the great body of florists do not realize the strides the business is making in the agricultural west. For instance, take a look at the illustration showing the store of the Lone Star Floral Co., Chas. Chollar, manager, shown in this issue. It is a Dallas establishment. Texas is full of progressive florists, of whom Mr. Chollar is one. In addition to the decorations of the store, note his line of accessories and novelties. Also, it will be worth noting that he makes a profitable side line of canarybirds and goldfish. Some florists handle candies as a side line, but goldfish and birds seem to be the most adaptable things a florist can push in addition to flowers.

ONE OF MANY STORIES.

Not so long ago flower stores were all on one floor. Then came the fashion, where street floor space commands high rents, of putting the workroom either in the basement or above the store, in the second story. This has been followed, gradually, by the flower store that has selling space on several floors. There are not many, however, that can beat Ratcliffe & Tanner, Inc., Richmond, Va., whose establishment at 25 West Broad street is a five-story affair, occupied exclusively for retail purposes. The illustration on page 15 shows the first floor as it appeared during the holidays. Mr. Tanner stands in the foreground.

much better and how much more advantageous it would be for him to make his regular shipments daily right up to Christmas, selling at a good price, instead of holding them up and in the end not getting as much as he would before.

Christmas Uncertainties.

Every year I hear the commission man say, "I told them to ship the goods at such and such a date, but will they do it? No!" As a consequence, the commission man is up in the air. He does not know what to promise the retailer. He has not the vaguest idea as to how much he will have or what prices to quote. The retailer is likewise up in the air. He does not know what he will have to pay for the stock, nor how much he can expect to get.

Who suffers by this? To safeguard himself at Christmas the store man sidetracks cut flowers and stocks up his place with desirable and salable blooming plants, something he knows the price of. This is something he is really forced to do against his will, for cut flowers are much easier to handle than plants.

The Commission Man.

Now for the commission man: he has come to stay, a necessary factor for the economic development and distribution of our product. It is he who has enabled us to have the choice of stock grown in the surrounding country, and I believe I am safe in saying that there is no other city where the service is as good as that given by the Philadelphia commission houses. Through them we

MR. FOX SAYS GET TOGETHER

THE SPIRIT OF THE TIMES.

[A summary of a talk by Charles Henry Fox, before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia January 7, 1913.]

We are a fraternity, and a fraternity is strong only as they pull together. This is something the florists have never done. We want coöperation, sympathy with one another. We want to plan our business interests together. We want to study the needs of the grower, the needs of the commission man, the needs of the retailer, and altogether we want to study what interests the public.

The pathway to success lies in serving the public, not in affronting it, and this can only be done when the grower, the commission man and the retailer work hand in hand.

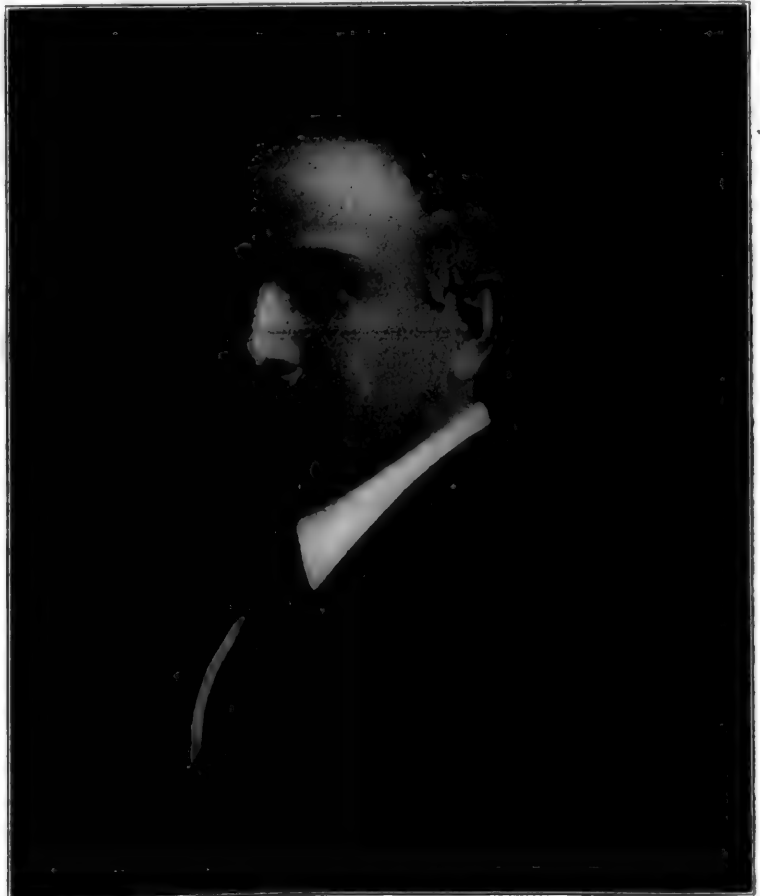

Would it not be beneficial for the grower to visit the retailer, to come in direct contact with him, get better acquainted, not look upon him as an outsider—just because he does not deal directly with him? We could tell him and demonstrate why carnations were taboo. At the same time we could show him how carnations would be in demand if they were grown and packed as they should be. We could give him a line on many little things that we could use, at a profit to him, if he would grow them for us in the style that the public demands.

To my mind such an exquisite, delicate and perishable product as flowers should be handled with the utmost care and dispatch.

If we could adopt a plan whereby we could give an order for a certain quantity of stock, have it packed by the grower and shipped direct to the retailer, without any delay or handling, it would eliminate an immense amount of loss and waste.

Through this close association between the grower and retailer a more perfect understanding would naturally be the outcome and a great many irregularities might be corrected, for the grower would then realize how are able to replenish our stock with fresh goods from hour to hour. Through them we are able to buy the cream of the stock of a number of growers, as well as the cheaper grades if we want them. Right here I might add that we, as retailers, can greatly facilitate this service by thinking of all we want to order before we hang up the receiver, rather than ordering in sections, thus keeping the delivery boy on the run when one delivery might answer the purpose.

Now, while we are getting this excellent service, it is necessary for us to keep up the proper balance. By that I mean to support and encourage the growers who sell their goods direct. This always has a wholesome effect on the commission man and makes him behave. We do not want any flower trust. We do want coöperation.

In my previous remarks I spoke of direct shipment from the grower to the retailer. Do not misunderstand me. I do not recommend for one minute the elimination of the commission man, nor do I want to belittle his necessary service. I simply want to make a plea for a change in the shipment; that the order shall go through the hands of the commission man as of old but the shipment go direct, thus eliminating the second handling.

The reason this has never been encouraged by the commission man has been because he has always seemed so envious of his consignor; there always seemed to be such secrecy as to where the goods came from. He would never think of telling you, but, after all, why should there be any secrecy about it? The retailer certainly does not want the consignor. He could not handle all of his product at any rate, and it is not reasonable to suppose that the grower, so long as he is treated right, will go back on the commission man who handles his goods.

Another clause that might be inserted in this grand fraternity, and one which our friends, the commission men, might well consider, would be the living up to their advertisement—to be wholesale men in every sense of the word and not to sell flowers to any person or corporation not a florist. I of course am not alluding to the fakers; they are one of the necessary evils, but I do insist that it is absolutely wrong to take orders for funerals, etc., or to deliver flowers to hotels, restaurants, clubs and colleges, when these orders might be turned into the retail channels.

It is nothing new for a hotel man to ask me to quote prices on a little bunch of stuff and, after I have given him the price, to have him turn to me and say, "Why, I can beat you all hollow. I can buy these things as cheap as you can. I can buy them of So & So," mentioning the name of a wholesaler. This is certainly an exasperating and an embarrassing position for the retailer and such conditions should not exist.

What does it profit the wholesaler? These people want the goods and they would buy them of us at a retail profit, and we, in turn, would be giving the wholesaler the price asked.

There is no doubt in my mind that once the get-together plan gets in action it will be only a short time when all these abuses will be done away with. All we want to do is to understand each other better. We are all friends and we are each one of us dependent on the other.

And Then the Retailer.

Now as to the retailer: he is on the firing line. It is he who is directly or indirectly responsible for public opinion on the flower trade.

First of all, have your goods marked in plain figures, and marked by the buyer, so that every customer gets a square deal, instead of pricing them at what you think the customers will stand for. Gone forever are the days when the salesman would quote prices in a subdued tone, for fear the customer at his elbow was being offered the same goods a dollar or so cheaper.

Our next consideration is efficiency. For instance, the 100-point man needs no supervision. His work is always finished. His customers are always pleased. There is no comeback. The difference between a five-dollar-a-day man and a two-dollar-a-day man is that the latter requires $3 worth of supervision, for which he has to pay. Responsibility gravitates to the man who can shoulder it.

Business is a composite whole. Without composite salesmanship your business cannot be a success. The errand boy is just as important as the salesman, and the salesman is of little use if the bookkeeper does not keep track of the sales.

Right here I want to illustrate how this law of composite salesmanship works out. It was Christmas day, all our work was finished. The phone bell rang; our chauffeur was on the wire, car broken down with thirty packages yet to deliver. We immediately dispatched five men and boys to get out the packages. Each was given six to deliver. At Christmas we have to engage extra help. Two of these boys were extras. One of them delivered one package, and then, tired of tramping around in the snow, came back with the rest. Our store, all work being finished, closed at 2 o'clock. This boy, finding it closed, left his packages in care of the taxicab man next door and—skipped. A little later one of our regular boys, one of the composite whole, arrived and discovered the packages that had been left. "Great Scott! This will never do," he thought. So he hired a taxicab, delivered the goods, saved the customers from being disappointed—and turned in the bill to the house.

This boy is a 100-pointer. We need more of them. Educate them! Elevate them! Make them proud of the flower business!

The retailer should make an effort to feature the use of flowers for every occasion by having his windows appropriately decorated. Your windows are the mirrors of your business.

Organized Publicity.

I am much in favor of a plan of organized publicity. Let each of us subscribe a specific amount per year to feature the use of flowers for the various occasions. Give out the idea broadcast that the use of flowers is not a millionaire's luxury, that we have something to sell that everyone should use and just as necessary to happiness in civilized life as the more staple articles of merchandise. Once we can start this favorable impression, when the man with $1 to spend for flowers feels assured that he is just as welcome as the man who drives up in a taxicab with $25 to spend, a wonderful increase will be seen in the sale of flowers.

To show you how these suggestions work, we filled our windows with cradles of all sizes, filled with flowers from $1 up to $10, and in two weeks' time we sold over fifty of them. Now, remember, this was done by suggestion. None of these people would ever have thought of the new arrival had they not seen the cradles in the window, and everybody does not walk down Broad street either. Let everyone of the craft put his shoulder to the wheel and we will sell 500 cradles instead of fifty.

This illustrates clearly what can be done to increase the sale of flowers, and without any bargain business either. People will pay you a fair price for anything that is gotten up in an attractive, unique way. But one or two men cannot bring about this favorable impression. We must have concerted action. We must work hand in hand and spend money on general publicity to make flowers popular for all occasions.

Every now and again you see statements in the newspapers and magazines that "this year little French bouquets of artificial flowers will be the vogue for street wear." While they are effective and good looking, nevertheless they are artificial and interfere seriously with the sale of cut flowers. They eliminate one of our most profitable lines, the corsage bunch. What have we as florists done to counteract this whim of the public? Nothing! We simply sit by and let them wear the artificial flowers, while we keep the fresh ones.

This is where the advertising bureau will come in strong. Get a first-class advertising man, have him meet with us at our regular meetings, talk over our plans with him, open our business secrets to him. Then let him write good copy, favorable to the use of flowers. In many cases this can be inserted in the newspapers for nothing; in fact, the newspapers are glad to get such copy, but the way it is written has all to do with it.

Do this for a year or so and you will find a wonderful change in the public mind in regard to flowers.

Let Everybody Boost.

About three weeks before the holidays four newspaper representatives called on me for news on Christmas flowers and their prices. I told everyone this was going to be a flower year; that flowers were never so good or so plentiful as this year, and that they will be cheap—little above the popular price. Everyone was amazed, for the first question they greeted me with was, "Flowers will be very high, won't they?"

It was the same with customers in the store. I instructed every salesman not to dare mention the word "expensive" or "scarce" in regard to Christmas flowers.

Did all this leave a favorable impression? Of course it did. It was positive instead of negative. It helped the public to decide in favor of flowers.

This, gentlemen, is, I think, the proper spirit. This is what we should do to bring the public mind with us, instead of diverting it by scaring them into other channels.

In closing, let me say once more that what we want to do is to come to a more perfect understanding. Get more closely associated. Study each others' needs and—boost the flower business for all it is worth.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Phalenopsis.

Phalenopsis are now commencing to make a fine display of flowers. Quite a few were in time for Christmas, a season when choice orchids always are in demand. P. amabilis, grandiflora and the splendid form Rimestadiana are all now in season. Their large, pure white flowers are superb in high-class design or bouquet work. The beautiful pink, P. Schilleriana, is also coming into flower. Its many branched, arching spikes carry twenty-five to 100 flowers each, occasionally even more. Even when out of flower this orchid is attractive, on account of its handsome variegated leaves.

Phalenopsis must have a warm house; 65 degrees at night is a suitable minimum except on zero nights, when 60 degrees is sufficient. They must never, even in midwinter, be exposed to direct sunshine, as their leaves are easily burned. Neither must they be exposed to anything in the nature of draughts from the ventilators; the outside air must be well warmed before striking them. It is a common mistake, however, to grow them in heavy shade. This causes handsome leaves to be produced, but the flower spikes are disappointing.

Care must, at this season, be taken in watering. If the plants are too wet at the roots, the foliage will decay. Keep the moss on the surface of the pans or cylinders slightly moistened and let the plants have a genial, moist growing atmosphere at all times. Lay baits for snails, which are sometimes troublesome, and wrap some cotton-wool around each flower spike as it appears, for protection. Damp frequently on and about the plants and sponge the leaves occasionally, so that thrips or red spider, which terribly disfigure them, may not gain any foothold.

Calanthes.

What superb midwinter orchids the calanthes are! And how strange it is that they are not yet more grown commercially! For decorative purposes on mantels or tables they are so much superior to cattleyas that comparison is simply odious. Calanthe Veitchii, of which there are several fine named forms, is the leader, but there is the older C. vestita in several colors and a number of hybrids raised within the last ten or fifteen years. If the Messrs. Veitch had never raised any other orchid than Calanthe Veitchii it would in itself suffice to perpetuate their memory for generations to come, and it was, if I mistake not, one of the first hybrid orchids raised, if not the first.

Calanthes now are, or should be, almost at their best, with the exception of the later flowering C. Regnieri. They should have a rather dry house, with a minimum temperature of 60 to 65 degrees. The foliage before now has all left the plants and little moisture must be afforded at the root. In fact, there is no need to apply any; the spikes will develop just as well without it, and there is then no danger of causing the bulbs to turn black, as is possible when a little overplus of water is afforded them.

Where arranged in a greenhouse for effect these plants make a marvelous show now, adiantums being used to cover the pots and some of the nakedness of the bottoms of stems. Spikes with thirty to fifty flowers are fine, but well-grown spikes will considerably exceed even the latter number. As soon as the spikes are cut, store the plants away on a warm, dry shelf, where they can remain until they show signs of growth at the base of the old bulbs, when they can be shaken out and started in flats of sand and moss in a warm, moist house.

after benching; extremely free in producing blooms; never comes sleepy or off color. A. F. J. Baur, Sec'y.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Dayton, O.—At Cincinnati December 31 Herman H. Ritter, for many years in the flower business at Dayton, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States District Court. He scheduled assets of $39,164.75 and liabilities of only $24,041.02.

Brockton, Mass.—The firm of Jahn & Robinson, 53 Main street, with Walter E. Jahn and Hadley E. Robinson as the partners, has made an assignment to Attorney Winfield M. Wilbar. The liabilities are given as about $2,500 and the assets as about $1,500.

New York, N. Y.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Butler, Florist, Inc., 18 East Forty-sixth street, show liabilities $19,139 and assets $1,468, consisting of cash, $47; fixtures, $262; delivery wagon, $212; accounts, $939, and fire insurance, $8. Eugene G. MacCan, president of the company, is a creditor for $14,650.

SPRENGERI GOING TO SEED.

I have a bench of Asparagus Sprengeri in which a number of sprays went to seed, so that I can not use them for green. The green is in great demand for my local retail trade. Now, I should like to ask you what is advisable under the circumstances. I mean, which will pay better, to let the seeds mature and sell them to the wholesale market, or to cut out the seedling sprays so that they will not take away the strength of the plants and reduce the crop of green? W. F. H.

To a man with an active local retail trade, it would seem that a bench of Asparagus Sprengeri for sprays would pay better than the same space given over to seed producing, from the fact that seeds of this species are usually plentiful in the market and consequently do not bring high prices at wholesale. I would advise the cutting out of the seedling growths, except a sufficient quantity for home use; then give the plants a top-dressing of short manure to encourage a new growth. W. H. T.

PRODUCTION OF CUTTINGS.

Will you kindly give me some information in regard to the treatment of carnations? The growth in some years is thrifty, with fairly good stems and a good supply of cuttings; another year there will be equally good plants and stems, but scarcely any cuttings. What kind of feeding would you suggest for the plants without cuttings at this time? J. F. J.

I cannot suggest any reason why a variety should behave much differently from one year to another, in the way of producing cuttings. Of course, you understand that varieties differ greatly in the number of cuttings they produce along the flower stems. Some give cuttings of good size before the flower is ready to cut, while others seldom break from the lower eyes until after the bloom is cut.

You cannot feed the plants anything to make these growths come more quickly. Wait for your cuttings until the breaks come, after you have cut blooms a while. If you began cutting in the fall, there ought to be plenty of these now. A. F. J. B.

CARNATIONS AT LINCOLN.

Frey & Frey, of Lincoln, Neb., say that there was no shortage of carnations for Christmas—they were among the few fortunate growers who were right in the midst of excellent crops for the holidays. The photograph from which the accompanying illustration was prepared was an extremely poor one, but it shows something of the display of color they had on their bench of Victory. The photograph was made December 23, and on that day Frey & Frey cut 6,840 blooms from 35,000 carnation plants. They say their average cut from December 15 to January 2 has been 5,240 flowers per day and the cut is still on the up-grade.

SOIL FOR NEXT YEAR.

We have mixed the soil for our carnations for next year, using one-third well rotted manure and two-thirds soil from a corn field that had been well manured the fall before. Would you add bone meal or lime, and when and how much? We have had considerable trouble with our carnations. They look healthy, but plants here and there in the bed wilt down and die. Would mixing the soil with the manure just before it is put in the beds cause this? J. A. F. & S.

The soil you have mixed for your carnations is amply rich; in fact, the proportion of manure is greater than is usually considered right. Three parts soil and one part manure are generally regarded as the proper proportions. I would not add anything further at this time. Next season, when the plants are growing, you can add whatever seems lacking, as a top-dressing.

The trouble you complain of seems to be the common wet stem-rot. Whether the fungi were added to the soil with the manure or were in the soil before the manure was added, would be difficult to tell. It is certainly a mistake, however, to mix much manure with the soil when it is being brought into the house. Especially is this true if the manure is not well rotted. A. F. J. B.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The following new carnations have been registered with the American Carnation Society:

By Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, L. I.—Vivid, parentage, Fisher seedling x Mrs. C. W. Ward; color, vivid cerise; size, three and one-half inches; good habit, wiry stems, comes into full crop very early; the color is of remarkable brilliancy under artificial light.

By Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind.—Radiance, parentage, Beacon x scarlet seedling; color, deep, brilliant scarlet; size, three and one-half inches; flower perfectly circular in outline, with deeply serrated petals, just full enough and built high in center; plant strong and healthy, comes very quick

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Gladioli.

Such gladioli as America, Mrs. F. King, Augusta, Shakespeare, May and others make a profitable spring crop in benches. Do not make the mistake of dibbling them in indiscriminately among carnations and other plants. Give them a bench to themselves, with a good rose or mum soil to grow in. Plant four inches apart in the rows and let the rows be twelve to fifteen inches apart. This will give them ample space in which to grow. Do not set out all your gladioli bulbs at one time, but plant in batches under glass until the middle of March. This will ensure a constant succession of flowers from early April onward. In spite of the introduction of quite a number of new gladioli, none of them are as yet of quite so pleasing a color as America, nor do they sell so well. If restricted to but two sorts, the small grower should take America and Augusta.

Acacias.

Plants of Acacia armata, A. Drummondii, A. Baileyana, A. pubescens and others intended for Easter will only require a cool house to bring them into flower on time. Acacias are cool-loving subjects and it is not advisable to give them a winter temperature of over 45 degrees at night. Before the armatas start to make young growths, take off a batch of cuttings and place them in sand in a cool propagating house. The majority will root and if kept grown on, as is easily done, plants equal in quality to any you can buy will be produced.

Canterbury Bells.

Canterbury bells make beautiful pot plants, and commercial growers as yet do not half appreciate them. What grand subjects they are at Memorial day! How fine they are for bunching and what a lot of flowers they produce! Easter comes too early this year to get them in good bloom, but through the spring, and in fact until they flower naturally outdoors, they are of great value. This reminds us that it is now time to place a batch of plants in a cool house to be coming along. Water carefully during midwinter. Any excess of moisture on the center of the crown or on the foliage is liable to cause damping.

Cinerarias.

A few cinerarias appeared at Christmas this year, puny little things, which no one wanted. They are not a Christmas plant. Their natural flowering time is late winter, and the cooler and airier they are grown, the better in quality they will be. Any which still need repotting should be overhauled right away. Press the compost firmly in the pots and leave a liberal space for water. The soil for the final potting should be a liberal one, consisting of about two-thirds fibrous loam and one-third dried cow manure. A 4-inch pot of fine bone can be added to each wheelbarrow load of compost. If wanted for Easter, you cannot grow your cinerarias too cool, and as the sun will soon be a little strong for them, give them a light shade to prevent wilting.

Rambler Roses.

Our first lot of ramblers, housed at Christmas, are just starting to break. These are intended for Easter, the time when pot roses are in heavy demand. At present a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night is better for them than a higher one, but with the growths well started it can be raised 5 to 10 degrees with advantage. Syringe only on the mornings of clear days, so that the foliage will dry out before nightfall, and be careful to avoid cold draughts, which would soon cause mildew to put in an appearance. Dust the plants with flowers of sulphur on its first appearance and paint a little on the steam pipes in addition.

Spiræas.

Such popular varieties of spiræa as astilboides floribunda, Gladstone and grandiflora, if not yet potted and placed in heat, should be attended to now. You can flower these in eight to ten weeks. The shorter period, however, means continuous hard forcing. It is better to allow ten weeks, which will permit the opening of the spikes in a somewhat lower temperature. The plants then will not suffer when removed to a cool flower store or even if stood outdoors, as is frequently done. The plants stand quite hard forcing. Care should at all times be taken to keep them constantly moist at the root, also to go lightly on fumigating where they are growing.

Lorraine and Cincinnati Begonias.

It is time now to start propagating begonias from leaf cuttings. A cutting bench with a good bottom heat and with perfect drainage should be used. Select well ripened leaves; others are of no value. I like to cut off a piece of the leaf stalk. Do not soak every day with water, or you may lose many by damping. As between Lorraine and Cincinnati, there is now a pretty general consensus of opinion that the latter will assuredly displace the former. It is a better grower, makes a more graceful plant and is much superior to the older variety as a house plant. It also sells at a higher price in the markets; reports from several cities state that it was hard to sell Lorraine in competition with Cincinnati. The latter, therefore, is the variety for florists to grow most heavily for Thanksgiving and Christmas, 1913.

THE EVERY-DAY WORK.

Propagating.

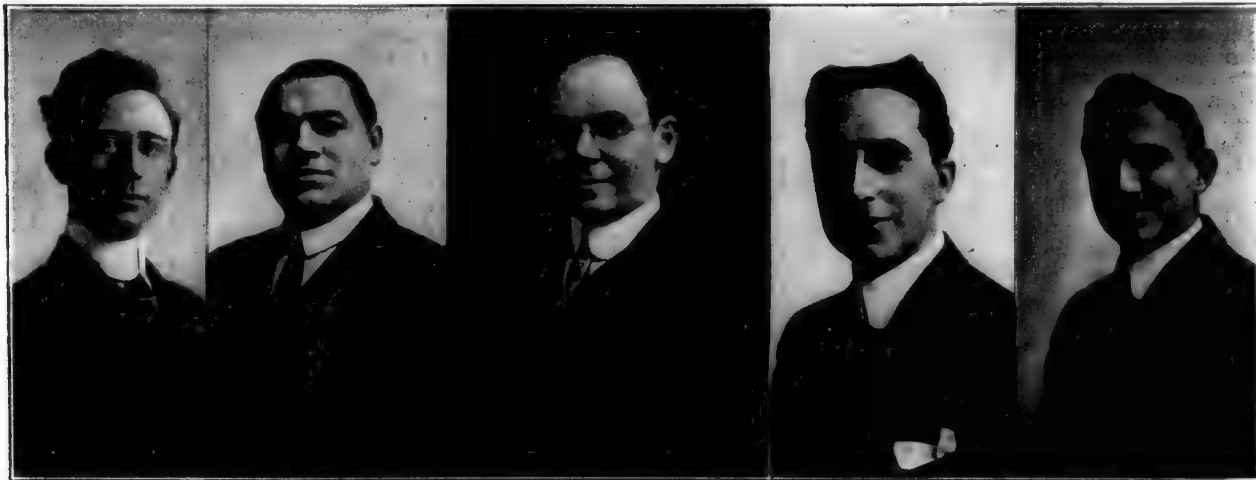

After the turn of the year the plants begin to grow more freely and will stand additional feeding and watering. Although for a time not much difference can be noted in the length of the days, yet the tendency is in the right direction and the worst of the rose growers' trials may be said to be over for another season. It will no longer be necessary to watch every bit of wood taken off the plants and they can be given a good clean-out and started up afresh. As a rule, however, at this time of year every bit of wood that can be spared is needed for propagating, for there is nothing like early plants for success.

The first thing necessary in successful propagating is a clean bench. The old sand must be removed, if this is not already done, and the whole of the woodwork must be thoroughly white-limed, using fresh, hot lime. This will kill all insect life and remove all traces of the damping-off fungus that is so dangerous in the propagating house. Then have the joints of the bottom boards covered with lath, to prevent the sand from falling through, and fill in with three inches of clean sand. The sand should be firmly rammed and leveled and it is then ready for the cuttings. Have a bed or a portion of a bed always ready in this way, and then any wood that can be spared from the plants can be cut up into cuttings and rooted.

Temperature for Propagating.

The proper temperature for rose cuttings to root in is a few degrees higher than that in which they have been growing. Thus, if the night temperature of the house has been 60 degrees, give them a bottom heat of 65 to 70 degrees and keep the tops cool and shaded. This gives them an impulse to root rather than to grow and is more satisfactory generally.

An important point in propagating is not to allow draughts to reach the cuttings. For this reason a bench in a large house, shaded and well away from the top ventilators, is better than a bench in a small, narrow house, such as is usually recommended for propagating.

Selecting the Cuttings.

With regard to the condition of the wood for propagation, almost any wood will root, but if a regular strike is looked for the wood should be in a semi-ripened state. The harder the wood, the longer it will take to root, and when mixed with wood that is greener an uneven strike is inevitable. But it frequently happens that, owing to scarcity of wood, everything must be used and the results are fairly good. One trouble is that some of the younger wood roots more in the sand than is good for it and consequently does not transplant well. But where one has to work up a large stock quickly, such things have to be put up with.

Renewing the Sand.

The one detail more important than any other is absolute cleanliness. Clean sand should be put in at least for every other batch of cuttings. It may be put out in the sun after use, and used again when thoroughly "baked" clear of all fungous germs and other impurities, but it should never carry more than two lots of cuttings in the bench consecutively.

Where the old plants were pushed a little for Christmas and New Year's, there is almost sure to be a little red spider left as a legacy from the extra fire heat and a careful watch must be kept for it. We shall probably have plenty of bright days and the hose can be used freely, especially about the lower parts of the plants, where the insects congregate most. No insect life can long withstand cold water, forcibly applied, and if its value were more appreciated a good deal of money now spent for insecticides could be saved.

Belle Plaine, Ia.—Mrs. Sybilla Woodruff, proprietor of the Belle Plaine Greenhouses, has installed a new Kroeschell boiler. She grows carnations, chrysanthemums and bedding stock.

SEASONABLE CULTURE.

The present season has been a somewhat peculiar one. We have so far had no really cold weather. On many days the weather has been more suggestive of April than January. Hence, in spite of abundant ventilation, the violet plants, particularly the singles, are making more leaf growth than we like to see, and this always affects the crop of flowers. The fall was unusually warm and plants bloomed with great profusion before housing and for some time afterward. Now, however, the crop is not as heavy as we should naturally look for in midwinter. The plants are healthy and vigorous, but the flowers are not there. Weather conditions are responsible for this and a continuance of such conditions will mean a running out of the plants earlier than usual.

To hold singles down to 40 degrees at night has not been possible sometimes, even with the ventilators fully open and the pipes cold. All we could do was to keep the minimum as low as possible. A few degrees higher will speedily excite the plants and cause an increased crop of leaves, which we do not want. On the other hand, the doubles in midwinter should be kept at 42 to 45 degrees at night, or they will not open well. Keep runners picked off; remove weeds and any spotted or decaying leaves. At this season the plants will not need frequent watering, but sometimes the surface soil may seem damp and that below be rather dry. Violets like to have their roots cool and moist, and anything like dryness will injure them and make them an easier prey for red spider if they chance to be near the heating pipes.

Look out for green fly; it will spreadily cause lots of trouble if permitted to gain any foothold. Violets will not stand heavy fumigation. Avoid, therefore, the use of tobacco stems and any of the nicotine extracts. The nicotine papers are perfectly safe. Many of the largest growers now depend on hydrocyanic acid gas. An exposure of twenty to thirty minutes only should be given. This should not be tried by any but careful and experienced hands. For a house 20x100, two jars, each containing two ounces of sulphuric acid and four ounces of water, with one ounce of cyanide of potassium dropped in each, applied at intervals of ten days, have killed all aphids and caused no injury to foliage or bleaching out of flowers. In this case one hour's exposure was given, but probably less would suffice. No doubt other growers can give better formulas. Some use the gas stronger, but it is better to err on the light side.

THE M. RICE COMPANY.

The firm of M. Rice & Co., dealers in florists' supplies, 1220 Race street, Philadelphia, was incorporated under the laws of the state of Pennsylvania January 6, 1913. The capital stock of the new company is $100,000, fully paid. The incorporators are B. Eschner, Arthur Zirkman, Robert Q. Shoch, Frank J. Farney and Raymond Brunswick.

The firm of M. Rice & Co. was established in 1894 by the late Moses Rice. The firm was successful from the start, the business growing rapidly. Bernard Eschner was admitted to partnership January 1, 1898. The firm remained unchanged in personnel and in name from that time until Mr. Rice's death last spring. Since then Mr. Eschner has carried the entire weight of the business on his shoulders, a heavy responsibility, as its scope is world-wide. Wishing to keep the splendid organization together, to divide responsibility and to increase the sphere of the firm's activities, Mr. Eschner decided to incorporate and infuse new blood by joining with him the most promising men of the house. The name selected, the M. Rice Co., is a tribute to the sterling worth of the founder of the house. The officers are: President and treasurer, B. Eschner; vice-president, Arthur Zirkman; secretary, Raymond Brunswick.

Of the four young men who will assist Mr. Eschner in upholding the reputation of the house, three are well known outside of Philadelphia. Arthur Zirkman has been traveling for the house since January 1, 1904. The same month four years later saw the addition of Robert Q. Shoch. July of the same year, 1908, found Frank J. Farney looking after the firm's interests in Chicago and the middle west. The debutant of the quartette joined last July, since which time he has been hard at work on the floor of the firm's building. The name of this promising young man is Raymond Brunswick; he is Mr. Eschner's nephew.

The wisdom and foresight shown in the new order of things justifies the prediction of a bright future for the corporation.

THE VINCENT FAMILY.

While Richard Vincent, Jr., ex-president of the S. A. F., and his wife were in Chicago on Mr. Vincent's recent lecturing tour, they received word of the arrival of a new grandchild at their home at White Marsh, Md. The accompanying illustration, reproduced from a photograph taken at Christmas, shows the Vincent family. With his usual modesty, ex-President Vincent is in the extreme background. In the group with Mr. and Mrs. Vincent are three sons, a daughter, and sixteen grandchildren.

ST. LOUIS.

The Southwestern Market.

Local business since the holidays has been fairly good, the weather conditions remaining about the same. Bright sunshine and a fairly high temperature have brought a large cut of flowers from all our local growers. Trade for New Year's day was excellent, and the large supply cut prices almost to half what was asked at Christmas. The week opened with buying at times quite heavy, but the supply was so large that low prices had to prevail in order to move stock.

Carnations, more than any other flowers, have fallen in price and increased in supply. Some good stock was offered during the week as low as $10 per thousand. There are more whites than of the colored varieties. Roses, too, can be counted among the items that increased in supply and suffered in price. In Killarney all the wholesale houses have large supplies coming in daily and good stock can be had as low as $5 per hundred. There is also a good supply of Bride, Maid, Ivory and Maryland. Beauties, too, have gone down in price considerably and the supply has been quite large in all grades. California violets have held up to $1 per hundred all through the week, with quite a good demand. Paper White narcissi have been a glut and many went to waste for want of demand. Romans are also plentiful, with the price as low as $15 per thousand. Callas and Easter lilies are coming in freely, with good demand. Fine valley can now be had in large quantities at any of the wholesale houses. Sweet peas are fine and the supply large.

New Year's trade was fairly good among the retailers. West end florists say it was better than last year, as a great many kept open house and used decorations of cut flowers.

Various Notes.

Fred Lembke, representing W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, spent last week here calling on the local and suburban florists. He reports a successful week.

Julius Koenig, city forester, reports that the recent fine weather started the sap in the maple trees and shrubs throughout the city. The usual tree trimming by his large force has been stopped, but he thinks little damage will result, even should a cold snap come along.

C. Young & Sons Co. made a fine decorating job of the annual Imperial ball. The decorator used several hundred long Beauties and a great many other flowers. Business has been extra good with this concern since the holidays.

Andy Hoffmann, head of the George Waldbart force, says this holiday season was by far the best in his experience. Everything sold well, especially large blooming plants and long Beauties. They had an immense supply of everything.

A. Jablonsky, of Olivette, had a great cut of fancy carnations for the holidays. They were handled by H. G. Berning with good success.

E. W. Guy and Henry Emunds, of Belleville, called during the week and said that Belleville florists all had splendid business for the holidays, with demand about equal for blooming plants and cut stock. A good deal of funeral work has been made up since the New Year.

W. C. Smith, president of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., says that business for the holidays this year was the best in his experience. The big force employed by this concern was kept busy filling orders for the local and outside trade.

The Engelmann Botanical Club will hold its New Year meeting Monday, January 12, at the Missouri Botanic Garden. Secretary Pring says special features will be introduced at this meeting, of which announcements will be made later. From this a large attendance is expected.

Mrs. Berning, wife of H. G. Berning, has been ill and confined to her home for the last three weeks. She is reported by Mr. Berning as not showing any improvement up to this writing.

The publicity committee, consisting of R. J. Windler, Charles Beyer and C. Bergstermann, will, now that the busy season is over, start to work on the fund that was started by the Florists' Club at its last meeting. A full report of their work will be read at the meeting this week, Thursday afternoon, January 9.

Edwin Denker, the St. Charles florist, who buys his supplies in this market, says he had a large trade for Christmas in both plants and cut flowers.

The fine weather for the holidays made things quite busy for the florists near the big cemeteries. Fred H. Meinhardt and the Koenig Floral Co., two of the largest in that section, had a busy time supplying decorations of this nature, especially at Christmas.

J. Krug, of Alton, has had a busy time since New Year's. He has had several large decorations.

The Alton Floral Co. reports big trade for the holidays. George Madsen, head of the firm, is reported confined to his bed. The family fears pneumonia.

A. G. Fehr, of Belleville, has been reported quite ill at his home, but from last accounts is on the mend.

The R. J. Windler Wholesale Floral Co. says that holiday business was beyond all expectations. This concern had a large supply of extra good stock in everything seasonable, and reports valley as a great seller at both New Year's and Christmas.

George H. Angermueller has recently had an extra amount of shipping, in supplies and cut stock. His holiday trade was fully up to expectations.

Ostertag Bros., as usual, had a number of large decorations at the downtown hotels and clubs for New Year's eve.

OBITUARY.

John T. Temple.

John T. Temple, the veteran Davenport florist, fell dead Saturday afternoon, January 4, at Oakdale cemetery, where he had been attending the funeral of a friend.

Mr. Temple had been in good health so far as known, but had had frequent attacks of heart failure. This is thought to have been the cause of death. He had been a resident of Davenport for many years and was widely known.

Mr. Temple was born in Manchester, England, March 7, 1844, and came to America with his parents when a small boy. After working several years with a florist in the east, his father bought a tract of five acres near Little's Grove, Ia., and three years later took up residence in Davenport. On the death of his father in 1862, John T. Temple took up his work and soon became known as one of the leading florists in his vicinity. For several years he held the position of president of the Tri-City Florists' Association, and on the organization of the Society of Iowa Florists, at Des Moines, July 1, 1903, he was chosen, as the state's most prominent florist, to be the first president. The portrait on this page is the one which appeared in The Review at that time; it probably is 20 years old, but was his favorite photograph. Mr. Temple was a member of nearly all the trade societies and a regular convention attendant. He served a term as director of the S. A. F. and for years was a director in the Florists' Hail Association. He also belonged to many local bodies, including the Volunteer Firemen, the K. of P. and the I. O. O. F. December 30, 1868, he was united in marriage with Miss Josephine Ahern, who passed away in 1906. Surviving are only two sisters, Mrs. Joseph Gayman and Mrs. Louise Downs.

Funeral services were held privately Tuesday, January 7, at the home of Mrs. Downs, followed by public services at Trinity cathedral. There was a large attendance and a wealth of flowers. Practically all the florists of the Tri-Cities were present in a body. Interment was at Pine Hill cemetery.

Mrs. Jas. Murdoch.

Mrs. Margaret Murdoch died December 31, aged 71 years. Mrs. Murdoch was the widow of James Murdoch, one of the old-time florists of Pittsburgh. For many years they were on Smithfield street, with greenhouses and nursery on Squirrel Hill. Mrs. Murdoch presented the city with what is known as the Murdoch entrance to Schenley park and the name has been associated with the florists' business of Pittsburgh for more than fifty years. There are three surviving sons, two of whom are still in the business, Jas. B. Murdoch and W. B. Murdoch, who have a wholesale house on Ninth street, with greenhouses at Canonsburg, Pa.

Robert B. Hoon.

Robert B. Hoon, the well-known florist and market gardener, died suddenly at his home in Mercer, Pa. He had been in poor health for several years, the result of a stroke of paralysis. He had not been feeling well for several days and experienced considerable trouble with his heart, but his condition was not such as to cause any uneasiness. He had spent the greater part of his life in Mercer and was respected by everybody. He was an elder in the Second Presbyterian church. He was married three times, and is survived by his wife, two sons and one daughter.

James W. McNary.

James W. McNary, one of the proprietors of the Dayton & Xenia Nurseries and an influential resident of Dayton, O., for some years, passed away at his residence, 215 Summit street, Dayton, December 31. He had been gradually failing in health for several years. Two days previous to his death he was attacked with pneumonia, and this complication culminated in his death. He was born in Harrison county, Ohio, March 1, 1857, and had been engaged in the nursery business for years. He was at one time connected with the firm of Hoover & Gaines, west of Dayton. Surviving him are his widow and three small children, Helen, James and Robert McNary.

B. J. Wakeman.

Bradford J. Wakeman, of B. J. Wakeman & Co., the nursery firm of Chebanse, Ill., died at his home near Chebanse, December 21, at the age of 71 years. He was a son of James H. Wakeman, who conducted a nursery in that vicinity in the late fifties.

Bradford Wakeman was born at Elmhurst, Ill. In 1861 he enlisted as a musician in the Thirty-third Regiment Illinois Infantry and was soon promoted to "chief fifer," in which capacity he served during the entire Civil war and participated in many of its important battles. After being mustered out, he settled at Chebanse and married Etta Root, and since then he had been active in the promotion of his business interests. He leaves to mourn his loss, besides his wife, two sons, George and Oliver, of Chebanse, and three daughters, Mrs. Mary Ballard and Mrs. Emily Sykes, of that place, and Mrs. August Erickson, of Kankakee.

William J. Young.

William J. Young, one of the pioneer florists in the Philadelphia district, died January 3, at the home of his son, W. J. Young, Jr., in Germantown. He was 77 years of age. The funeral was held January 6 and was largely attended, there being many flowers.

D. L. Dalgleish.

David Laidley Dalgleish, for many years a greenhouse builder and carpenter contractor at Milwaukee, Wis., passed away at his home, 264 Twenty-seventh street, on the morning of December 25. He was born at Selkirk, Scotland, September 30, 1843, and made his home at Milwaukee in 1872. He has been an active member in Scottish gatherings. He is survived by his wife and three sons, Alec, David and Ben, and four daughters, Mrs. C. H. Johannsen, Elizabeth and Helen Dalgleish and Mrs. Walter Bender.

Hampton, Tenn.—The Hampton Evergreen Co. states that it is no longer in the greens business.

Normal, Ill.—Robert M. Dale, formerly in business at Bloomington, Ill., is now at 1007 North Linden street, in this town. He has erected three greenhouses, one of them for violets, another for general stock, and the third for vegetable plants.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

ONE of the serious shortages is that of nicotine insecticides; none of the manufacturers is able to fill orders.

CHRISTMAS money should now be coming in strongly and collections, always slow in December, may be expected to make a much better showing this month.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves
the bother of annual renewal by sending
The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-
two visits of the paper.

THE trade will find it of importance to note the quarantine order issued December 17 by the horticultural authorities in California. It is printed in full on page 66 of this issue.

READERS are again reminded that full name and address (not for publication) are necessary if inquiries are to receive attention. Inquiries can not receive attention unless the identity of the sender is known.

IF the parcel post has accomplished nothing else thus far, for the first week of its operation it has pretty effectively demoralized the rest of the postal service.
If your Review is late, be assured it was mailed on time and that the parcel post is responsible for the delay.

G. E. BLACK, Independence, Ia., whose article "Observations on Gladioli," read before a western horticultural society, recently appeared in The Review, is afraid he will be accused of having taken a Rip Van Winkle nap unless his remarks are amended to make clear that since the address was given E. E. Stewart has introduced the variety No. 52 as President Taft and that the Coblenz
No. 312, or Emma, is now known as Violet King.

BRITISH ROSE SOCIETY.

The annual report of the National Rose Society, the second largest of England's horticultural organizations, is just to hand and contains some points of interest to Americans. Of course, the membership is largely amateur, but during the last twelve months 810 new members have joined the society. Allowing for the losses by death and resignation, the total number of members is now 5,504. Taking the year as a whole, two new members a day have, on an average, been added to the list of membership. The financial statement shows an income of approximately $20,000, with a balance of $2,000 and a reserve of $7,500. The society spent in publishing in the year over $3,500; for show expenses, $2,500; for prize money, nearly $4,000; for medals, etc., over $750. The first spring show ever attempted by the society is to be held May 1, in London.

WELL PLEASED READERS.

Buy of the Advertisers.

It is an axiom in the advertising world that the publication that is bought to read is a good advertising medium. Hence The Review values such letters as these:

The articles on "Art in Floral Arrangement," by Mr. Brown, have been worth the price of the paper alone. Things of a high order are what give merit to a trade paper as well as to any other business.—Frank M. Paine, Traverse City, Mich., December 27, 1912.

Enclosed you will find that dollar—a dollar that is better spent than twenty-five others, for The Review is simply indispensable.—Roy E.
Erb, care Milot-Mills Co., Wenatchee, Wash., December 22, 1912.

BONA FIDE CIRCULATION.

In these days of the square deal in business it is considered unprofessional for a publisher to save up his sample copy privilege at the postoffice and then run out a big sample copy edition
—yet some publishers do it.

Such sample copy editions always are issued for effect on the advertiser —the effort is to palm them off as representing the regular circulation.

When any publisher comes at an advertiser with some sort of an affidavit as to the circulation of ONE issue, the advertiser will be safe in assuming that the REGULAR edition is decidedly smaller.

A good many advertisers who are on the square themselves, in their dealings with the public, decline to use space in any publication which springs a ONE edition affidavit until a similar affidavit has been produced showing the SMALLEST edition within one year. The smallest edition is likely to be the REGULAR edition.

President Farquhar has appointed the National Flower Show Committee for a full term of six years, to succeed

J. A. Valentine, whose term expired

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Following the holiday rush, business on the local market has quieted down considerably and, while the regular run of business enables the wholesalers to clean out, there is no great flurry at the present writing. Possibly the most important feature just at this time is the steady increase in carnations, which are being cut in large quantities. Apparently the big crops that failed to materialize for Christmas are just beginning to come on the market. Both growers and commission men are looking for enormous cuts before many more days. Thus far the demand has been fairly well equal to the supply and, while no more than moderate prices are being obtained, the whole-salers are able to move them without any great amount of trouble. Shipping trade has not been extraordinarily brisk since New Year's and the greater amount of the stock now being received is being disposed of to the local

FANCY STOCK OF THE

Corsage Flowers

VALLEY - VIOLETS - ORCHIDS

THE RETAILERS who are using our stock are enjoying a handsome increase in their Corsage work--it's a fine money-maker when the corsage trade gets coming your way. Just now the popular flowers are our fancy Double Violets and big Trianae Cattleyas, with Valley--you need Valley in every bunch, and ours always is good. In a little while, too, we can send you Sweet Peas that will make everybody sit up and take notice.

BEAUTIES

There are two features of our Beauty supply that make the trade marvel--the quality and the steadiness of the cut. All growers get good Beauties once in a while, but ours always are fine and WE ALWAYS HAVE THEM. If you have a trade that calls for Beauties we can be of service to you. Glad to help.

FANCY ROSES

There are three reasons why the thinking buyers are ordering their Roses of us this season:--1st, there is no finer lot of stock; 2d, our growers doubled their glass last summer, giving us quantity, and, 3d, we have a full line. Specially strong on Killarneys and the new yellow roses.

CARNATIONS

We ask all those not thoroughly satisfied with their present source of supply to try us on Carnations--might try us anyway, for we are known as having the largest supply of strictly high-grade Carnations on this market. We are sure we can please you.

retailers. Owing to the unsettled weather conditions, the retailers in the city have not found any special demand. The first snow of the year came January 3, when a drop in the temperature took place. Since that date more or less snow has fallen, but the weather has not been severe, as it was last year, when zero weather had a firm grip on this region. The cloudy weather, however, has been a help to the wholesalers, as it has prevented a bigger cut of carnations and, while it has affected the retailers, it has held the market steady.

The greatest call at the present time is for stock suitable for funeral work and enough short roses cannot be had to supply the demand. The longer ones do not find such a ready market, but appear to be moving along in good shape. Killarneys are still in big supply, but roses as a general rule are being cut in smaller quantities and the heavy crops are passing off. Beauties are of excellent quality. The long stemmed ones are being cut freely and command a good price. Richmonds are not so much in evidence and have not been since the holiday season. The new roses, such as Mrs. Aaron Ward, Sunburst, Lady Hillingdon, Radiance, Melody and Mrs. Taft, are bringing good prices and sell almost as fast as they are cut.

Violets have dropped off and during the last week the demand for these was rather light. Orchids and valley also met with a like fate. On the other hand, lilies and other flowers in demand for funeral work have experienced a brisk call and prices have taken an upward trend, with hardly enough to go around. There are quantities of Paper Whites and Romans that are selling slowly. Jonquils have become abundant, but the quality is nothing extra. Quite a few tulips are seen, but they still are too short in stem to find much favor.

Sweet peas may be called the one scarce item at the present moment. All the good ones find a ready market and there is a call for more, of which, strangely enough, the sellers do not appear to take advantage by asking better prices. Retailers themselves admit that good peas would easily bring better prices than have been the rule in this market.

CARNATIONS

December Weather.

It is interesting to note that in December the growers enjoyed fifty-one per cent of the possible quantity of sunshine; the normal for the month is forty-one per cent. At the same time the mean temperature was 4 degrees above normal and the wind movement below normal. Consequently, December could be described as an ideal growing month. Probably the growers will not soon have another December so favorable for the Christmas crop.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

New Year's business was fully up to expectations, excepting, possibly, on the holiday itself. There was a large supply of material, an excellent shipping and a fair local demand, at prices about one-third lower than at Christmas.

Business for the first week of this year has been fair. The open weather, unusually mild for the most part, has encouraged production, while the demand is, of course, lighter after the holidays. The carnation crop is coming on fast. Prices have weakened more than on any other flower. The quality generally is fine. Roses are going off crop a little, particularly Richmond. The shorts are selling much better than the fancy grades. The latter are quite cheap, a condition that is unlikely to last long. Violets held their own well until January 4. Since then they, too, have fallen off in price. Sweet peas of fine quality are more plentiful in all the colors. White lilac is superb and now can be had with reasonable certainty. Freesia has made its appearance. There are just a few more daffodils. Gardenias are coming on crop. There is a moderate supply of cypripediums and cattleyas, also some mixed orchids. Valley is quiet. Greens are still dull.

The Parcel Post.

The effect of the new parcel post that went into effect on New Year's day, so far as its usefulness to florists, generally was considered problematical. John W. McIntyre is the first wholesaler to report on the new arrangement. Mr. McIntyre says that for light packages of flowers and greens, such as sweet peas and asparagus, the new method is cheap and reasonably quick. Mr. McIntyre's first shipment by parcel post came from Holtwood, Pa., in the center of the state. It cost 14 cents

NEW YORK.

The Market.

New Year's week was quiet enough for all branches of the trade to recuperate after the strenuous Christmas season. Even the holiday celebration of the advent of 1913 hardly created a ripple in the placid market. Apart from the banquet to the President and the funeral of Ambassador Reid, no special call for cut flowers developed. A few large weddings and several society dinners tended to relieve the monotony of the week. Prices of roses and carnations sank gradually to the usual midwinter level and little change is now anticipated before the early Easter activity materializes. Between this and the National Flower Show in April there seems little danger of stagnation and the retail trade looks forward hopefully to ten busy weeks, which culminate March 23. The two weeks' interval before the exhibition which follows Easter gives but little time for the finishing touches of "the greatest show on earth," as Chairman Totty and his aides begin to reverently call it.

The left-over plants and combination baskets from Christmas sold well for New Year's. Cut flowers were not widely called for and wholesale prices were less than half the Christmas quotations. American Beauties led the decline and all varieties of roses joined in the procession, with the exception of a few of the latest novelties, and of these there is yet a limited supply. Of Killarney and the older kinds there seems to be no limit. Carnations now are abundant and 4 cents was top for everything but the specialties. Lilies and valley are moving slowly and at lower quotations. Violets also have fallen, with a top at 50 cents as the week closed. Many thousands of white violets met with no demand whatever. Good single violets sell best this season. There are plenty of orchids, especially cattleyas and cypripediums, and no wide demand, the quotations depending on necessity rather than quality. Gardenias hold well, the best revolving around $5 per dozen. There is now no dearth of callas and they must be exceptional to go above $10 to $12 per hundred. There is an abundance of sweet peas, wall-flowers, narcissi, hyacinths and tulips. Poinsettias have followed mums into the limbo for the season.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club will hold its first session for the new year Monday evening, January 13. President Siebrecht agrees with President Wilson that 13 is his lucky number. Mr. Siebrecht will announce his committees, on the judicious appointment of which so largely the future of the club depends. C. W. Scott and wife have returned from their Bermuda vacation, celebrating New Year's at that delightful resort, to which many New York florists will journey before the robins nest again.

Those peripatetic travelers, the Dailedouze brothers, of Flatbush, have been taking a look at the Panama canal.

At the Whitelaw Reid obsequies last week, at the cathedral of St. John the Divine, over 200 beautiful floral emblems were seen, including wreaths from President Taft and Theodore Roosevelt, one of 10,000 violets from the Tribune staff and an anchor from the British man-of-war, the order coming by wireless to Florist Cooke, of Washington. Nearly every prominent retail florist in New York had his share of the orders.

Three plate glass windows were shattered in the Briarcliffe novelty and flower store, Forty-eighth street and Madison avenue, opposite the store of A. T. Bunyard, by the big wind storm January 2.

The invitation of the Boston society for the S. A. F. convention for 1914 meets with general approbation in New York.

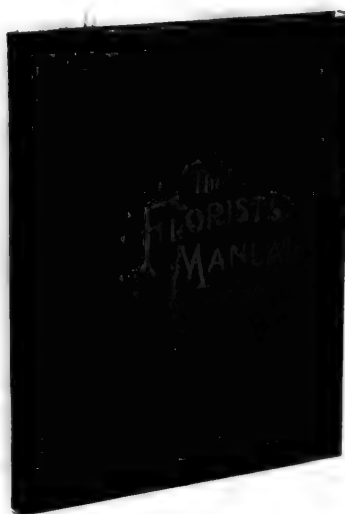

The MacNiff Horticultural Co. has moved into its new building at 56 Vesey street and has made many improvements in the front of the five-story headquarters which the concern has secured for a long term of years. All the departments will be in working order by the middle of the month, and auction sales will begin in the first part of March.

All the seedsmen are rapidly distributing their catalogues and getting ready for the spring rush, which, judging by the remarkable weather to date, seems near.

January 3 the award committee of the Florists' Club visited Northport, L. I., and the greenhouse establishment of J. D. Cockcroft, to see his new carnation, Northport, growing. The report of the committee will be given at the club meeting January 13.

Max Schling last week had one of the largest wedding decorations of his career. Over 10,000 roses were used in the work. He reports many weddings booked for January.

FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertisers

the wheel, having recovered from a severe illness, and engagements are many for the winter season.

M. A. Bowe had a couple of dinner decorations last week that were up in the four figures and McConnell, Dards, Bunyard and Clarke's Sons all say the season has opened brilliantly, with the bookings of weddings and dinners more numerous than ever.

The president of the New York Florists' Club is an enthusiastic bowler and a member of the Astorias. All the gardeners' societies in this section are showing renewed interest in this once popular sport and a national tournament is already planned for the week of the National Flower Show, Thumm's fine alleys having been engaged. Many handsome cups and prizes have already been secured by Secretary Ebel. Splendid clubs are now rolling regularly at Yonkers, Rutherford, Glen Cove, Tuxedo, Flatbush and Astoria.

It is J. S. Nicholas and not John D. Nicholas who will open the florists' store at the entrance of the new Grand Central terminal building at Easter. Mr. Nicholas has a retail store on Forty-second street now, which will be continued. He is also proprietor of the building on West Twenty-eighth street, in which are the wholesale stores of Messrs. Kessler, McManus, Siebrecht & Siebrecht, W. P. Ford and the Growers' Cut Flower Co.

J. Austin Shaw.

December 27 the members of the sales force of Wertheimer Bros. were entertained by the firm with a dinner at Blaser's, on Broadway. All present voted the affair most enjoyable. The flow of eloquence and enthusiasm was unrestrained and the participants disbanded only at a late hour.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Although the high prices asked for cut flowers, especially carnations, put a certain damper on the activity of business, it was only of short duration, for January 3 and the day following the demand, both locally and shipping, was quite brisk. Monday, January 6, everything was cleaned up before closing time. The installation of the recently elected county officials, coupled with plenty of funeral work, was the direct cause. The weather has been dark for some time, which, of course, reduced the daily receipts. Everything seems to move in a most satisfactory manner.

Club Meeting.

January 2 a lively attendance was on hand to help install the officers of 1913 in the new and cozy clubrooms, located in the Quiet House, at 86 Mason street. N. Zweifel read an article published in one of the trade journals, entitled, "Florists' Clubs, Their Field and Their Duty," written by J. O. Thilow, and read before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston. The article contained many good points and valuable information and much credit is due Mr. Zweifel for his idea of bringing it up at that time. C. Dallwig was master of ceremonies in installing the new officers and in a fine manner gave everyone a clear idea of what is expected of him for the coming year.

John Terry, who conducted a flower shop at Second street and Grand avenue, has closed his doors for good.

The A. F. Kellner Co. had the decorations at the Deutcher Club, for the Sylvester celebration.

A. Sanders, of Skidelsky & Co., Philadelphia, made the rounds in this vicinity about the first of the year. Other visitors were James Matthewson, Sheboygan, and F. Bliese, Waukesha, Wis.

The Currie Bros. Co. made quite an elaborate display of poultry supplies at the poultry show, held in the Auditorium January 3 to 5. E. O.

NAME OF GERANIUM.

Will you please give us the name of the enclosed geranium plants?

J. H. M. & C.

The flowers were badly withered, but as nearly as could be judged the variety is S. A. Nutt. C. W.

NAME OF PLANT.

I send a cutting of a plant that blooms outdoors all winter in the state of Washington and seems to look extremely well. Can you tell me what the name is and if it can be propagated from cuttings or seeds? It is new to me. They call it the devil tree, as it is so prickly one can not touch it without it seeming as if needles are sticking you. R. G.

The specimen is Ulex Europæus, commonly called whin, furze and gorse in Europe, where it grows abundantly. It has no doubt been introduced into your state from Great Britain and should establish itself quickly, as the two climates are somewhat similar. It can be propagated from cuttings or seeds. The seeds are produced abundantly and you will find this method of propagation the simplest. C. W.

SAVING CUCUMBER SEED.

I have saved some cucumber seed from vines grown under glass last summer, with the purpose of establishing my own strain this season. But I have been told that if the seed is sown this winter or early spring, the plants will go to vine instead of producing fruits. Is that correct? Your advice will be much appreciated. H. J. P.

It is a fact that new seed, just dried, is not the best to plant, but seed that has been dry several months is perfectly safe. Seed that is 2 or 3 years old, however, is better than 1-year-old seed. Although the plants are not quite so strong in growth, they fruit a little more heavily. Excellent results are obtained, however, from seed saved the previous season and such seed is quite generally used. It should be kept in a warm, dry place, so as to age faster. H. G.

MAGNESIA LIME FOR SOIL.

Is magnesia lime a good thing to use to sweeten the soil in greenhouse benches? If so, how should it be used? What is the right quantity per square yard and how often should it be applied? Will it injure growing plants or lettuce? Which is preferable for this purpose, the common lime or the magnesia lime? Should the common lime be allowed to air-slake before being used? W. H. D.

Calcined magnesia, or magnesia lime, is chemically different from common lime and altogether too expensive to be used in its place. I can not say what effect it would have on the soil, but it can not equal ordinary lime and might be somewhat detrimental to the soil.

The Market.

"Stock is extremely scarce." These few words tell the whole story. Stock is scarce and has been so for some time.

Roses are hardly equal to the demand, which has been quite brisk. Carnations have to be ordered in advance, if any quantity is desired, as the daily shipments are comparatively small. Heralds of spring are arriving in larger quantities as the season advances. Among these, Paper White narcissus is the most plentiful and a large number of this flower came in just too late to be of use for Christmas. Yellow daffs are coming along nicely. Roman hyacinths have also put in an appearance. There has been an unusually heavy demand for valley. Lilies have been in good supply, but are now falling off. Sweet peas have been scarce.

New Year's business, in this city, was the best ever. Some of the retailers pronounced it a little Christmas rush.

Various Notes.

George Hopp, of Grand Rapids, is shipping in some grand single violets. Some of the finest Killarney seen here are from the houses of F. J. Knecht & Co., Fort Wayne, Ind.

The daily cut from A. J. Stahelin's place at present is from 5,000 to 6,000 carnations, but these are but a drop in the bucket.

James Taylor's place, at Mount Clemens, has been acquired by Achille Van Beversluys, also of the Bath City. Mr. Van Beversluys has been in the employ of Fred Breitmeyer for some time and filled the position of foreman in the old range until Christmas, when he moved to the Taylor place. He is well known to the trade as a first-class grower and it was with much regret that Mr. Breitmeyer let him go. He has the best wishes from all the boys in the trade. The output from Mr. Van Beversluis' establishment will be handled by the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange.

The bright weather we have had since the holidays has done much toward hastening along the crop of Thos. F. Browne, of Greenfield.

George E. Browne is keeping busy these days and his stock looks the part.

Breitmeyer's decorators have been busy with some large decorations at the Hotel Pontchartrain.

Beard Bros. cleaned up well on their stock of plants for Christmas. They are well pleased with trade in general.

A check forger has been taking advantage of the holiday rush among the florists. He relieved E. A. Fettes of $12.50 and the Bamb Floral Co. of $7 in cash. Each also contributed a box of Beauties.

Fred Breitmeyer is shipping excellent single violets and his roses are fine.

Now that Norman Sullivan has the new greenhouse completed, he is happy. The house gives him an additional show room, 20x85. Sixty feet is used as a show room and is partitioned off from the rear twenty-five feet with a wood partition. The rear is glazed over as well, but is used as a store-room and a large door allows the delivery auto to be loaded inside.

Robert Klagge took special pains to have a good crop for Christmas and was right on the job with fine freesia, single violets and daffodils, as well as roses and carnations.

When J. B. Dinser, of Highland Park, was returning from the market one day last week a street car collided with his delivery car, doing considerable damage. The accident occurred at Canfield avenue and St. Anlivan was injured some time ago met with a mishap. Fortunately, neither Mr. Dinser nor his mother, who was with him, was injured.

Main 974, the phone of the Detroit Cut Flower Supply House, is kept pretty busy since Mr. Maynard has been in charge.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange exceeded all previous years in the volume of business done during the holidays. This firm handled the best holly and mistletoe seen in Detroit, selling over 1,000 pounds of the latter. A big business in ruscus and statice was also done, and many hundred plant baskets were sent to local stores.

James Carey has a fine crop of Killarny coming along for January.

Leopold Mallast, of Mount Clemens, is cutting some choice snapdragon.

B. Schroeter is already showing some Dutch hyacinths, in pots, in his store window.

The Bomb Floral Co. received large shipments of stock, for the holidays, from the greenhouses of August Von Boeselager, Mount Clemens. Mr. Von Boeselager had the decorations in the Park hotel, at Mount Clemens, for the Kay wedding. His work would have been a credit to a New York florist.

When business is dull at the stand of Hufford & Maebius, in the Broadway market, then Mr. Hufford is kept busy counting his profits at the Broadway
Lunch stand, which he also owns.

A. Van Beversluys, of Mount Clemens, is shipping some fine sweet peas, but not enough to go around. Sydney Tinkler, of the same city, is also busy cutting carnations, but with all the earnations coming in there is still a shortage. H. S.

The Market.

Business was good during the opening week of the new year, and there is no great surplus of anything at present. We are at last getting seasonable winter weather, following a spell of abnormal mildness, and this should help to keep trade good. Roses are not arriving quite so freely and are moving well. Russell seems to be more prominent than Beauty in Boston and all the retailers seem to like it. Both Killarney and White Killarney are selling well. Among the yellows, Mrs. Aaron Ward seems to be more popular than either Sunburst or Hillingdon. Carnations are still off crop with many growers and prices show a little advance over a week ago. Beacon continues to sell well. Pink Delight is also a prime favorite. Enchantress is much less abundant than a year ago. White Wonder is the leader in its color, followed by White Enchantress.

Violets held at $1 per hundred. They met with a good sale on New Year's day. Sweet peas are rather too plentiful and prices have softened. Valley is selling well and so are Freesia Purity, trumpet daffodils, yellow marguerites and snapdragons. Longiflorum lilies have been selling briskly. There are some speciosums also coming in. Stevia is less plentiful. Tulips of several colors are now quite abundant and several varieties of yellow narcissi are arriving. There is a good supply of Cattleya Trianae and other orchids. Gardenias are of good quality. The demand for green stock is better than a week ago.

Various Notes.

December, 1912, was much warmer than normal. Rainfall was over six inches, considerably above the average. There was a deficiency in precipitation of over eight inches for the year, however.

Comley, on Park street, among other flowers in his window, has hybrid gerberas, Daphne odorata, dimorphothecas, Swanley White violets, rhododendrons and chorisemas.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, have now a fine assortment of tulips and narcissi. Among the latter are two good bicolor varieties, Silver Spur and Walter T. Ware.

dent, J. K. M. L. Farquhar, reports of the various committees and other business.

Among the growers who have recently added auto delivery cars to their outfits are Paine Bros., of Randolph, who have a fine Stoddard-Dayton, and Patterson's, of Wollaston, the newest type of Autocar.

I am pleased to report that Frank P. Putnam, of Lowell, is now able to be around again after a siege of pneumonia. The White Wonder, Pink Delight, Gloriosa and other carnations coming to the Flower Growers' Sales Co. from Mr. Putnam's North Tewksbury greenhouses are of splendid quality.

Wm. Patterson, of Wollaston, is sending in large daily shipments of Paper Whites, Romans and trumpet daffodils to the Boston Flower Exchange.

Geo. W. Foster, of Tewksbury, grows carnations well. At the Boston Coöperative Market I noted fine Rosette, White Wonder, Winsor and Beacon from him.

Work on the new wholesale flower market at Winthrop Square is being rapidly pushed ahead and the Boston Flower Exchange will move there about February 1. The new quarters are commodious, a vast improvement over the present dark, congested market.

R. C. Bridgman, of the Newton Rose Conservatories, is having a fine cut of roses at present. Business at his store at 67 Beacon street, Boston, has been good since the holidays.

D. F. Hutchinson & Son, of Lexington, are devoting their houses to carnations and sweet peas this season and now have a heavy pick of each.

Thomas Capers, of Highlandville, tried a house of Beacon which he carried over and cut back. The results are astonishing, the stems being far ahead of those on new stock. He has a fine crop of Pink Delight, White Enchantress and Fenn and still grows the old Queen well.

Zinn, on Park street, is making a specialty of crotons and other colored-leaved plants in window boxes. I noticed some fine phalaenopsis in his orchid display.

Burgess & Cooney, of Maplewood, are shipping quantities of Paper Whites and daffodils to the Boston Coöperative Market and will have a fine lot of bulbous flowers until after Easter.

J. W. Foote, who for several years grew such sensationally fine Bouvardia Humboldtii, has dropped its culture this season. He has a fine house of Pink Delight carnation, one of White Wonder, and has as fine Beacon as are seen in the Boston market.

We are glad to see Edward MacMullin around again after a long sickness. Business at the big Boylston street store has been good this winter.

James Farquhar sailed last week for a visit to Italy and southern Europe, to secure a much needed rest. He will no doubt incidentally pick up some new ideas which he may embody in his display at the national show in April.

Letters from John W. Duncan, now of Spokane, and lately of Boston, report the death, December 18, of his father, at the ripe old age of 86. Mr. Duncan is busy on Spokane's new parkway system and hopes soon to place it on the map with any city of like size.

The Waban Rose Conservatories are receiving lots of orders for their new rose, Mrs. Charles Russell, and only a fractional part of the orders for flowers can be filled.

At some of the better class stores Peter Fisher's new carnation, Gorgeous, is now a feature. This looms up over carnations in much the same way as Beauty has heretofore done over other roses.

Cattleya Trianae at present. Some 1,500 flowers are open and many more to come. He has the local market almost to himself on gardenias this season.

January opened with remarkably warm weather. It was 60 degrees in the shade January 3 and the same night the wind reached a velocity of eighty miles an hour. Plenty of loose squares of glass were blown out of greenhouses, but no serious losses were reported. Plowing was quite general here for several days.

W. N. Craig.

PRINCETON, ILL.

January 1 the Trimble Greenhouse Co. took possession of four additional greenhouses which were recently added to its plant on East Peru street. Two of them were purchased from the estate of the late N. P. Colberg. The Trimble company has now sixteen greenhouses, which have a total glass area of over 82,000 square feet. Seven years ago the concern started with two houses and has grown steadily year by year. Nothing but flowers are grown at the Trimble plant, roses being the specialty. Most of the flowers grown are sold at wholesale in Chicago and other large cities. A contract dated January 1 contains an order from the Rock Island railroad for 65,000 carnations to be used during the year on the dining cars and at hotels along the road.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

RALPH M. WARD, New York, is on a western trip.

ALBERT McCULLOUGH has returned to Cincinnati from the Pacific coast.

VISITED ROCHESTER: L. C. Routzahn, Arroyo Grande, Cal.; E. O. Pieper, San Jose, Cal.

THE trade will find it of importance to note the quarantine order issued December 17 by the horticultural authorities in California. It is printed in full on page 66 of this issue.

THE Michael Seed Co., of Sioux City, Ia., has moved into its new building, at 316 Pearl street. The building is of fire-proof construction, covers a space 25x150 feet and is two stories high, with a foundation sufficient to support two more stories.

THE new five-story building for the Portland Seed Co., of Portland, Ore., is nearing completion. The structure covers a space 100x100 feet at East Alder and East First streets, and will cost $40,000. It will be the main home of the company.

THERE was an interesting little gathering of seedsmen and growers' representatives at Washington Tuesday, January 7, to witness the opening of the bids for the government contract for 1913 crop. The order will be more widely distributed this year than usual.

CALIFORNIA had in 1912 probably the best crop of lettuce harvested anywhere in the world, though it was nothing to brag about. Consequently the stocks are cleaning up better than usual and there is a prospect of putting lettuce back in the list of money crops.

CAUTIOUS houses are selling bulbs for 1913 delivery "subject to change in duty." There is no more than a remote prospect that the Democratic administration will get a new tariff law into operation before the 1913 importations are in, but there is every prospect that if it does there will be one important change: the duty on hyacinths will be put back to $2.50 per thousand, as most of the trade believe it was intended to be in the present law.

THE Lima Bean Growers' Association, of Oxnard, Cal., sometimes called the "bean trust," went out of existence December 31. At a meeting of the stockholders, who include practically all of the bean growers in Ventura county, the association was dissolved. It was announced that the growers would reorganize on a coöperative basis. The association was organized three years ago and virtually controlled the price of commercial lima beans.

MAUPIN & BERRYMAN, of King City, Mo., have nearly completed the interior of their seed house. A new twenty-five horse-power engine has been installed.

THE congressional free seeds distribution for 1913 has begun. When the seedsmen begin mailing their catalogues the government begins mailing its seeds.

It is a more or less general complaint that weather conditions, in Europe as well as in this country, have not been favorable to the drying of seed crops, resulting in belated shipments.

R. H. SHUMWAY, of Rockford, Ill., one of the oldest seedsmen in the country, was born and raised within six miles of the store in which he now conducts his business. His father removed to Illinois in 1836. His mother was a cousin of Horace Greeley. He is of Green mountain stock, from the state of Vermont. He claims to be the longest of anyone in the mail order seed trade by six years, beginning his business in 1870.

A COMMENTATOR notes that "there is one matter connected with these successive years of poor seed crops that has a serious aspect, namely, the deterioration of stocks that necessarily follows. If a field of cabbage or beet, for example, has to pass through a season of extremes of weather, it is only the coarser and sturdier plants that survive. The more delicate plants die, and these latter belong often to the choicer strains, the result being that there is a marked difference between the parent stock seed and the produce."

APPARENTLY one of the effects of the government's activities in the matter of watching seed imports has been to increase the number of shipments of grass and clover consigned "To Order" or to banking houses.

WORD comes from Holland that gladioli are well cleaned up, but the traveler who next drops in will tell you that he can let you have some America, small bulbs, and the price he names doesn't look like a scarcity. Good mixtures are not so plentiful.

TULIPS AND HYACINTHS.

"Among the Holland growers late tulips of all kinds cleared quickly and at rather high prices," says a correspondent of the Horticultural Advertiser (British). "Of single and double early tulips there are too large masses grown and the prices for some good standard varieties are so low that it will be difficult to pay rent and labor. The newer and better varieties, on the contrary, were rather expensive, especially the sports of Murillo, La Reine, and Rose Valk.

"All hyacinths cleared up well, but blue varieties, especially bright blue, were scarce. Only a few years ago white and pink hyacinths were the favorites, and in consequence growers were trying to grow large masses of these colors. There was also a good demand for dark red hyacinths, but blue ones were not so much in demand, and as we had rather large masses of fine blue varieties, the prices became low. As this state of business lasted some years, most of the growers, while enlarging the stocks of the white, pink, and red varieties, kept those of the blue ones on the same level, with the result that now, in face of a heavy demand for blue hyacinths, the prices became suddenly high. Especially for early forcing, a good bright blue variety is wanted, as most hyacinths in this color come pale. Last year Bismarck was shown as a good bright blue."

THE SEED BUSINESS.

The following is by Frank B. White, of all advertising men probably the one who has the widest acquaintance among seedsmen:

"The farmer takes long chances. What he is seeking to do in these wiser days is to make sure that soil conditions are right, that seed that he plants is of the best, and thereby removes as far as possible the element of chance or risk. Of course, he still has weather conditions with which to contend. To plant seed that is not of the proper kind may mean one of four things—no crop, a partial crop, inadequate yield or a bountiful harvest. Intelligent farmers at the present time are testing their seeds and seedsmen everywhere are supposed to sell seed that comes up to a certain germination test. That test is sometimes misleading in that it may show life, but be lacking in physical strength sufficient to yield a harvest. Certain kinds of seed will sprout, but there is not enough vitality in it to make it live, much less to properly reproduce itself. Seedsmen have found it necessary to meet present-day requirements: the laws of our states and nation are

What Sherman said about war applies to bad lily bulbs as well. Ten years ago when you wanted a thousand good lily plants for Easter, it was customary to buy from 1,500 to 2,000 bulbs because the percentage of loss due to bad bulbs was so large. When Horseshoe Brand Giganteum entered the business arena, buyers of this brand experienced a pleasant surprise in finding that they could get results averaging about 90 per cent good plants. True, the price was high, but they were worth the money. Word was passed around that Horseshoe Brand Giganteum were par excellent and the business increased to an extent that enabled the producers to lower the price and today the bulbs cost no more than other brands—and they are still par excellent. Now you can buy this brand from Ralph M. Ward & Co. only. If anyone not connected with this firm offers you Horseshoe Brand Lily bulbs do not buy from them, as they are misrepresenting their goods to you and fraudulently imposing upon us. Furthermore, beware of lily bulbs "just as good" as a certain brand. When a salesman sells you anything "just as good" as a certain brand, it's an open acknowledgment that that certain brand is the best to buy. In lily bulbs for commercial use there are none produced today that will surpass Horseshoe Brand Giganteum as profit-makers. Prices are the same to all—no favorites—send for the price list. Cold Storage bulbs for delivery any time.

becoming more and more exacting in seed requirements, and call for a higher degree of intelligence on the part of the seedsman. He must know his business. Unless he does, he will be up against problems and questions that the intelligent farmer will put to him that may cause him embarrassment.

"As to whether the recent laws have been a benefit or a detriment to the seedsmen is a question that the seedsmen themselves can best answer. Most of them are inclined to believe that there are a lot of foolish laws, that some of them are decidedly ridiculous. It is unfortunate, however, that many of these laws have been enacted at the direct recommendation of seedsmen without sufficient intelligence to know just what they want. There is one phase of the subject, however, that we will all agree is encouraging. The greater the intelligence with respect to the seed requirements the better the possibilities for selling seeds. The increased appreciation of good seeds is apparent. The seed business of 1912 was the largest ever known—so far beyond any previous years that we wonder if it may ever be repeated. Seedsmen who advertise have found it easy to sell, irrespective of the strict laws that now obtain. There is a better line of advertising being done, and the question of honesty on the part of the seed dealer doesn't scare us as it once did because it is pretty generally known that, if there is anything wrong in the seed business on the part of any individual, the postoffice department

So we were not surprised at the quality of the cut flowers. Speakman & Dille have a nice little plant and lots of room for development and, as both are hustlers, we may predict success for them. Mr. Turner and I were both supposed to be sick men when we started, but a 75-mile run in a little over—I was forgetting the speed laws—served as an excellent tonic.

ember through," is the way Mr. Morton estimated it on the last day of the old year. Carte blanche orders for the Pasadena fete were given here and taken good care of.

S. Murata does not say much, but "sits tight." Big orders and plenty of them, both for the city and distant parts, are the rule.

Dieterich & Turner report a record-breaking Christmas in all lines, but especially in plants. An immense quantity of heather was cut and sold from the big lath house, making quite a feature in town. Calling at the greenhouses recently, I noticed large blocks of newly potted roses, and many thousands more in the sand. Mr. Turner says that advance orders seem to indicate an even greater demand than that of last year for young rose stock. Coast growers are beginning to see that it does not pay to hand over large amounts to the express companies on eastern shipments when they can do as well at home.

Hubert Morton is delighted with his first Christmas business at the new Long Beach store. He managed to contract a severe cold, but otherwise everything is rose-colored.

Local papers tried to get up the usual scare about a "combine" by growers to hold up Pasadena people on flower prices. These annual outpourings of the cub reporters hurt no one and give the dear old ladies something to talk about. Supply and demand rule prices on perishable stock, and always will, and the feast of flowers at Pasadena is only one of the many outlets for Los Angeles flowers. A welcome one no doubt, but only one, and not the biggest or best at that.

"By far the best yet," was Reeve Darling's comment on the holiday business. The Hayward Floral Co. is a "live wire that connects," not simply sparks, as mentioned on page 19 of The Review of December 26.

The H. N. Gage Co. had all it could handle for Christmas and New Year's. While a few of the leading lines were sold out early, the firm kept faith with all its customers.

The Los Angeles Evergreen and Cut Flower Supply Market did an immense business right through both holidays.

Frank Lichtenberg reports the best holiday business he has ever had. Magnificent stock, well handled, and prices that, while showing good profits, are not extortionate, are factors in his success.

J. J. Grullemans, Jr., of J. J. Grullemans & Sons, Lisse, Holland, has been calling on the trade here.

H. R. Richards.

FREEZE IN CALIFORNIA.

Los Angeles, Cal., January 7, 1913.—There was a most disastrous frost throughout southern California on the nights of January 4 to 6, the temperature being the lowest in thirty years. There are reports of enormous damage in the citrus fruit districts, both oranges and lemons being badly hit in spite of the general use of smudge pots. Truck growers also report heavy losses, acres of vegetables and seedlings having been destroyed. In the vicinity of Los Angeles, growers of bulbous stock and other outdoor florists' stock have lost thousands of dollars. One grower, having tender nursery stock under lath, estimates he has lost $15,000. A San Pedro grower reports $800 loss on Paper Whites. It is feared many small growers are ruined.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

An elegant clean-up in all the best staple lines of cut flowers and plants, both for Christmas and New Year's, is the situation this season. Immediately after the first great holiday a lot of good funeral work developed, and in some cases there was a difficulty in obtaining sufficient stock. Some of the Japanese growers of carnations restricted the quantity of their cut, in anticipation of higher prices for the Pasadena annual tournament, and this still further complicated matters. But all in the trade, retailers and wholesalers alike, are agreed that there never before was so good a holiday.

Roses were in excellent supply from indoors, and in most cases were of the finest quality. Killarney, Richmond, Prima Donna and My Maryland were leaders; the last named was especially good this year. Carnations were good and fairly plentiful, but the prices ruled high. Violets were equal to the demand; so, also, was valley, but of orchids the supply was limited. Large numbers were used, but many more could have been used had they been forthcoming. Centaureas were about the only standard flower of which there was an oversupply. Great bunches of cut heather made a splendid show in the retailers' windows and sold well. Greens of all kinds were plentiful and good. Only a few plants were left.

Various Notes.

A. Blomquist, of the Baird Park Nurseries, Bairdstown, has had a severe attack of rheumatism, which has left him in pretty bad shape and compelled him to use crutches, only temporarily, it is hoped. He has the sympathy of his many friends in the trade.

Although I have frequently had occasion to mention the splendid stock shipped to Wright's Flower Shop from the firm's greenhouse plant at Gardena, it is over two years since I visited it until last week. There is a great difference in the size of the place, as there are now 120,000 feet of modern glass, all in splendid order. Although the Christmas crop had been cut, there was a splendid showing in all the popular varieties of roses and some fine novelties. The Beauties rank high, but I think the palm must be given to Prima Donna. This fine rose seems well suited to the heavy adobe soil in this valley and the flowers were being cut with 3-foot stems and absolutely perfect foliage; not a sign of mildew or black spot was seen. Richmond also is elegant; so are the Killarneys and the somewhat erratic Mrs. Aaron Ward. Radiance I was disappointed in; it does not do so well here as in other nearby places. The old Chantenay is still grown here and does remarkably well summer and winter. Carnations are good, J. G. Brown, the skilled grower here, being a specialist in their culture. There is also a fine houseful of gardenias, with good foliage and flowers. These are Mr. Brown's pet plants and no one else is allowed to handle them. The whole place is the acme of tidiness and order, and, without throwing any bouquets at Brown, I can honestly say that Tom Wright is lucky in having such a man to look after his place. He takes delight in his big charge and apparently has every detail well in hand.

I took the trip with my friend Henry Turner, in his big Stoddard-Dayton, and while he does not stop for much in the way of obstacles, a 100-acre field newly irrigated proved a little too much even for him and we had to make a detour. Coming from a big seed barn was a big man whom they call Jack Bodger in these parts, and he it was who was responsible for the irrigation project, sweet peas being the objective; 100 acres were already sown and another 100 were being made ready. It looks as though the aphid has not scared Mr. Bodger or his father, who, I was sorry to learn, has been under the weather of late. "Just getting an order for forty-three ounces of petunia seed ready for the east," said our friend, as he again made tracks for the seed barn.

The weather has turned slightly warmer, after a spell of several days of frosts. Although not severe at any time, it has been enough to stop outside growth and as a consequence we have nothing to show outdoors except narcissi and violets. Of the latter, although the flowers are not quite so plentiful as they have been, there is enough to meet all requirements. Inside stock since the holidays has been piling up in many quarters. Roses are a shade more plentiful than they usually are in the month of January, but carnations have advanced in price fully twenty-five per cent since our last quotations. There is no scarcity of them, as one might think from the fact that they have advanced, and it is the season, apparently, rather than the scarceness which appeals to the growers. Romans and valley are in good form and color and move fairly well. Other varieties of inside stock have advanced slightly in the last two weeks, but are bound to lower in price in a short time.

Now that the principal holidays are over, it might be well to recapitulate. Christmas trade was much better than that of New Year's day and practically everyone was sold out of stock. The trade during the holidays, from all accounts, was for cheaper articles, but the aggregate was well up to last season.

THE CALIFORNIA QUARANTINE.

Our attention has been called to a news item on page 54 of the issue of The Review for December 19, relative to the destruction of plants shipped into California from North Carolina infested with Aleyrodes nubifera, or white fly.

A short time ago the state of California passed a quarantine preventing the shipment into California of any trees, plants, vines, etc., from the states of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas, because of the white flies. Very recently, December 17, this quarantine order was amended to include only the plants known to be the hosts of the white flies, Aleyrodes nubifera and Aleyrodes citri. We enclose this quarantine order, which gives quite a long list of infested plants.

It is not the intent of the California State Commissioner of Horticulture to is attributed to the weather conditions. Valley and orchids are equal to demand. Local violets are still scarce. The violet venders did an enormous business Christmas. As their licenses are issued quarterly, several failed to renew January 1. In dull months they migrate to other sections. This is one of the problems the florist has to contend with. Jonquils are to be had in limited quantities, the first harbinger of springtime.

SEATTLE, WASH.The Market.

Trade following the Christmas rush has been good and an additional spurt New Year's cleaned up most of the stock of cut flowers, while pot plants are none too plentiful. The heavy cut of carnations continues, but the shipping trade is taking the surplus and the local supply is hardly equal to the demand, growers being pushed to fill orders. Consequently prices are firm. The supply of roses remains moderate and the demand for all grades is good. A few poinsettias were left over from Christmas, but have been disposed of advantageously this week. Local violets are hardly procurable, but the California varieties are here in abundance. There is good sale for bulbous stock. Paper Whites and Romans are selling well and the few Trumpet Majors offered are quickly snapped up. Valley is scarce, while sweet peas are not in much demand. The market is short of orchids and freesias are also scarce. The supply of plumosus is, as usual, inadequate. Several large decorations have made heavy demands on the supply of huckleberry.

itself felt. Most of the florists had a portion of the holly trade in Victoria. This year it was more widely distributed over the country than ever before, one small lot finding its way to Florida. The holly decorations on the British Columbia exhibit at the land show in Chicago were also responsible for a few orders. The holly output here is limited; it is not a native of the island, but has been imported from England and planted in the gardens of the older residents, from whom the whole supply is obtained. This year, I believe, a holly farm shipped its first cut, about 4,000 pounds. The price paid on the trees was about 40 cents per pound and the supply was sufficient for the demand.

In cut flowers, carnations were the leaders. Roses were practically absent, as the large proportion of mild, cloudy weather this season was not favorable to their growth. Chrysanthemums were good and plentiful. California violets were plentiful and the quality was splendid. In plants, azaleas were the leaders, with poinsettias and the usual flowering plants in good demand.

The prices, of course, differed, but the following would be about an average: Carnations, red, extremely scarce, $2 per dozen; all other colors, $1 to $1.25; chrysanthemums, $1 to $5, with probably $3 as a good average; Paper Whites, 60 cents; violets, 25 cents to 35 cents per bunch.

The weather for the preceding two days was wet and windy. December 24 was mild, with occasional showers and a little wind.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1912-1913: Pres., Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa.; Vice-Pres., J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-eighth annual meeting, Portland, Ore., June, 1913.

CHARLES FELLOWS, the nurseryman of Modesto, Cal., has opened his sales yards at his new location, at the corner of Eleventh and J streets.

THIS week's obituary column contains a report of the death of Bradford J. Wakeman, of B. J. Wakeman & Co., a nursery firm of Chebanse, Ill.

THIS week's obituary column contains a report of the death, in Dayton, O., of James W. McNary, one of the proprietors of the Dayton & Xenia Nurseries.

THE trade will find it of importance to note the quarantine order issued December 17 by the horticultural authorities in California. It is printed in full on page 66 of this issue.

A. J. GALLAWAY, of Healdsburg, Cal., has purchased land in the district known as Fairmead colony and is conducting a nursery there. He expects to handle a general line of trees, shrubs and vines.

It is reported that a recent fire destroyed $1,000 worth of trees on the grounds belonging to the Harper Bros. Nursery Co., at East St. Louis, Ill. The flames were started, it is thought, by a camp fire.

W. F. SCHELL, of the Wichita Nursery, Wichita, Kan., has made arrangements to increase his output of stock and has engaged Thomas F. Rogers, of the nursery firm of Cooper & Rogers, Winfield, Kan., to take charge of the enlarged business.

THE eighth annual report of the Tennessee state entomologist, just off the press, is a document that will interest all nurserymen doing business in the state, as well as those located there. Copies will be sent free on request addressed to G. M. Bentley, Knoxville, Tenn.

ADVISES DESTRUCTION.

The Society of Export Traders with America, at Boskoop, Holland, gives the most earnest advice to nurserymen: "Throw away all P. Strobus from your nurseries. This destruction will be a loss, but not so great as if for a number of years, or perhaps forever, the import of P. Cembra to America should be closed." Boskoop nurserymen and traders are urged in every possible way to prove their determination to keep their stock sound and free from dangerous plant diseases. Boskoop has made a high reputation in the United States, and as they are now destroying their stock of P. Strobus as the only bearer of white pine blister rust, it is hoped that in a short time the Department of Agriculture at Washington will permit the import of Pinus Cembra when accompanied by a certificate of inspection at the nurseries and it is found on inspection at the port of entry that the shipment is free from injurious plant diseases or insect pests as described in the Plant Quarantine Act. It is hoped the reopening of the import of Pinus Cembra may take place before the end of 1913. It is an important branch of the business at Boskoop.

Geo. E. Buxton is planning to exhibit a big vase of his fine new silver-pink snapdragon at the national show in New York in April. He is receiving lots of orders for young stock from Review readers. He has mastered the trick of flowering snapdragons in winter and is sending cultural directions with all orders. Carnations fill several large houses here. Benora is well liked, but St. Nicholas comes late for Christmas trade. Shasta does grandly here and is hard to beat. Pink Delight and other sorts are all in fine crop.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Business following the Christmas holidays seems to be good; there are many social events calling for large decorations and funeral work is quite heavy. There has been a remarkable drop in values, prices being cut in half or more. American Beauties that brought from $3 to $10 during the holiday season can now be had at from $2 to $6 per dozen and they are as good as could be desired. For the first time in many weeks a buyer can obtain as many fine carnations as he wants and at from $2 to $4 per hundred and from indications it would seem as though before the week is over the price will drop to from $15 to $20 per thousand. Roses, like all other flowers, have also dropped materially in price and range from $4 to $12 per hundred. Sweet peas are more plentiful. Single violets are still scarce, but the crop is coming along well and in a few days there will be little or no sale for northern stock. Washingtonians are averse to purchasing the double variety when they can get locally grown singles. Narcissi are too much in evidence. Callas are being grown in larger quantities, I find, than

Various Notes.

For the first time in the history of the Washington flower business an order has been received by wireless. In this instance the officers of the British ship Natal were desirous of obtaining a floral piece to place on the casket of the late Ambassador Reid and so sent a wireless message to the British ambassador here, containing an order which was in turn delivered to George H. Cooke.

Better business means to us better employees and to them a better living. We guarantee that you get 100 per cent of what you order in a quality that will be satisfactory to you as a buyer and to us as producers.

Selling job lots at low prices is not a business, and there is no standard of quality in job lot buying. From us you get a guaranteed quality at a price fair to the buyer, and at which there is a reasonable profit and an insurance against damage in transit. Our goods are insured to you against loss. Producing young stock is a business, and job lots at low prices are left-overs and culls.

George C. Shaffer has taken possession of his new store at 900 Fourteenth street, N. W., and has a much better location. Two sides of the store are entirely of glass, while a third side is covered by a large plate glass mirror. The ceiling is of white art metal and from it are suspended three antique electric chandeliers. The floor is of mosaic, with a border of green. A balcony runs around nearly the whole of two sides. The stairway to this is partly hidden by the ice-box and the cashier's desk. Back of the mirror is a workroom. The cellar runs beneath the whole store and under the sidewalk. The latter portion will be used for cold storage purposes and here also is the moss bin, the covers of which are fitted with folding legs so that they may be used as tables in the mossing of wreaths and when closed throw all the surplus material back into the bin. For the next few weeks, Mr. Shaffer will conduct both the new and the old stores.

We had a grand New Year's day here; in fact, it was more like Easter as far as the weather was concerned. Trade slackened up a little, but the demand was just about as big as the supply. Roses still are on the scarce side, as most of the local growers seem to be off crop. The same must be said in regard to carnations, although from now on there will be enough to go around. Violets are selling well and some well grown stock is coming in, from Rhinebeck as well as from local growers. Few azaleas are to be seen now, most of the growers having sold every plant that had any flowers on it. Cyclamens sold well, bringing as high as $2 each for well grown plants. Begonias met with a good demand and sold at from $1 to $2.50 each.

Various Notes.

January 3 a severe wind storm struck this town. It blew fifty miles an hour for twenty-four hours without abatement and did heavy damage, uprooting trees and blowing down fences. Some of the growers had a great deal of glass broken and on Saturday all hands were kept busy doing repair work.

John Coombs reports the best Christmas and New Year's trade he ever has enjoyed. He had to stop taking orders, as he did not have stock enough to go around.

He headed the card: "To Test the Efficiency of the New Parcel Post," etc.

ENCHANTRESS SUPREME

THE best Sport of Enchantress up to date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguish its parent. Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching. A good all-round Carnation that retains its color at all seasons. Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster. The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years' duration convinces us of its great value.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh has been having some of the finest and worst weather it has been possible to imagine. New Year's day and the two previous days were most delightful, spring-like days. January 2 the thermometer registered 58 degrees, but the next day we had the worst blizzard of the year, the temperature dropping to 22 degrees, with a gale blowing forty miles an hour. By January 6, however, it was mild and raining and the snow was about gone.

Business for New Year's was good generally; some few complaints were heard from retailers who expected too much, while others, who had decorations on hand, had all they could do. New Year's is only considered a little better than a good Saturday here.

Among the wholesalers, last week was quite satisfactory. There was plenty of stock of all kinds and a fair demand; the stock generally cleaned up nicely and at satisfactory prices. Locally lilies and valley are on the short side and carnations are not plentiful, but roses are quite abundant and good. Some short-stemmed tulips are making their appearance, but they do not attract anyone. Violets, which were scarce for a few days after Christmas, are again quite plentiful.

Various Notes.

A bunch of a sport from Enchantress has been on exhibition at the store of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. It was sent by Mr. Abraham, of Blue Point, Long Island. The color is about the regular Enchantress color, but the variety is said to hold its color better than the old variety.

Samuel McClements, of Randolph & McClements, who has been confined to his home during the holidays, got out for New Year's, but his partner, Mr. Randolph, has taken his place on the sick list.

There have been an unusual number of fine decorations during the last three weeks, which have taken up a great deal of stock and helped business largely.

Morris Stern, who has been manager of the Lorch & Hofmeister store on Smithfield street, has resigned and will go to St. Paul, wishing to be with his mother, who has been in ill health for some time.

Edward Ludwig, son of E. C. Ludwig, who has been home for some time on account of illness, has returned to college at Cornell.

Joseph Jones is arranging to go into the seed business more extensively. He also is pushing the nursery business, being the only nurseryman in this vicinity who keeps up a display of trees and shrubbery the year through, having his store on Penn avenue, one of the best thoroughfares in the city.

F. Fischer, Joliet.—"A healthy grower, good producer, and the best Christmas red."

Jos. P. Brooks, Morton Grove.—"As good a red as has been shown in a long time. A great improvement on Victory."

For two years the best Red in 100 class at the Cincinnati Flower Show, 1911, St. Paul and Cleveland Flower Shows, 1912.

The Herald is an early, free and continuous bloomer, giving a heavy crop for Christmas and afterwards. Cuttings propagated in March made large plants and were in full crop by October 1.

The flowers are large; full and deep calyx, which is absolutely non-bursting; stem long and stiff; color is a clear, even shade of scarlet.

Cuttings, strong and well rooted, ready for delivery, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000. All stock guaranteed.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

Last week's trade was not only satisfactory, but highly encouraging, making a good week's business to start off the new year; if trade continues throughout the year as it has started, no one will be able to offer much complaint. Since Christmas we have not had to contend with the chief Christmas difficulty, the scarcity of stock; on the contrary, flowers have been quite plentiful and of good quality, making it a pleasure to fill orders. In the last ten days we have been favored with a liberal amount of sunshine, which has worked wonders in increasing the supply of stock. Carnations, which until a week ago were terribly scarce everywhere, are now quite plentiful; the same is true of roses. Now that the holiday season is over, the trade is turning its attention to lilies and there is considerable call for them, but they are scant in supply.

Various Notes.

Of interest to the many friends of William Kiefaber, treasurer and general manager of the Miami Floral Co., will be the marriage of his eldest son, William Kiefaber, Jr., to Miss Dorothy Barnett, which took place in Cincinnati. The affair was a complete surprise to their friends and relatives.

The Heiss Co. put up a fine decoration at the Dayton Club last week, for the annual dinner of the officers of the Third Regiment. The firm also had decorations for several large New Year's functions and the first week of the year was an exceedingly busy one.

George Lampert, of Xenia, O., was in Dayton last week. He gives a glowing report of their holiday trade, saying it was the best ever.

J. W. Rodgers spent New Year's day with his family in Monroe, O.

Mrs. Matthews, of Chicago, the mother of W. G. Matthews, will spend the winter in Dayton with her son.

The Dayton Floral Co. has been exceptionally busy since the holidays, putting up funeral work. They had a fine trade in corsage bouquets for the New Year's dances and receptions.

J. J. Grullemans, of Lisse, Holland, was a visitor last week.

The Miami Floral Co. is cutting a fine lot of carnations and finds a good demand for them. They speak encouragingly of the condition of trade.

Yellow flowers were in heavy demand last week, owing to the observance of several golden weddings.

James W. McNary, of the Dayton & Xenia Nurseries, died at his home in this city December 31. Further particulars are given in this week's obituary column.

SEEDLINGS and BLOOMING PLANTS

FOR THE LAST 15 YEARS we have selected three-fourths of our seed-bearing Cyclamen stock before Xmas, to assure early-blooming plants, and claim the finest commercial strain in this country; no fizzle of many so-called English varieties. Our aim is strong growers that don't have to be petted to be grown into a choice, salable plant—a well built, five-petaled flower (many of them at one time), with well marked foliage; every plant an ideal, a prize-winner. Received First Prize at the Cleveland Show and First and Second at Toledo, early November, when blooming Cyclamens were scarce.

Strong August Seedlings, ready for shift, $2.50 per 100, $20.00 per 1000; once transplanted, $3.50 per 100, $30.00 per 1000; 2½-inch, to grow on, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000. Blooming Plants, 2½-inch, 3-inch, 4-inch, 5-inch, 6-inch and 8-inch, at 5c, 8c, 15c, 25c, 50c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.50 each.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

Again the weather is as warm as April. We have had a few hours of bluster and snow, but nothing to call winter. Business has been dull ever since the holiday. There have been few funerals and, aside from out-of-town trade and a few weddings, there has been little to do. Roses and carnations continue to come in heavily. Prices have fallen materially. Retail stores have been advertising special sales of Killarneys as low as 65 cents per dozen. Violets continue to be well cleaned up at good prices and valley is not hard to move. Poinsettias were pretty well cleaned up for Christmas, as were all the good cyclamens. Azaleas are in good supply, but there is little surplus. A few good rhododendrons are on the market and seem to be selling fairly well. Ferns, especially the table varieties, are moving unusually well for this season of the year.

Various Notes.

Ralph M. Ward, of New York, was in the city this week, looking after bulb business for the fall of 1913.

The Joy Floral Co. advertised a special sale of roses at 75 cents per dozen to married men only, provided they would send them to their wives. They cleaned up all of their surplus roses, and feel that it was a good piece of advertising as well. When the special sale was over, they went back to the old prices without trouble.

McKay, Reece & Co. are planning to do a good business in cannas, dahlias and other bulbs this year. Last season was the first time this line of goods was handled and the experiment proved so satisfactory that a much larger line will be provided this season.

Geny Bros. report having done a fair business last week. They report their out-of-town business as rather better than the local business just at present. Their carnations, especially Beacons, continue to be exceptionally fine. They are cutting a large supply of roses in all of the standard sorts. Their Aaron Wards seem to be coming better all the time, and are proving one of the most prolific roses they grow. They are always in demand, especially for corsage bouquets.

The Hillcrest School Farm has just set quite a block of irises in a good assortment of the newer varieties. It is said at the farm there is no plant in better demand in this vicinity than the better varieties of iris. The school has a large assortment of narcissi, there being over 200 varieties grown on the grounds. F. B.

Opportunity Knocks

At your door to secure the very Best Silver Pink Snapdragon in existence. Will you accept it or remain in the same old rut, growing an inferior variety, and wonder why your competitor is prospering more than you?

Read what some of the Leading Florists have to say about Buxton's Silver Pink Snapdragon:

Mr. Geo. E. Buxton.

Lowell, Mass., October 25, 1912.

Dear Sir: I thought I would write you and tell you how pleased I am with the Snapdragon you sold me. I have been growing flowers for twenty years and I think it is the best I have ever seen or ever had.

I told my foreman to plant one of the houses we usually grow Violets in with Snapdragon, as it is the best money-making plant I ever grew on my place.

Yours respectfully,

J. J. McMANMON.

Concord, N. H., October 23, 1912.

George E. Buxton, Nashua, N. H.

Friend George: The light pink Snapdragon you have been sending us for the past season or two are certainly beauties. They are, among Snapdragons, what the American Beauty is among Roses. The stem is just right and the flowers perfect in color. In short, it is one of the most beautiful flowers that we have.

Yours truly,

CHAS. V. KIMBALL,
Mgr. for C. H. Barrett, Florist.

Lowell, Mass., October 26, 1912.

G. E. Buxton, Florist, 114 Concord St., Nashua, N. H.

Dear Sir: To all who may be interested, will say that Mr. Geo. Buxton's Silver Pink Antirrhinum is very satisfactory. Being a most exquisite shade of pink, it is in great demand and considered the best variety known to us.

Yours truly

The Market.

Trade is still brisk. There were various social functions, such as parties, dances, debutantes' receptions and New Year's dinners at the hotels. Flowers are much more plentiful than they have been. Carnations are excellent and all varieties of roses are good. Marguerites and cypripediums are now on sale. Plants of all kinds find a ready market at this time of the year. Cut flowers, asparagus and all other greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

A. M. Simmons has entered the employ of Mark Aitken and is driving his big delivery auto. Ernest Short, from Mr. Aitken's greenhouses in Agawam, helped out on hotel decorations during the rush season.

Jack Morse is no longer with Wm. Schlatter & Son. He is thinking seriously of going into another line of business.

A. N. Pierson, Inc., of Cromwell, Conn., is shipping good Harrisii lilies to this city.

John P. McCarthy, of Philip L. Carbone's, Boston, exhibited a fine line of baskets, pottery and China at the Hotel Kimball last week, and showed some novelties in glass vases.

Fred Vetter, who has been managing the Flower Mart, on North Main street, has resigned his position and is leaving town.

The Flower Shop, on Worthington street, is having a special sale of plants at greatly reduced prices.

John Donaldson was slightly indisposed after the overwork of the Christmas rush.

Mrs. S. B. Griffin gave a large reception on New Year's day to introduce the debutante of the season, Miss Southworth. The decorations, by Mark Aitken, were elaborate. All the downtown florists were kept busy during the day with baskets, bunches and loose flowers. A dance was given the same evening at the Country Club, and Mark Aitken furnished decorations of laurel roping, southern smilax and hemlock branches. E. C. A.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia be sure to Look Us Up.

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your own convenience, both going and coming. When you will see our palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place) and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

THE NEW PINK CARNATION.

Color, cerise pink. This variety has been thoroughly tried out for the past five years and we offer it today with every confidence that it will ultimately take first place as the premier dark pink. The color is similar to Mrs. C. W. Ward without the objectionable streakiness and tendency to burst the calyx of the latter variety during the dark weather. The growth is wonderfully free and continuous and Northport will produce more flowers per plant than any other variety of its type. The calyx is practically non-bursting. Rooted cuttings, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

We have for immediate delivery Al rooted cuttings of Enchantress, White Enchantress and Beacon at $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of the Heating Department, describing their troubles or asking any questions regarding the heating of greenhouses, the piping or boiler-room. But please do not ask us to make a choice of apparatus for you. Each boiler advertised in The Review is a good boiler, and the advertisers sell them on their merits.

CONSTRUCTION AND HEATING.

I am thinking of building in the spring a rose house 23x70 feet, to abut against the west side of the engine house and run west. The wall will be of concrete, with about three feet of glass above the wall. I expect to build other houses on the north side later. What I should like to know is: Would it be best to have a long span on the south side? Would it be necessary to have ventilators on both sides in this width of house? What would be the best kind of benches to make? What would be the best plan of piping for hot water heat? What is the best size of pipe? I can not get a good fall, so as to put the return pipes under the bench. State the number of pipes to use to get a temperature of 65 to 70 degrees in zero weather, without crowding the boiler too hard. I shall put in a new sectional boiler. Which is the better to use, a wooden cap on top of the glass, or putty? I shall also be glad to receive any other information you can give me. I am located in eastern Michigan. F. V. B.

While a long span on the south of the rose house would give good results, the general tendency is toward even-span houses, for widths of thirty feet and less. One row of ridge ventilators will answer. Cement benches will be the most durable and, if built at odd times, will not cost much more than wooden benches. If the benches are not entirely constructed of cement, it will be well to have the legs, at least, either of cement or gas pipe. Sometimes light iron rails or iron pipe can be obtained cheaply and they make excellent stringers. Slightly used or damaged lumber can often be picked up at a bargain and might be used for the bottom and sides of the benches, but wooden benches, at best, will not be really durable.

flows, fifteen 2-inch returns will be needed. Unless the returns can be carried above the level of the heater, it will be best to attach a mercury generator, or in some other way close the system, in order to secure a rapid circulation and avoid the boiling of the water.

THE WORTH OF COAL.

In a review of the 1912 business conditions, published in a Chicago newspaper, the editor of the Black Diamond had this to say:

the most important in the history of the industry:

"The first three months were the coldest in forty years, increasing household consumption of coal thirty-three and one-third per cent. This was followed by the first general mine strike in ten years. This strike took about seven and one-half per cent of coal production temporarily off the market. That in turn was followed by the greatest business revival—this coming in September—that this country has seen. This large business activity increased steam coal consumption about forty per cent over the preceding year. The combination of these circumstances brought a rise in coal prices considerably above what might be considered normal level.

"Policies with respect to coal consumption pursued for about five years have come to fruition and individual manufacturing companies have profited extensively. Within the year, by careful arrangement of furnaces and careful firing, it has been proved that fifty per cent less coal can do more work than can the full amount where antiquated methods are used. The quite general adoption of the new combustion method made 1912 the most important year in the nation's history with respect to fuel economy. This means the beginning of the end of the smoke nuisance and the beginning of a new era of genuine fuel economy.

"While what has been said indicates that the period of extremely low prices of coal is beginning to disappear, enough has been said to indicate that the economy which has been and is being effected by modern methods more than makes the coal worth the price which is likely to be asked for it."

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The New Year's trade has been quite satisfactory all along the line, cleaning up about all the stock on hand. In fact, the greenhouse people must do a good deal of hustling in order to get ready for the Easter trade. The bad storm made business dull last Saturday. On the whole, business was fair last week.

Everything seems to be coming in good shape except Easter lilies, but there is a marked scarcity of these. All roses are good and carnations are arriving in better quality and larger quantity than for some weeks. Violets are good, being fragrant and large. They are selling at $2 per hundred. Paper Whites are abundant and good. Orchids, both cattleyas and cypripediums, were shipped in in good shape.

Various Notes.

At the meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association, January 6, the annual election of officers was held.

One day last week the expressman left a large box of violets at the door of George Boucher's store without waiting to have the delivery signed for. This would have been all right if someone else had not walked off with them.

J. B. Keller Sons had cleaned out their large house of fine poinsettias by the day after Christmas. Their greenhouses are almost entirely cleared of flowering plants. This speaks well for their holiday trade. Their window this week is filled with pretty birch bark boxes of dracenas and primroses.

Mr. Rapalji has returned from his southern trip.

James Vick's Sons' employees gave a surprise Christmas dinner for W. H. Dildine at the office of the concern. J. B. Agnew, of California, and some local friends were guests.

Henry Merritt, of Irondequoit, is growing some choice Pink Delight and White Wonder carnations. He finds Pink Delight more profitable than En-

All the florists here report that holiday business was better this year than ever before, showing a continuous healthy growth of the trade.

Between Christmas and New Year's business was brisk; all that could be desired. What with parties, weddings, receptions and outside demand, everyone was more than busy.

Crabb & Hunter Floral Co. had their first Christmas downtown and had all the business they could conveniently handle. Three extra delivery outfits were hired and five extra salesladies were employed for the rush.

Geo. F. Crabb is a grandfather, his son, Arthur Crabb, having welcomed a son just before Christmas. The baby has been christened Robert F. Crabb.

The worst wind ever known here did widespread damage January 4. Naturally, when brick buildings collapsed the glass structures did not escape without injury.

The greenhouses of Whitbred, at Sixth avenue and Thirtieth street, were damaged by the winds breaking the glass. The end of one of them was blown in by a heavy gale that also broke two telephone poles in the same section of the city.

Myers Bros. also sustained a heavy loss. The high wind carried off the gable of their largest greenhouse at Canaan's station, depositing broken glass over an area of a quarter of a mile.

I have used the Imperial Plant Food, both in Powder and Biscuit form, and have always found it safe and reliable, as well as very marked in its effects on all classes of plants on which it has been used. For the commercial florist or private gardener who needs a really high-grade and quick-acting fertilizer, there is nothing superior to the Imperial Plant Food. Many skilled growers have been using it for years, and I have yet to meet one who does not commend it.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Holiday receptions, funerals and a few weddings gave the florists about an even break with the market last week. There has been a moderate supply, and the demand has given the tradesmen an opportunity to keep practically cleaned up all the week. Prices have been normal, having dropped back after the Christmas rise. The coming week will be a busy one on account of the numerous orders that have been received for the inaugurations of city and state officials.

Various Notes.

William Jurgens, of Newport, was a visitor in Boston last week.

The florists in this section are watching, with considerable interest, the workings of the new parcel post. One florist took advantage of the new order of things, on the first day, to send a funeral wreath to Hanover, N. H. The piece was just one-half inch inside the measurement allowed by law, and cost 18 cents to mail, while the express charge would have been 55 cents.

As a Christmas gift, the city of Newport has been offered the entire estate of George Gordon King, to be used as a public park and the dwelling as a library. The grounds, containing about eight acres, are well furnished with shrubs and large, handsome trees.

J. Kopelman & Co. have begun the erection of two propagating houses on their place at Oaklawn. Each will be 20x60.

George Hunt has been reelected Fire Commissioner of Providence, for a period of three years.

Louis D. Pierce, of Norwood, left last week for New York, en route for the south, where he will remain for a month or so, on account of his health.

Thomas Curley, who has been confined to his house by illness, is able to be about again.

The building and stock of the George A. Weaver Co., at Newport, were destroyed by fire on the morning of December 29. Seeds, agricultural implements and supplies constituted the stock. Plate glass windows of Stewart Ritchie's store were broken by the heat.

Nils G. Pierson was elected first vice-president of the Men's Club, Norwood, at the annual meeting held last week.

STORM-TIGHT AND RAIN-PROOF IN... 30 SECONDS!

This is the famous "Blizzard" Front in actual use, while a furious storm is raging.

With the handy "Blizzard" in place, you can drive in comfort, regardless of snow, rain, wind or cold.

It will keep out every drop of rain and no matter if it is zero weather, the heat of your body will keep the inside of the buggy as comfortable as your "den" at home. No foot-warmers or extra robes necessary. Notice the large window. It is 12x20 inches and made of tough, transparent celluloid, and a side light on each side.

The line pocket is 14 inches wide, and so strongly reinforced with metal that it cannot tear out or sag. Allows you perfect control of the horse.

You can quickly open the "Blizzard" at either side and get in or out with ease.

THE "BLIZZARD" FRONT

equalizes the strain on the buggy top and prevents it from rattling. It is made of Blizzard Cloth and will last as long as the top.

Why risk the dangers of exposure—Rheumatism, Colds, Pneumonia? Why not drive in comfort?

The "Blizzard" Front sells for $3.50. If your dealer cannot supply you, we will ship you one on receipt of price. Your money refunded if not exactly as represented. Write for attractive "Blizzard" booklet today. We send it free.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

Business last week was good. Stock has been moving well, except in the last two or three days. Carnations are in heavy supply and are selling at the unusually low price of $2 and $3 per hundred. Some of the carnations that are grown around this city are fine enough to win any prize. The glut is caused by the unusual amount of sunshine which prevailed during December. Roses are holding their own in price, especially Beauties and Richmonds, which are rather scarce. Bulb stock is becoming quite plentiful. Inside of two weeks there will be a great many tulips on the market.

Various Notes.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports that business for New Year's was a great deal better than usual, showing a great increase over last year.

Kusik & Co. are receiving some excellent cut stock. They say that Richmonds and Beauties are scarce, while carnations are overabundant.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. is cutting some fine white lilac and sweet peas. The firm's roses and carnations are extra good.

Samuel Murray was exceedingly busy on the eve of New Year's, as he had an exceptionally large quantity of decorations.

E. D. Ellsworth had an especially heavy run of funeral work near the end of the week.

W. J. Barnes decorated the store of Emery, Bird & Thayer Dry Goods Co. for their annual white goods sale.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. had a fine run on carnations last week, using all they had on hand.

Mrs. T. A. Moseley says business was first-class across the line, especially in funeral work.

James A. Biggam says business was all he could wish and that he and his help were up two nights last week in order to get out their rush orders.

The W. H. Sawvel Floral Co. is handling carnations that would be hard to beat anywhere in the country.

CURVED IRON EAVE Style "S"

This eave is intended for use on detached houses with either fixed glass or side sash.

It is practically all exposed to the inside heat of the greenhouse and so is ice clearing.

KING GREENHOUSE EAVES

THEY SOLVE THE EAVE PROBLEM

THEY MAKE THE LEAST POSSIBLE SHADE and as you can see

PRESENT NO SURFACE FOR ICICLES TO FORM ON

THEY HAVE GREAT STRENGTH WITH LIGHTNESS

THEY ARE DESIGNED AND MADE FOR THE PURPOSE AND NOT ADAPTED FROM STOCK STRUCTURAL SHAPES.

WE WANT TO FIGURE WITH YOU

CURVED IRON EAVE Style "L"

This eave although lighter than style "S" is amply strong for all eave purposes.

It obstructs little light and is ice clearing in the most severe weather. It is intended for use with fixed glass only.

Double Glass Sash

Never mind the weather!

Your plants in hot-beds or cold-frames under Sunlight Double Glass Sash will not mind it

Between the two layers of glass in the Sunlight Double Glass Sash is an air space of $\frac{5}{8}$ of an inch in thickness

the glass is warm earth and plants growing like May

The secret of it all, is that the air space between the two layers of glass being a non-conductor will not let the cold in or the heat out. It makes the Sunlight Double Glass Sash complete in itself. It needs no mats or boards. The only cover is the air sealed between the layers of glass.

You can have hot-beds and cold-frames with Sunlight Double Glass Sash far cheaper in the long run than your single layer sash with heavy, dark covers of mats or boards. You can save more than half the labor and worry and you can control your beds better and get earlier, stronger and far more profitable plants.

The Sunlight Double Glass Sash method comes right home to every gardener and florist in the country. It is good business to learn all about it.

Write us today. We will send our complete catalog, free. If you enclose 4c in stamps we will also send Prof. Massey's booklet on hot-beds and cold-frames. Be sure to write your name and post office plainly.

[SECOND EDITION]

It sold so much better than was expected that the First Edition, intended to last a year, was sold out in eight months.

This Album was published in response to many requests from Florists who felt the need for an up-to-date book to be used in taking orders for Funeral Designs, Wedding Decorations and Bouquets, Table Decorations and all cut flower work where it is not practicable to show the customer the finished article as it will be when ready for use. With this Album you can show the finished work, in beautifully printed pictures.

The Album has been THOROUGHLY REVISED for the Second Edition and contains a large number of designs not shown in the wonderfully successful First Edition.

NINETY-SIX PAGES, nearly 300 designs and decorations, beautifully printed on heavy glazed paper, handsomely bound in a cover that will stand wear.

75c PER COPY POSTPAID

$6.00 PER DOZEN BY EXPRESS

The price has not been raised for the Second Edition, although everybody says the First Edition was worth more money, and this is a better book in every way.

FLORIST.....

THE VOICE WITH THE SMILE.

It Wins Business.

There is a most careful way of beginning a telephone conversation that florists as well as many other people are now adopting. It is the courteous and direct method because it saves useless words, confusion and uncertainty. It runs thus:

The telephone bell rings, and the person answering it says: "Morton & Co." The person calling then says: "Mr. Wood, of Curtis & Co., wishes to talk with Mr. White." When Mr. White picks up the receiver he knows Mr. Wood is on the other end of the line, and, without any unnecessary and undignified "Hellos," he at once greets him with the refreshing and courteous salutation, "Good morning, Mr. Wood!" This savors of the genial handshake that Mr. Wood would have received had he called in person upon Mr. White.

A far higher degree of telephone courtesy would be obtained if the face-to-face idea were more generally held in mind by those who use the telephone. The fact that a line of wire and two shining instruments separate you from the person to whom you are talking, takes none of the sting out of unkind words.

Telephone courtesy begins when the bell rings. Promptness in answering the call is a compliment to the caller. Telephone courtesy on party lines means being polite when someone else unintentionally breaks in—not snapping, "Get off the line; I'm using it."

In a word, it is obviously true that whatever is the correct thing to do in a face-to-face conversation is also correct in a telephone conversation, and anyone has but to apply the rule of courtesy prescribed long years before the telephone was first thought of, to know the proper manners for telephone usage. Be forbearing, considerate and courteous. Do over the telephone as you would do face to face. "The voice with the smile wins."

FASHIONS IN FLOWERS.

Among the leading London florists, according to the Pall Mall Gazette, there seems to be a very considerable difference of opinion as to the popularity of bouquets at the present time. One or two firms say that they have sold many more this season than in former years, while others agree that bouquets are now used chiefly for presentations, weddings and state functions.

"Things have to last nowadays," said one florist, "and the presents of flowers sent to private houses are generally either big bunches of cut flowers—'gerbes,' as the French call them—or growing flowers in baskets. A favorite way just now is to send them arranged in a china vase the color of the flowers, so that the recipient has not the trouble of rearranging them. For weddings a sheaf of flowers for the bride and shower bouquets for the bridesmaids are the usual thing. Bouquets are often made of yellow arum lilies and other rare flowers, but nothing can be more chic than a bouquet of orchids chosen to match the dress, and tied with a ribbon of the same color."

"Does the fact that flowers are now seldom passed across the footlights affect your trade?"

"Perhaps it does a little. But it is a difference of quality rather than of quantity. In place of the many small bouquets which were made up of expensive flowers, like lilies of the valley, big baskets are more usual, and these are composed of larger and less delicate blossoms."

A LUNCHEON TABLE.

The accompanying illustration shows a unique decoration for a luncheon as arranged by John Mangel, Chicago. This was a large, round table, seating fourteen, in the Colonial room at the Blackstone hotel, for Miss Helen V. Drake's Sunday-school class. A tall vase of daisies stood in the center, with ribbons leading to straw hats on the getting what's due you in volume of business? Read this and see:

"We have often thought of telling you how we appreciated some item, especially one article you had in The Review a year or two ago. It was the one telling of the different numbers of varieties of carnations planted by the larger growers. It certainly indicated the varieties that were best adapted for most sections of the country.

"We have often had in mind asking you if you could obtain what would be an average consumption or sale of flowers in the small towns. For instance, for our town of about 10,000 the sales run from $10,000 to $12,000 per year. This does not include any out-of-town sales. We have often wondered whether we were farming our territory as well as it should be. If a report could be had from other similar towns as to the amount of business that might be had per thousand of population, it might be a great stimulus to florists who are not pushing their trade.

"We have no downtown store and have often wondered whether it would increase trade to have a store in the business part of the town. And to what extent might a good, live, up-to-date store create trade? If there are those who have added stores to their business in the last few years and they would give the increased amount of sales and the size of their towns, we think it would be extremely helpful to the trade."

The Review invites comment. Name and address must be signed, but will not be published without permission.

CHOPIN PUSHES ALONG.

P. A. Chopin is one of the progressive florists of New Orleans. He believes in getting before the people, and table, which were filled or trimmed with daisies and sweet peas.

DO YOU GET WHAT'S DUE?

The following letter, received from an Iowa florist, opens an interesting line of thought. How much do you sell per thousand of population in your town? Is your "farming" of your field sufficiently intensive? Are you staying there. Also, he believes that a flower store should be accessible, and as one store can be accessible to only a part of the prosperous people in a community, he now has two stores. They each present an imposing front. At St. Charles and Washington avenues he has established a store with splendid display facilities, and a show house stretching along the street beside his store on Magazine street, at the corner of Eighth, gives a long glass exposure there. Reproduced herewith is one of the newspaper advertisements Mr. Chopin has used to call attention to his having branched out, and this is backed up by the distribution of a booklet bearing on the cover the words, "A Few Reasons Why We Should Be Your Family Florists." The booklet contains a few pages of the "reasons" in type and many other pages of handsome halftones, showing the stores and the things for sale in them.

MANDA GETS DAMAGES.

Judge Vail, sitting in the Supreme Court of New Jersey, has directed a verdict for $710 with interest in favor of W. A. Manda, of South Orange, who brought suit against the United States Express Co. for damages to a carload of plants and ferns, shipped nearly two years ago. Evidence in the case showed that March 1, 1911, Mr. Manda shipped a carload of plants by United States express to Boston, where they were to be displayed at the National Flower Show. It was shown that upon arrival there the plants and ferns, and particularly a large number of orchids, were partly chilled because of delay in delivery. Manda, through his attorneys, Vredenburg, Wall & Carey, asked $710 damages, and this was what the court awarded him.

WISTARIA NOT FLOWERING.

Please tell me just why my wistaria vine does not blossom. It is seven years old and has grown nicely each year. It is at the west end of a building and covers about fifteen feet of space. Any information as to why it does not bloom will be thankfully received.

G. P. B.

There appears to be a flowerless va-you have not pruned back your plant at all, this would be a suitable time to do so. Cut back last season's shoots to one or two eyes. The strong laterals, however, which you may want to cover the building, should be left longer. Continue this pruning each year and it may cause an earlier production of flower buds—always provided that your variety is not a flowerless one.

ANOTHER CARNATION DEAL.

A deal was consummated last week whereby the new pink carnation of Thomas Browne, Greenfield, Mich., has been purchased by S. S. Skidelsky & Co., of Philadelphia; the Breitmeyer Floral Co., of Mt. Clemens, Mich.; Philip Breitmeyer and Robert M. Rahaley, of Detroit. It will be remembered that this carnation was exhibited at the rose and carnation show at Detroit last January and was generally commended for its beautiful soft pink color, good stem and general appearance and form of flower. At that time several prominent eastern growers went out to Mr. Browne's to see it and were impressed by its vigorous growth. Mr. Browne asserted that, besides color and size of bloom, it is remarkably productive and not a cropper.

It is rumored around Detroit that quite a sum was paid for the variety, a sum running nearly to five figures. It has been decided to name the carnation after Mr. Skidelsky's home town, Philadelphia. It will be exhibited at all next season's flower shows and disseminated in 1914.

CULTURE FOR EARLY TULIPS.

Please state how I should handle tulips after bringing them in from outdoors. The variety is La Reine and directly in the light or the stems are sure to be short. Place them in a case on the bench, or below it, where they can be kept quite dark in order to draw the stems up well. Gradually admit light as the flowers show. Such a case as is used for growing lily of the valley is just the thing for these early tulips.

MICHIGAN FERNS.

The gathering, packing, storing and shipping of fancy cut ferns has become a considerable industry in certain parts of Michigan. It is only a few years since the Michigan product has been an important factor in the markets, the entire supply having previously come from New England and from the south. Now, however, all through the Michigan fern district there are such storage houses as that shown in the accompanying illustration, owned by Henry Lesher, at Mancelona. The interior view presents a scene of everyday activity during the three autumn months and a part of June. During the busy season Mr. Lesher says he puts up 100,000 to 150,000 ferns each day. They are bunched and packed by nimble-fingered women working in light, airy quarters, as shown in the picture.

Mr. Lesher has drifted into the flower business through his connection with the fern industry. There is no greenhouse at Mancelona and the people were in the habit of sending to larger cities for their flowers. It was natural to have Mr. Lesher do the sending, and he has thus built up quite a little retail cut flower business.

ASPARAGUS AND VINCAS.

Will you please tell me how to grow Asparagus Sprengeri and Vinca variegata? Mine last year grew so slowly that the most of them almost seemed to stand still. Do they need rich soil and lots of water, or what would you advise? Is it better to have them potted or in the bench? I built my greenhouse last year and so am new at the business. Any suggestions you can make will be appreciated. C. A. H.

Asparagus Sprengeri grows more satisfactorily if planted out on the bench than in pots. About five inches of soil will be enough, if the soil is of good quality. Top soil from a pasture lot, composted with one-fourth to one-third of stable manure, gives good results, and after the plants are well established a top-dressing of manure will help them. Asparagus requires quite a lot of water when growing freely and should have a night temperature of 60 degrees.

Vinca variegata may be grown in the same sort of soil as the Sprengeri, but during the winter the growth is not so rapid as in spring and summer. This plant may be grown in pots set along the front of the asparagus bench, although a little lower temperature than that advised for asparagus will do no harm to the vines.

THE WESTERN ASSOCIATION.

The annual meeting and bulb show of the Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Association will be held at 66 East Randolph street, Chicago, Friday and Saturday, February 7 and 8.

Following the precedent established at the 1911 show, the entries will not be competitive. Each grower stands on his own feet, and all will have equal chance. A cordial invitation is given every grower to come and show his product, even if you have only one dahlia clump, or a plate of a dozen gladioli. Let the growers of the central west put up a show of bulbs that will cause the trade to take notice. The reward will come to those who do. Last season some difficulty was experienced by growers in attending the Chicago show because of its being held so near the holidays. Many who had greenhouses and other lines of work were rushed and could not attend. This year the executive committee decided to adjourn the meeting until February 7 and 8, as being the best all-around time. Growers from every one of the eight states now represented in the association are invited to take these dates for a business visit to Chicago, enjoying both opportunities. The Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Association is endeavoring to interest every grower who is making the business of outdoor flower-growing a livelihood, to come and aid each other and get what benefit accrues to each by working together for mutual good.

All exhibits should be sent by express prepaid to 66 East Randolph street, in care of the A. L. Randall Co., and someone will be on the ground the day previous to care for them until the owners give proper direction for disposal. All exhibits should be on hand at least one day before the show opens, so that proper care can be used in giving good space. All entries should be sent to the secretary previous to February 3, as he will go to Chicago February 4. Additions will be made to the following program and published in the Bulletin to go out this coming week:

Exhibits to be in position by 12 m., Friday, February 7.

TROUBLE WITH SALVIAS.

I have been having trouble with my salvia plants. The leaves are covered with little holes. I would be glad to know the cause of this and what to do in the matter. If you can give me any helpful information I shall appreciate it highly. H. D.

Without seeing the leaves I can only guess at the cause of the numerous small holes. Probably some small flies or other insects are responsible for their appearance, in which case either fumigation or spraying with some insecticide should clean them out in short order. C. W.

ORCHIDS

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Dendrobiums.

The earliest plants of Dendrobium nobile and some of its hybrids have already some flowers expanded, and for the next two months or more these beautiful East Indian orchids will make a grand display. Just as soon as the nodes on the flower stems show prominently, remove the plants from the cool, dry house where they have been resting, to warmer and moister quarters. Spray overhead on clear days, but do not afford much moisture at the roots or many of the nodes will develop growths instead of flowers. There is much less likelihood of the plants getting too much moisture about the roots if they are suspended from the roof rather than stood on the benches.

These winter and early spring flowering dendrobies are fine for use in store windows, and as they can be sold at a moderate price there is an increasing call for them at the better class of stores. In addition to the many fine forms of nobile, of which nobilium, Sanderianum, Cooksonianum, albidiflorum (pure white), virginale, Murrhinianum and Amesiae are extra fine, such hybrids as Luna, chrysodiscus, Cybele, Schneiderianum, Ainsworthii, Cassiope, splendissimum grandiflorum and Harold are extra good and all are good growers. The strikingly beautiful D. Wardianum, with flowers often four inches across, must also be mentioned, as well as D. Findleyanum, which has been much used in hybridizing. All the dendrobies are grand for table decorations, but when used in this way they should be afforded more water at the root than when in the greenhouse.

Phaius.

The spikes are now well advanced on Phaius grandifolius, which is the best known and most easily grown of these terrestrial orchids. While these are quite robust growing plants and must never be kept entirely dry at the root, the water supply should now be much reduced, but the atmosphere in which they are growing should be kept moist. A temperature of 55 degrees at night is ample for them and the atmosphere should never be stuffy. They love fresh air as much as cattleyas and succeed well at the cool end of the cattleya house. Some of the charming and free blooming hybrids, such as Cooksonii and Norman, can be grown in quite a small bench space compared with the robust P. grandifolius. The phaiocalanthe hybrids, between phaius and calanthe, require more heat than phaius. Keep the leaves sponged as well as occasionally sprayed, for thrips and scale often attack them. For compost I find that two-thirds fibrous loam, with the finer particles shaken out, and one-third fern fiber answer well, adding a little dried cow manure for P. grandifolius. All grow best in pots and ample drainage must be afforded.

Cymbidiums.

Cymbidiums, which are usually found in their native state growing at considerable elevations on the mountains in Java, Borneo, Nepal and other warm parts of Asia, require an intermediate temperature, 50 to 52 degrees at night being sufficiently warm. In summer they must be well shaded and given plenty of fresh air. Nearly all are robust growing and succeed best in pots containing equal parts of fern fiber and fibrous loam, to which has been added some fresh-chopped sphagnum moss. Frequent repotting is to be discouraged, as the roots resent it; eburneum will have its ivory white flowers open in two or three weeks. These are produced singly on erect stalks and are three to four inches across. The hybrid eburneo-Lowianum carries five to ten flowers, paler in color than Lowianum, on its stout flower spikes. This species will soon be in flower. The comparatively new species, C. Sanderi, also called insignis, with pinkish flowers, is fine. C. Tracyanum is a summer bloomer which makes a grand specimen plant. There are a number of good hybrids now in commerce. Of these C. Veitchii, C. Holfordianum and C. Winnianum are all desirable additions.

Miltonias.

Of the warmer growing miltonias, M. Rozlii is perhaps the most beautiful, as well as of greatest commercial value. It needs plenty of heat and moisture all the day. It is almost constantly growing and should therefore never be allowed to become dry at the root. It also needs frequent spraying to keep insect pests in check. There is a pure white form of this miltonia which is particularly desirable.

Miltonia vexillaria, one of the most beautiful of early summer blooming Colombian orchids, is now in active growth. The plants need a light, sunny position, which will cause the leaves to take on a ruddy hue. A temperature of 55 degrees at night and a moderate amount of water at the roots are needed. Often the leaves will come stuck together and will grow deformed unless carefully separated with a thin piece of wood or a knife blade. M. candida is a wonderfully free-blooming fall-flowering sort. The flowers are yellowish, spotted brown, with a white lip flushed with pink. M. Bleuana is the peer of the whole family. It likes more heat than M. vexillaria, 60 degrees at night suiting it in winter. It wants only a moderate water supply now, as do M. Bluntii and M. Clowesii.

THE SECOND ALBUM.

The Album of Designs published by The Review last spring seemed to fill a long-felt want; an edition designed to last a year was sold out within eight months. The last of the presswork on the second edition was completed January 13 and the book now is in the bindery. It will be ready for mailing some day this week. In general character the book is the same as the first edition, though many new designs have been substituted where two or more of somewhat similar character appeared in the first edition. The book is printed on fine, enameled paper and is substantially bound in a cover which will stand wear. Although many people were so kind as to say that the first edition was worth more money than the price asked for it, the price has not been raised for the second edition. Copies will be sent postpaid at 75 cents each, or in dozen lots at 50 cents by express collect.

A SAMPLE OF VIOLETS.

I enclose a sample of violets and shall be pleased to have your opinion on their quality. Please state, also, what variety you consider them to be. T. E. T.

The flowers are of fine quality and appear to be Princess of Wales.

once in three years is usually sufficient. Water must be supplied sparingly until root growth becomes active. In summer, when in full growth, a liberal supply is necessary.

Cymbidium Lowianum, with its long, many-flowered racemes, is the best known of the family. As many as thirty to forty flowers are sometimes produced on a raceme and the flowers have wonderful lasting properties, keeping fresh for fully three months. The variety Lowianum concolor, with a clear yellow lip, is handsome. C.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Easter Lilies.

It is an old and tolerably true saying that to be sure of having Easter lilies on time the buds should show when Lent comes in. That date will be here before we know it, for it is February 5 this year, and how about your lilies? It looks as if a good many growers would be late with their stock. A mild winter has been favorable for pushing the plants ahead, but one can expect much cold and dark weather within the next few weeks. Lilies which seem at all late should be given the warmest house you have; 65 degrees at night will do, but for the laggards 5 degrees more will be better. Spray them freely and do not allow aphids to get any foothold on them. From now on the plants will need considerable moving around. Those which will soon have buds peeping can have a slightly cooler house, but do not let the drop be over 10 degrees or harm may come. Throw away all puny and diseased plants. There are always more or less of these. Give the extra space to the healthy ones. Do not try to force any plants which are only an inch or two above the pots. You cannot get these into flower by March 23 by any process. You would better hold them back to be of some use for the weeks following Easter, when home trade can always care for a certain number.

Canterbury Bells.

Nothing is to be gained by starting Canterbury bells too early. It is a common mistake to pot them early, and instead of allowing them to remain outdoors or in a coldframe until they have had one or two moderate freezings, to place them in the greenhouse at once. Anyone who has tried the two plans must have been convinced that it is just as important to freeze these plants, or at least give them a period of rest in a low temperature, as in the case of lily of the valley and astilbes, or that much misunderstood but beautiful lily, L. candidum.

In starting Canterbury bells, let them have a night temperature of 45 degrees; later, as the flower spikes advance, raise it 5 degrees but not any higher. Good plants of this beautiful biennial cannot be grown in a hot, stuffy greenhouse. Easter comes so early this year that it is useless to try to force this plant into bloom for it, but if allowed to come along in a cool, airy greenhouse, and if well fed and watered and kept clean of aphids, splendid plants will be the result. If you want to save some for cutting at Memorial day, keep them in a cold pit for some time yet and plant them in a greenhouse bench early in March. You will find them invaluable at a time when flowers are none too abundant.

Stocks.

It is too early yet to sow stocks for a Memorial day crop, but they make a good spring crop, and while they may not be particularly good sellers in the big wholesale markets, are valuable to country florists for use in designs. Suitable forcing varieties are White Column, Crimson Column, Beauty of Nice, of a charming delicate pink color, and Queen Alexandra, lilac rose. The giant ten weeks varieties are excellent for sowing a little later in the season for a Memorial day crop. Sow the seeds in flats of light, sandy soil, mostly leaf-mold. Cover the seeds with fine sand rather than soil, and protect from the sun until germinated. Then give them a shelf close to the glass and pot off singly when large enough to handle. Purchase the best seed; it will prove the cheapest in the end.

Rex Begonias.

There are now some beautiful varieties of Rex begonias, and at the present time, while plenty of bottom heat is at command, they can be quite easily rooted. Select the oldest leaves for propagating purposes, discarding the thin outer edges. Cut the leaves in pieces about an inch square. They will root best where the veins are the thickest, near the leaf stalk. Do not lay them flat on the sand, but stand them on edge. As soon as little plants appear, pot off singly and grow along in a warm house until well established. They will later do well in any ordinary greenhouse. Colored-leaved plants are not popular with everyone, but these begonias have many friends.

Heliotropes.

The old stock heliotrope plants now have an abundance of cuttings. Place these in the cutting bench as soon as ready and be sure always to pot off before they become at all hard, or they will never make good plants. If you want to grow a batch of standard heliotropes, which sell readily at Christmas as well as in spring, select some of the strongest cuttings. Do not pinch them, but remove all side shoots and flowers as they appear; stake up securely and pot along as required. When the stem has reached the necessary height, pinch out the top and keep the resultant shoots pinched until a good head is made. The stems need not be higher than eighteen inches, and in 8-inch pots these make nice plants. If, however, big specimens are wanted for piazza use, fifteen to eighteen months are needed to produce them in 12-inch pots or small tubs. I have found that for extra large standards I can get better results from seedlings than from cuttings, as the former possess greater vigor.

OUR FIRST GERANIUMS.

Their South African Ancestors.

The geranium belongs to the pelargonium family, of which there are 175 species. Almost all of these species are natives of the Cape of Good Hope. Therefore, if we would go back to the origin of this popular plant, we should take a trip to South Africa, to the vast desert of Karoo, where we shall find a region rich in flowers, glowing with many colors, and consisting largely of the wild pelargoniums from which our geraniums are descended. These often grow to the height of miniature deciduous trees, although where they have more rain, in the valleys near the coast, they are evergreen shrubs.

In Johnson's "Gerarde" of 1633 is a report of a plant called Geranium Indicum, "of late brought to England through the industry of Mr. John Tradescant. I did see it in flower about the end of July, 1632, being the first time it hath flowered with the owner thereof." Hence the first flowering of a geranium in England was about 280 years ago. Mr. Tradescant, no doubt, brought it from Barbary in the voyage he made with the English fleet that was sent against the Algerian pirates in 1620. As the Cape was discovered 123 years before this date, this species had probably been carried to Algiers by the Portuguese from the Cape of Good Hope. Soon after, the Dutch introduced over a dozen species from South Africa.

The Early Hybridizers.

The splendid named kinds we have today are the product of systematic hybridizing or crossing by our florists during the last 100 years, a brief time when the results attained are compared with the wild types. In the year 1815, amateurs began to hybridize the species and obtained many beautiful hybrids.

It is quite evident that the blood of a score or more species has been used to form our present type of geraniums. It is difficult to trace their parentage, as these early workers kept no record of their crosses, making questions of pedigree difficult to determine.

Pelargonium zonale and P. inquinans were the leading species used in producing our popular bedding geraniums. About the year 1815 Mr. Bailey produced Lee's Variegated, the first scarlet variegated. Mr. Kinghorn crossed it on P. compactum and secured Cerise Unique and the famous Flower of the Day. Mr. Kinghorn considered this the greatest advance ever obtained at one bound, in this kind of work. The large seedling plant and two smaller ones were sold to the Messrs. Lee, and in eburneum will have its ivory white flowers open in two or three weeks. These are produced singly on erect stalks and are three to four inches across. The hybrid eburneo-Lowianum carries five to ten flowers, paler in color than Lowianum, on its stout flower spikes. This species will soon be in flower. The comparatively new species, C. Sanderi, also called insigne, with pinkish flowers, is fine. C. Tracyanum is a summer bloomer which makes a grand specimen plant. There are a number of good hybrids now in commerce. Of these C. Veitchii, C. Holfordianum and C. Winnianum are all desirable additions.

Miltonias.

Of the warmer growing miltonias, M. Roezlii is perhaps the most beautiful, as well as of greatest commercial value. It needs plenty of heat and moisture all the day. It is almost constantly growing and should therefore never be allowed to become dry at the root. It also needs frequent spraying to keep insect pests in check. There is a pure white form of this miltonia which is particularly desirable.

Miltonia vexillaria, one of the most beautiful of early summer blooming Colombian orchids, is now in active growth. The plants need a light, sunny position, which will cause the leaves to take on a ruddy hue. A temperature of 55 degrees at night and a moderate amount of water at the roots are needed. Often the leaves will come stuck together and will grow deformed unless carefully separated with a thin piece of wood or a knife blade. M. candida is a wonderfully free-blooming fall-flowering sort. The flowers are yellowish, spotted brown, with a white lip flushed with pink. M. Bleuana is the peer of the whole family. It likes more heat than M. vexillaria, 60 degrees at night suiting it in winter. It wants only a moderate water supply now, as do M. Bluntii and M. Clowesii.

THE SECOND ALBUM.

The Album of Designs published by The Review last spring seemed to fill a long-felt want; an edition designed to last a year was sold out within eight months. The last of the presswork on the second edition was completed January 13 and the book now is in the bindery. It will be ready for mailing some day this week. In general character the book is the same as the first edition, though many new designs have been substituted where two or more of somewhat similar character appeared in the first edition. The book is printed on fine, enameled paper and is substantially bound in a cover which will stand wear. Although many people were so kind as to say that the first edition was worth more money than the price asked for it, the price has not been raised for the second edition. Copies will be sent postpaid at 75 cents each, or in dozen lots at 50 cents by express collect.

A SAMPLE OF VIOLETS.

I enclose a sample of violets and shall be pleased to have your opinion on their quality. Please state, also, what variety you consider them to be. T. E. T.

The flowers are of fine quality and appear to be Princess of Wales.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Easter Lilies.

It is an old and tolerably true saying that to be sure of having Easter lilies on time the buds should show when Lent comes in. That date will be here before we know it, for it is February 5 this year, and how about your lilies? It looks as if a good many growers would be late with their stock. A mild winter has been favorable for pushing the plants ahead, but one can expect much cold and dark weather within the next few weeks. Lilies which seem at all late should be given the warmest house you have; 65 degrees at night will do, but for the laggards 5 degrees more will be better. Spray them freely and do not allow aphids to get any foothold on them. From now on the plants will need considerable moving around. Those which will soon have buds peeping can have a slightly cooler house, but do not let the drop be over 10 degrees or harm may come. Throw away all puny and diseased plants. There are always more or less of these. Give the extra space to the healthy ones. Do not try to force any plants which are only an inch or two above the pots. You cannot get these into flower by March 23 by any process. You would better hold them back to be of some use for the weeks following Easter, when home trade can always care for a certain number.

Canterbury Bells.

Nothing is to be gained by starting Canterbury bells too early. It is a common mistake to pot them early, and instead of allowing them to remain outdoors or in a coldframe until they have had one or two moderate freezings, to place them in the greenhouse at once. Anyone who has tried the two plans must have been convinced that it is just as important to freeze these plants, or at least give them a period of rest in a low temperature, as in the case of lily of the valley and astilbes, or that much misunderstood but beautiful lily, L. candidum.

In starting Canterbury bells, let them have a night temperature of 45 degrees; later, as the flower spikes advance, raise it 5 degrees but not any higher. Good plants of this beautiful biennial cannot be grown in a hot, stuffy greenhouse. Easter comes so early this year that it is useless to try to force this plant into bloom for it, but if allowed to come along in a cool, airy greenhouse, and if well fed and watered and kept clean of aphids, splendid plants will be the result. If you want to save some for cutting at Memorial day, keep them in a cold pit for some time yet and plant them in a greenhouse bench early in March. You will find them invaluable at a time when flowers are none too abundant.

Stocks.

It is too early yet to sow stocks for a Memorial day crop, but they make a good spring crop, and while they may not be particularly good sellers in the big wholesale markets, are valuable to country florists for use in designs. Suitable forcing varieties are White Column, Crimson Column, Beauty of Nice, of a charming delicate pink color, and Queen Alexandra, lilac rose. The giant ten weeks varieties are excellent for sowing a little later in the season for a Memorial day crop. Sow the seeds in flats of light, sandy soil, mostly leaf-mold. Cover the seeds with fine sand rather than soil, and protect from the sun until germinated. Then give them a shelf close to the glass and pot off singly when large enough to handle. Purchase the best seed; it will prove the cheapest in the end.

Rex Begonias.

There are now some beautiful varieties of Rex begonias, and at the present time, while plenty of bottom heat is at command, they can be quite easily rooted. Select the oldest leaves for propagating purposes, discarding the thin outer edges. Cut the leaves in pieces about an inch square. They will root best where the veins are the thickest, near the leaf stalk. Do not lay them flat on the sand, but stand them on edge. As soon as little plants appear, pot off singly and grow along in a warm house until well established. They will later do well in any ordinary greenhouse. Colored-leaved plants are not popular with everyone, but these begonias have many friends.

Heliotropes.

The old stock heliotrope plants now have an abundance of cuttings. Place these in the cutting bench as soon as ready and be sure always to pot off before they become at all hard, or they will never make good plants. If you want to grow a batch of standard heliotropes, which sell readily at Christmas as well as in spring, select some of the strongest cuttings. Do not pinch them, but remove all side shoots and flowers as they appear; stake up securely and pot along as required. When the stem has reached the necessary height, pinch out the top and keep the resultant shoots pinched until a good head is made. The stems need not be higher than eighteen inches, and in 8-inch pots these make nice plants. If, however, big specimens are wanted for piazza use, fifteen to eighteen months are needed to produce them in 12-inch pots or small tubs. I have found that for extra large standards I can get better results from seedlings than from cuttings, as the former possess greater vigor.

OUR FIRST GERANIUMS.

Their South African Ancestors.

The geranium belongs to the pelargonium family, of which there are 175 species. Almost all of these species are natives of the Cape of Good Hope. Therefore, if we would go back to the origin of this popular plant, we should take a trip to South Africa, to the vast desert of Karoo, where we shall find a region rich in flowers, glowing with many colors, and consisting largely of the wild pelargoniums from which our geraniums are descended. These often grow to the height of miniature deciduous trees, although where they have more rain, in the valleys near the coast, they are evergreen shrubs.

In Johnson's "Gerarde" of 1633 is a report of a plant called Geranium Indicum, "of late brought to England through the industry of Mr. John Tradescant. I did see it in flower about the end of July, 1632, being the first time it hath flowered with the owner thereof." Hence the first flowering of a geranium in England was about 280 years ago. Mr. Tradescant, no doubt, brought it from Barbary in the voyage he made with the English fleet that was sent against the Algerian pirates in 1620. As the Cape was discovered 123 years before this date, this species had probably been carried to Algiers by the Portuguese from the Cape of Good Hope. Soon after, the Dutch introduced over a dozen species from South Africa.

The Early Hybridizers.

The splendid named kinds we have today are the product of systematic hybridizing or crossing by our florists during the last 100 years, a brief time when the results attained are compared with the wild types. In the year 1815, amateurs began to hybridize the species and obtained many beautiful hybrids.

It is quite evident that the blood of a score or more species has been used to form our present type of geraniums. It is difficult to trace their parentage, as these early workers kept no record of their crosses, making questions of pedigree difficult to determine.

Pelargonium zonale and P. inquinans were the leading species used in producing our popular bedding geraniums. About the year 1815 Mr. Bailey produced Lee's Variegated, the first scarlet variegated. Mr. Kinghorn crossed it on P. compactum and secured Crise Unique and the famous Flower of the Day. Mr. Kinghorn considered this the greatest advance ever obtained at one bound, in this kind of work. The large seedling plant and two smaller ones were sold to the Messrs. Lee, and in 1850 they had 1,500 plants to offer to the trade, making a wonderful sight for those days.

Origin of the Tricolors.

This Flower of the Day was the founder of the entire race of tricolors. In the year 1850 Mr. Kinghorn raised from Flower of the Day the first silver tricolor, named Attraction, the leaf of which has a silver margin, with a dark zone diffusing rays of red and rich brown into the creamy margin. Mr. Greive here took up the work, crossing a dark zoned sort, named Cottage Maid, with Attraction. One of these seedlings was the parent of Emperor of the French, the parent of the golden tricolors.

From Cottage Maid and Golden Chain he obtained Golden Tom Thumb, and six inches long, rubbed off with a heel and placed in a cutting bench with a brisk bottom heat. They can also be increased from seeds, but cuttings are comparatively easy to root and soon make fine plants. C. W.

WARMING THE WATER.

For watering plants, is it all right to use the water that we get by putting on the pressure from the city hydrant and running it through the boiler, thereby warming the water to about 65 degrees? The water from the city hydrant is too cold to use.

S. & S.

Water of a temperature of 65 degrees will be all right to use for watering plants. However, experiments made some years ago on coleus and

REMOVING HARD PUTTY.

In The Review of December 26, page 17, we find an item with reference to removing hard putty from sashbars. The method there suggested is to soften the putty by running a hot soldering iron over it. We are now taking extremely hard putty off about 250 bars with a blow torch, which works well. In fact, we believe it is a much better and easier way than the use of either a chisel or a soldering iron, though we have not tried either of these tools. It requires two men, however, to do the work with the torch.

We write this so as to give others the benefit of our experience in this work, which is none too easy at best. Wensel & Hecht.

A TEXAS ACORN.

There is an old saying that "Great oaks from little acorns grow," and it is well known that some of the largest greenhouse establishments have been developed, in a few short years, from a beginning made with no more than a few hotbeds. In a good many instances the beginning has been in combination with some other line of business. The United States census in 1910 counted as florists all those who derived twenty per cent of their income from any department of the flower business. E. Friedrich, of Austin, Texas, two views of whose establishment are shown in the accompanying illustrations, combines a number of lines. Over the awning on the front of his new store there are the words "Groceries and Florist," but a part of the building is used for the manufacture of the famous Texas champagne, otherwise known as Mustang wine, and he also deals in seeds. The building was put up last summer at a cost of $4,000. It covers a ground area 30x56 feet and has a basement eight feet high. Twelve feet of the length of the building are used for wagons, with an automobile in early prospect. A space 16x40 is used for the wine industry, and 14x16 for the storage of large palms. The glass, mostly used for plants, is shown in one of the pictures. There are two greenhouses and a number of rows of hotbeds. Mr. Friedrich is planning to build a modern range of greenhouses during the summer of 1913.

from Emperor of the French and Golden Tom Thumb he obtained Golden Pheasant, the first true golden tricolor. By crossing Golden Pheasant back on Emperor of the French, he produced the two most famous tricolors, Sunset and Mrs. Pollock.

The Double Geraniums.

The proper history of our double geraniums begins with Wilmore's Surprise, in 1850. He found it in a patch of hollyhocks, and it was such a departure from former types that it was thought by some to have been a true hybrid between a geranium and a hollyhock. The double zonale geraniums were of a later date. In 1869, seventeen double zonales were introduced.

In the few following years the floral world went mad on this subject and geraniums were everything and all other flowers nothing. Gardeners' heads were so filled with zones, margins, trusses, pips and beds that they could talk of nothing else.

The geranium has continued to add to its friends every year since then, until it stands today our most popular bedding plant, more geraniums being sold annually than all other bedding plants combined. F. H. De Witt.

PASSION VINES.

Will you please tell us how passion vines are propagated? L. S.

Passion vines are propagated from cuttings of half ripened wood, four to other plants in cutting benches, watered at a variety of temperatures, showed no advantage gained by the plants from using water at 65 to 75 degrees, as compared with 35 to 40 degrees. You need not be afraid to use your city hydrant water. Hundreds of florists are doing so and the plants do not show any ill effects from its use. By using warm water, the plants would probably be caused to flower a little earlier, but whether the quality would be any better is an open question. C. W.

MUMS AT NEW ORLEANS.

All Saints' day is the big flower day at New Orleans. It comes when the chrysanthemum is just approaching the height of its season, but the New Orleans florists have had their own troubles in providing a local supply. The white chrysanthemum is the popular flower of the day; there has been scarcely any limit to the quantities which could be sold if good stock were offered at a reasonable price. The growers, seeking to meet the demand, tried growing mums outdoors. They planted them in the open ground, only to have some misfortune befall two years out of three. Covers were tried, first of cloth and later of hotbed sashes. The cloth failed to protect the stock from hard storms, and the sashes frequently were not in place when the critical moment arrived. This method of growing proved too uncertain to be profitable. It resulted in many a telegraphic order to northern sources of supply for last-moment shipments.

Now a number of New Orleans growers are planting chrysanthemums in greenhouses, just as the northern growers handle them. Mrs. H. Robinson is possibly the best variety for their use and it appears likely that this method of growing will become more or less general in the south, so successful were the growers last season, though they produced only a fraction of the quantity needed to supply the demand.

The accompanying illustration shows a few blooms of Mrs. Robinson grown by Max Scheinuk, 145 Baronne street, New Orleans. He used a new house and it was his first experiment with mums under glass. The blooms shown are a fair sample of several thousands which were ready in the last days of October.

GARDENERS' ASSOCIATION.

The executive board of the National Association of Gardeners held its first meeting for the year on Wednesday afternoon, January 8, at the Murray Hill hotel, New York city. President William H. Waite was in the chair.

After disposing of the routine business before the meeting, the subject of the association maintaining a department along the lines of horticultural societies abroad, to which members of the profession may look for opportunity for advancement, was brought up for discussion, and resulted in the secretary being empowered to take the necessary steps to bring about the establishment of such a department.

On motion made by Ex-President Logan, it was also decided that the association award a medal for any new meritorious varieties of flowers, plants, vegetables or fruits originated by a gardener being a member of the association, and that the president annually appoint a committee of judges for that purpose. Mr. Waite appointed William Kleinheinz, of Pennsylvania; Peter Duff, of New Jersey, and James Stuart, of New York, to serve as a committee for 1913.

An appropriation was voted for the purpose of holding a National Gardeners' and Florists' bowling tournament in New York city during the week of the International Show, to which members of the Society of American Florists are to be invited. The event will occur at Thumm's alleys, on Broadway, famous for many big bowling events, and the association will offer two cups—one for the team and one for the individual making the highest score at the tournament. The tournament will be open to teams of three men, members of any local florists' or gardeners' club which they represent, and members either of the N. A. G. or S. A. F. The individual tournament will be open to members of the N. A. G. and S. A. F. The following committee was appointed to complete all arrangements: John Dodds, John W. Everett, A. Bauer, James Stuart and William Robertson, of Jenkintown, Pa. Many valuable prizes have already been contributed.

Lester E. Ortiz, superintendent of the Pratt estate, at Glen Cove, N. Y., and vice-president of the Farmers' Congress, of New York, addressed the meeting, stating that in his opinion the men who serve as superintendents on the private estates of the future will have to be informed on every branch that goes to make up a complete private establishment. He urged that the gardeners cooperate with the farmers to influence a more liberal appropriation of the millions expended annually, by the nation and states, to the purpose of educational work in agriculture and horticulture. He said that some sixteen or seventeen millions will be appropriated this year and that the gardeners of the nation should have some voice in the recommendations for distributing this vast sum. A meeting of the Farmers' Congress will shortly be held in New York city, to which Mr. Ortiz invited his fellow members and all gardeners.

The directors decided to hold the next meeting in New York during the National Show. An invitation will be extended to all members of the association to attend this meeting.

The officers and executive members of the association, as at present constituted, are:

President—William H. Waite, Yonkers, N. Y.
Vice-president—A. J. Smith, Lake Geneva, Wis.
Secretary—Martin C. Ebel, Madison, N. J.
Treasurer—James Stuart, Mamaroneck, N. Y.
Trustees for 1913—Peter Duff, Orange, N. J.; William Kleinheinz, Ogontz, Pa.; William Duckham, Madison, N. J.; Alexander MacKenzie, Glen Cove, N. Y.; John Dodds, Wyncote, Pa.

Directors to serve until 1914—Robert Angus, Tarrytown, N. Y.; Robert Bottomley, New Canaan, Conn.; Carl Schaeffer, Tuxedo Park, N. Y.; E. Wetterlow, West Manchester, Mass.; T. J. Kempton, Baychester, N. Y.; E. Trethewey, Tarrytown, N. Y.; Alexander Fraser, Newport, R. I.

Directors to serve until 1915—John Shore, Harrison, N. Y.; Thomas Proctor, Lenox, Mass.; William N. Craig, North Easton, Mass.; Frank E. Whitney, Fishkill, N. Y.; Robert Williamson, Greenwich, Conn.; F. Kirk, Bar Harbor, Me.; James Bell, New York, N. Y.

Directors to serve until 1916—Thomas W. Logan, Jenkintown, Pa.; John F. Huss, Hartford, Conn.; John W. Everett, Glen Cove, N. Y.; A. Bauer, Deal Beach, N. J.; John W. Jones, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Alexander McPherson, Washington, D. C.; James C. Shield, Monticello, Ill.

Reports of the various committees show that the association is in excellent condition, financially and otherwise, with prospects that its growth during 1913 will even exceed the phenomenal strides it made during the last year.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

The National Dahlia Society.

The National Dahlia Society came in for a certain amount of criticism in 1912, not altogether unmerited, on account of its marking time instead of keeping pace in the forward march along with the floral societies. Be that as it may, 1913 will probably see a reawakening, as its officers and committee are fully alive to their responsibilities, impressed upon them during their period of relaxation. The National Dahlia Society.

The National Dahlia Society came in for a certain amount of criticism in 1912, not altogether unmerited, on account of its marking time instead of keeping pace in the forward march along with the floral societies. Be that as it may, 1913 will probably see a reawakening, as its officers and committee are fully alive to their responsibilities, impressed upon them during their period of relaxation. Besides, the appointment of a new secretary, who has the ability and the tact to make all toe the line, should do much to make amends for the past. The new secretary, J. B. Riding, is an eloquent speaker, a fluent writer and a clever grower and exhibitor of decorative dahlias.

Happily, however, there has been no falling off in the popularity of the dahlia itself. True, the cactus, show and pompon types have not made much headway in public favor, judging by nurserymen's sales generally, but the collarette and garden decorative types have caught on. The collarettes were introduced from Germany and France a few years ago. The German type usually has rounded petals; the French type, pointed or star-shaped, but in form and in range of colors both are now eclipsed by British raised varieties, especially by the numerous varieties from the nurseries of Dobbie & Co., Edinburgh, who easily lead in this section. Peony-flowered dahlias, introduced from Holland prior to the collarettes, still hold their ground, and for a gay show of color they deserve a place in the garden.

National Chrysanthemum Society.

The National Chrysanthemum Society is all alive and has experienced a busy year, especially its floral committee, which has dealt with 250 novelties. In future the modest fee of 1 shilling will be charged for each novelty placed before the committee. Probably the fee is too low to deter any from trying their luck. In the judging of market or commercial varieties a new scale of pointing will be introduced next season. I have looked up the American scale of judging commercial varieties, and I find the English runs on similar lines, with one or two important differences which Review readers can easily look up for themselves. British scale: Color, 20; form, 20; fullness, 10; petal, 10; stem, 10; foliage, 10; habit of plant, 20; total, 100.

Single chrysanthemums continue to make considerable headway. Now that raisers have got more substance into the petals, they are in demand for decorative work generally, and they will be judged in future on the following scale: Form, 20; color, 20; petal, 10; eye, 10; stem, 10; foliage, 10; habit of plant, 20; total, 100.

Cold Storage of Valley.

A case of considerable importance to the lily of the valley trade has just been decided in the London law courts. A. A. Sylvester, Hampton, a large forcer of lily of the valley, was sued by the Imperial Cold Stores for payment of £25 for storage of lilies in cases. Defendant admitted the amount, but counterclaimed for damages in respect of an alleged breach of contract relating to 57,000 lily crowns, packed in nineteen cases of 3,000 each. When opened after storage all the nineteen cases were found more or less started into growth. The growing crowns had become matted or entwined with the roots in other bundles, and vice versa, and could not be separated without injury. Many bundles, particularly those in the middle of the cases, were not frozen at all.

Defendant had given instructions, when the cases went to the stores, that they were to be stood out apart from one another for a certain period, so that the contents would be frozen through to the center of each case before stacking them in the stores. Evidence was given that these instructions were not carried out, and although the cases were, apart from this, stored in the usual manner and a proper temperature was maintained, growth took place as stated. After evidence on both sides was heard, the judge said: "I am clearly of opinion that the goods never were properly frozen, so as to prevent growth during the required period, and I give judgment for the defendant at £110 and costs." PETER MURRAY'S PLANT.

Quite a number of the leading florists in Massachusetts have graduated from the ranks of the private gardeners. Practically all of these have made a success of commercial floriculture and would not wish to return to the ranks of the privates. A few of those in this class occurring to me at the moment are Alexander Montgomery, Peter Fisher, William Nicholson, M. H. Walsh, John Barr, F. E. Palmer, James Wheeler, Arthur Griffin, and Peter Murray. The subject of this notice is, as his name would indicate, a native of the land o' cakes. He was for a good many years head gardener for the late W. P. Winsor, of Fairhaven, and grew all classes of plants well, including orchids, secur-

In 1905 Mr. Murray made his venture into commercialism and for two years hired his employer's greenhouse, moving to his present excellent location five years ago. Mr. Murray's name came prominently before the public a few years ago as the originator of the Winsor carnation, introduced by the F. R. Pierson Co., a variety popular both here and in Europe.

Since locating at his present stand, Mr. Murray has added three houses, each 160 feet long, for carnations, mums, etc. He grows 6,500 carnations in his largest house, varieties being Winsor, White Winsor, Beacon and Pink Delight. He grows some 6,000 mums and 2,500 violets. Antirrhinum is popular and is heavily grown. One lean-to house, 150 feet long, holds 10,000 small ferns. Asparagus Sprengeri fills a house of similar size. Some 2,000 azaleas are imported and sold annually and 200,000 bulbs of various kinds are forced. Quite a number are also grown outside. Last Memorial day a batch of 6,000 Darwin tulips were just on time. This season another house was built for cattleyas. A general line of flowering and foliage plants for decorative purposes also is grown. Some 50,000 bedding plants are disposed of annually. Two steel hot water boilers procured from Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, do the heating. All greenhouse walls, pipe supports and walks are of concrete.

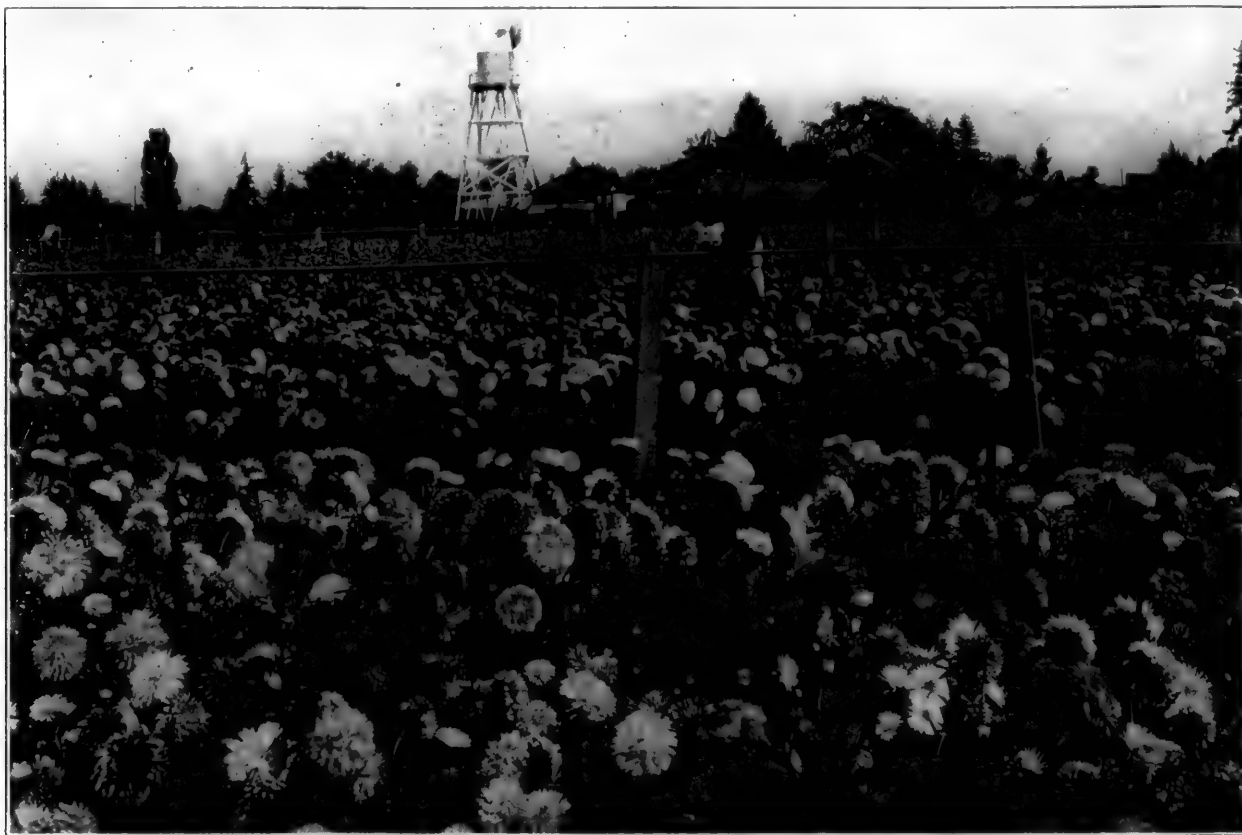

Nearly all stock is sold at retail, the wealthy residential town of Fairhaven, the city of New Bedford with over 100,000 people over the river, and many other towns along the cape having regular customers. The retail end has developed so that a design maker is kept constantly employed, a thirty horse-power motor making prompt delivery. Another car of similar horsepower is used by Mr. Murray in his business.

His landscape department employs thirty to forty men and uses up a lot of material. One or two parks are in Mr. Murray's charge. He is also tree warden of the town, and the trees show that they are well cared for. One of the best assets a florist can have is a capable wife, and Mrs. Murray is well qualified to manage a business herself.

One of the Fields of Crego Asters Grown by Herbert & Fleishauer, McMinnville, Ore.

HUSBAND, WIFE AND ASTERS.

One's attention naturally is arrested by the discovery that the partnership of Herbert & Fleishauer, McMinnville, Ore., consists of Herbert T. Fleishauer and Mrs. Fleishauer—when visitors ask for Mr. Herbert they discover that he is Mrs. Fleishauer's husband, whose first name is used in the firm designation. And then one's attention is gained for the fact that as growers of asters for the Portland cut flower market Herbert & Fleishauer made a name for themselves that has resulted in a seed business of more than local extent.

It was ten years ago that the Fleishauers undertook the growing of asters for the market. The first crops were from seed purchased from American seed houses and the varieties used at that time were Giant Comet, Peony Perfection, Vick's Branching and Vick's Upright, the Semple asters and Queen of the Market, but some difficulty was experienced in finding a ready market, owing to the fact that other established growers were then using seed from the same sources and had the advantage of being acquainted with the trade. Apparently impelled by the determination that overcomes all obstacles, Mr. and Mrs. Fleishauer began the study of the aster with a view to the development of a strain that would command a market, and soon found conditions favorable as to soil and climate. In 1908 seed was obtained of the Crego aster, in white and shell pink only. This proved to be an attractive flower and received the approval of the retail florists in Portland. Since that time this aster has much improved under their rigid selection and is now produced in white, shell pink, rose pink, purple and deep lavender.

During the ten years Herbert & Fleishauer have been making asters a specialty they have grown nearly every variety advertised. American and European seed has been tested side by side with the Oregon grown stock, with a view to obtaining the best asters for their purpose. Twenty-five or thirty new varieties have resulted from cross fertilization, some of which are improvements over the older types of this flower and have become quite generally grown on the coast. Mrs. Fleishauer takes pleasure in giving, to those interested in the work, a history of how they have carried on the development for many years, the results obtained by constant attention to selection, feeding, etc., and "Mr. Herbert" says the one great secret of the success of the firm as aster specialists is the fact that a woman is interested in it.

The most prominent type of aster seen in these fields last season was a new early aster that originated with Herbert & Fleishauer four years ago. It is fully as large as their Crego, or any of the Comet type of aster, is full to the center, on long, graceful stems, and comes into bloom two to three weeks ahead of any of the large-flowering asters. They had it in white, shell pink, rose pink, purple and lavender. Second in prominence was Oregon Monarch, a new midseason aster which they say is ahead of them all for their use. The flowers average from five to seven inches and contain more petals than any other aster. The colors are white, a fine shade of deep lavender, rose pink, blush pink, and purple. This novelty is a cross between the Semple and Vick's Rochester. Among the late asters was the Crego in all standard colors, and a true deep lavender, a new shade with the Crego. By careful selection Smith's Peerless is also promising good results as a late aster. But the best of the Semple type was the new Oregon Queen, with broad, heavy petals, many in number to each flower, making it full to the center and averaging four and one-half to five and one-half inches in diameter and three to three and one-half inches in depth. This they had in all colors except white. Many other new types promise much for the future and an especially attractive pair was found in a pink and white stripe and a purple and white stripe, both of which seem to take well in the market as a novelty and come surprisingly true to type each year.

"The aster is only one of the many crops which could be handled successfully in the great Willamette valley of Oregon," says Mr. Fleishauer. "Instead of our seed houses depending on foreign growers to supply so much seed, our people should get busy. We find ideal conditions for the successful production of garden peas, lettuce, onions, radishes, turnips, sweet peas and other seeds of that class. The time is coming when this will be a great gardening section. Its mild winters and cool summers make it a pleasant place to live in and the rich clay soil seems to produce everything except tropical plants. Hardly anybody who spends a year in the valley can be persuaded to make his home elsewhere."

Monticello, Ia.—C. L. Van Meter recently fell from the top of a high ladder to the cement pavement, and, as a result, was unable to attend to business for some time, though it was not believed that any of his injuries were dangerous.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week was a dull one for the majority, especially the smaller retail enterprises. A few of the large firms were busy, because of funeral orders, and the notable dinners and weddings, but the number of these was small and the general demand for cut flowers was far below normal. Prices in the wholesale market declined fifty per cent, for roses and carnations. Orchids and violets especially felt the strain, the latter selling in box lots at the week end as low as $1, a most unusual winter record. The banishment of the street merchant has closed the usual outlet and the problem of the surplus has become a serious one, which even the department stores have failed to solve. Carnations took a decided drop last week, any leftovers falling to $5 per thousand. Good stock sold at from $1 to $2 per hundred. The only anchor for the general market was the somewhat scant supply of the shorter grade of roses. There is an abundance of the longer grades of the standard varieties and a shortage of the novelties. There seems to be no lessening of the popularity of Shawyer, Russell and Sunburst. There are plenty of orchids of all the seasonable varieties. Cattleyas have sold at $35 per hundred and there has been a heavy supply of oncidiums. Gardenias are down to $3 per dozen and little valley goes above $3 per hundred. There is no shortage of Easter lilies and callas that bring over 10 cents are few. Sweet peas are now in full supply, with prices lower. Narcissi are off to $1 per hundred, and even as low as ten bunches for $1. There is the usual supply of hyacinths, mignonette, lilac, daisies and bouvardia. There is an abundance of smilax. The green goods market has been marking time since New Year's.

Club Meeting.

The first meeting of the new year, January 13, was most interesting, an attendance of over 100 greeting the new president, W. H. Siebrecht. Mr. Manda gave a farewell address, eulogizing his assistants, and called on Messrs. Duckham and Bunyard to introduce his successor. Mr. Siebrecht made a practical address, following which he announced his committees, as follows:

Essay—J. Austin Shaw, Leonard Barron, M. C. Ebel.

Legislative—Frank R. Pierson, Patrick O'Mara, Walter F. Sheridan.

Exhibition—John Miesem, Charles Schenck, Charles Weber, Patrick J. Smith, A. Kakuda.

House and entertainment—Frank M. Duggan, Alex. J. Guttman, Alfred E. Wheeler.

Award—Joseph A. Manda, John Donaldson, Wallace Pierson, A. L. Miller, Frank Traendly, Robert Simpson, I. S. Hendrickson.

Dinner—J. B. Nugent, Jr., Alex. McConnell, Walter F. Sheridan, Thomas B. De Forest, Robert Koehne, Joseph Fenrich.

Outing—Philip F. Kessler, Victor Dorval, Henry Weston, A. Buckholtz, Louis Schmutz, Jr., W. Phillips, Bert Chadwick, Roman Irwin, Anton Schultheis, Jr., A. Demeusy, Jr., H. C. Riedel, Paul Meconi.

Messrs. Donaldson, Young, Rickards,

Weathered, Sheridan and Miesem, the other officers, made brief addresses.

I. S. Hendrickson gave a report for the publicity committee, showing an expenditure of $714 in Hallowe'en and Thanksgiving poster advertising, with subscriptions of $756.15. Newspaper advertising will be tried for McKinley day.

Mr. Donaldson reported progress on the Smith memorial. Mr. Weathered reported for the entertainment committee and urged the prompt subscriptions of every club member. Already a large amount has been subscribed, several checks for $100 each having reached the treasurer.

Ex-President Manda read the semi-annual report of the trustees, showing a balance in the treasury December 31 of $4,933.84. Secretary Young's report showed a total membership of 367. Nineteen new members were elected, as follows: John Canning, H. A. Spavins, Harry C. Strobell, Emerson C. McFadden, George Burgevin, David Burgevin, A. H. Bobbink, Charles H. Atkins, John Condon, Wm. McCollum, Louis Patthey, Camille Roselle, Jasper McMullen, Percy W. Richter, Charles W. Beekman, A. N. Kinney, R. T. Brown, Max Schling and R. W. Loeben. The following new members were proposed: John White, Jr., Herbie C. Harris, John Hall, Marshall Crisman, Fred Cowperthwait, Geo. L. Freeman, Peter Jacobson, J. J. Gunther, C. F. Meyer, David Feurstenberg, Jas. Deans, A. J. Emerson, P. J. Deans, Chas. Arnold, H. B. Siebrecht, Wesley B. Leach, J. B. McKnight, Alex. I. Anderson, J. Y. Smith.

The award committee reported having visited J. D. Cockcroft January 3 and gave the new carnation, Northport, 86½ points and the club's certificate. December 13 the committee visited the Cottage Gardens and gave the new carnation, Matchless, 89 points and the club's certificate.

Max Schling, H. C. Riedel and Charles Beckman, new members, gave brief addresses.

P. J. Smith's motions in favor of the annual dinner and outing were carried unanimously.

John Donaldson, the vice-president, resigned from the board of trustees, and F. R. Pierson was appointed to the vacancy.

C. H. Totty's address in behalf of the National Flower Show was eloquent. He announced over $12,000 of space sold to exhibitors and said another month will show double this amount.

The exhibits of the evening were:

Carnations Wm. Eccles, British Triumph and Lady Northcliffe, by Scott Bros., Elmsford, received thanks of the club; Carnation Enchantress Supreme, by Dailedouze Bros., Flatbush, scored 86½ points; Carnation Improved Enchantress, by Frank Niquet, Patchogue, scored 85 points; Carnation Northport, by J. D. Cockcroft, Northport, received thanks of club; Carnation Salmon Beauty, by Traendly & Schenck, received thanks of the club; Carnation Matchless, by Cottage Gardens, Queens, received thanks of club.

The house committee gave the usual thought to the inner man and the president had perfectos on tap ad libitum.

Various Notes.

The National Flower Show entertainment committee held a meeting January 13, at the Earlington hotel, C. B.

Weathered in the chair. Many liberal contributions were announced, and the outlook is most promising.

Eugene Dailedouze has returned, with his brothers, Paul and Henry, from the south, including in his pilgrimage a stay in Costa Rica. He has many interesting stories to tell of Panama.

J. McHutchison will sail this week, on the Arcadian, for a short holiday in "the land of the lily and the rose."

Harry Bunyard celebrated a birthday anniversary January 3. Mr. Bunyard will lecture on the International Flower Show at Newport, R. I., January 28 and for the Westchester Horticultural Society early in February. He uses over 100 stereopticon views.

The Rumson Greenhouses, owned by the late M. C. D. Borden, and now run by the estate as a commercial enterprise, with William Turner as superintendent, has just recovered damages of $10,000 because of the escape of gas in the greenhouses, owing to defective pipe-laying by the municipality. Wm. Duckham and A. Herrington were engaged to determine the loss on orchids and roses. Many fine trees also were destroyed.

Philip Breitmeyer, of Detroit, was a recent visitor. Another western visitor last week was our old townsman, L. W. Wheeler, of Palo Alto, Cal.

The deaths of George F. Kidd, Samuel Reisner and others well known to the trade in New York will be found recorded in this week's obituary column.

The 100-mile gale last week did heavy damage to the plant of the Somerset Rose Co., at Basking Ridge, N. Y.

The latest news from the National Flower Show is that nearly $10,000 worth of exhibition space has been sold and over $3,000 contracted for in pages in the souvenir.

J. Austin Shaw.

Sydney B. Wertheimer, of Wertheimer Bros., sailed January 11, on the Arcadian, for a vacation in Bermuda, accompanied by his mother and sister. On his return Leon G. Wertheimer will make a pleasure trip to Panama.

The Flushing Rose Gardens has filed articles of incorporation, giving principal place of business as Manhattan. Capital is $40,000. The incorporators named are H. B. Mulliken, of Pelham; E. J. Moeller, of New York city, and F. C. Kronmeyer, of Jersey City.

Joseph Fleischman has received his discharge from bankruptcy and it is said that all his individual liabilities, aggregating close to $150,000, have been paid in full.

One of M. A. Bowe's boys is said to have disappeared recently, with the bankbook and the day's deposit.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The warm, dark weather has forced things along too fast and made the stock rather soft. There is a good cut of everything, more than there is a real demand for. The call has been good, under the circumstances, but not so heavy as it would have been under normal weather conditions. The agents in the neighboring towns are not calling for so many flowers as they do at times. This has had its effect in some stores in lowering prices. Others sell at the old prices and seem to lose little trade by doing it. Carnations are abundant. Roses are in good supply, but not so abundant as carnations.

Various Notes.

Last week saw another special sale of Killarney roses at 65 cents per dozen at the new store of McIntyre Bros. "Just to get people to visit the new place."

We had a pleasant visit with Ed Anderson, owner of the Lebanon Floral Co., of Lebanon, Tenn. Lebanon is a nice little college town of about 5,000 population. Mr. Anderson has 25,000 feet of glass, devoted mostly to roses, carnations and bedding plants. He has a remarkably good local trade for so small a town. His houses of Enchantress, Beacon and Rose-pink Enchantress carnations are in excellent condition and the cut is heavy, with quality that makes it easy to secure $1.50 per dozen, retail, and $4 per hundred, wholesale, at present. He has a nice lot of Bride and Bridesmaid roses and finds them profitable in spite of the two Killarneys, both of which he grows successfully. Richmond is his red rose. Mr. Anderson says he had an unusually heavy holiday trade. Poinsettias and begonias were his best sellers in pot plants.

The water is the highest in years. In order to get from the greenhouses to the store those connected with the Joy Floral Co. must drive through three feet of water for two blocks. F. B.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh had a slight interruption to business last week, in the shape of the biggest January flood on record. The river reached 31.3 feet, putting many of the lines of street cars out of business, as well as all the mills and factories along the river front. Everyone was talking flood and the cut flower business suffered along with other things.

Stock of all kinds is getting plentiful and there will probably be a drop in prices before many days, particularly on carnations. Large social affairs have been the principal means of keeping the stock moving. On the whole, the wholesalers have not had a great deal to complain of.

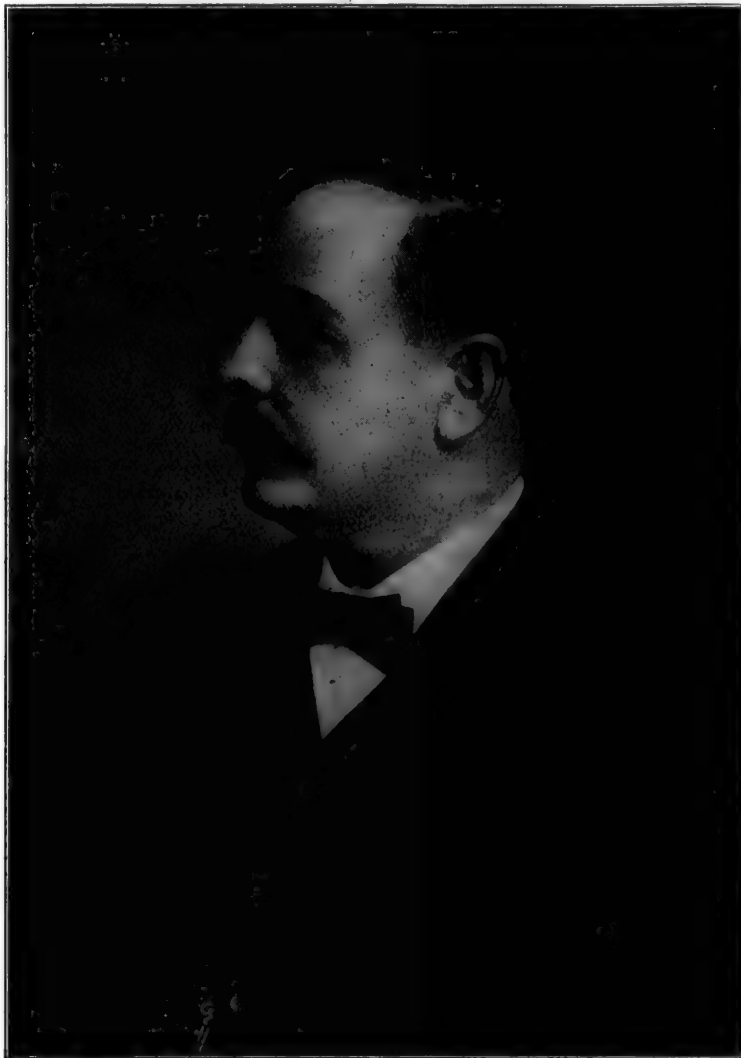

Club Meeting.

Tuesday night, January 7, was club night. The meeting was held in parlors A and B of the Fort Pitt hotel. It was rose night and the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. contributed the only exhibit; it consisted of Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond and Mrs. Ward.

There was a good attendance, as the nomination of officers was in order. The following are the nominees: President, Neil McCallum; vice-president, E. C. Reineman; secretary, H. P. Joslin; treasurer, T. P. Langhans; executive committee, Gust. Frishkorn and P. S. Randolph.

Following the nomination of officers, it was discovered that one of the members, John J. Costoff, gardener for Senator Wm. Flinn, is a Bulgarian. A few minutes' conversation with him showed that his heart was full of patriotism and that he had an intelligent knowledge of his people, and he was prevailed on to express his sentiments to us, which he did in an hour of in-

"WHO'S WHO—AND WHY"

PETER REINBERG.

THE election of Peter Reinberg as president of the Board of Education in the city of Chicago, which took place January 8, is a tribute to the florist's well-known integrity and well-demonstrated administrative ability, not to mention his political and personal popularity. Some idea of the responsibility which rests upon Mr. Reinberg's shoulders will be gained from the statement that in the last year the current expenses of the Chicago school board were $13,488,107. There are on the payroll 6,871 teachers and 1,000 other employees. The enrollment of the schools at the time of the last annual report was 307,281. The value of the school property used by the board is $48,834,650, in addition to which the board has other investments amounting to $12,770,952, making Mr. Reinberg responsible for the administration of a property aggregating a value of $61,605,602 and affecting the life of every citizen of his community. There is no salary attached to the office—it is purely a service to the public.

tensely interesting narrative of the trials and tribulations of one of the bravest nations on earth. He began by giving a description of his country, with its acres of roses, the petals of which are gathered and distilled to produce the attar of roses, so much sought for throughout the world. Then he gave a history of his people from the time of Constantine down to the present, calling attention to the education of the children in patriotism, through song and poetry. He not only entertained his audience, but gave one of the most instructive talks ever heard in the club.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams was the worst flood sufferer, as the water filled her cellar and covered her front sidewalk on Penn avenue.

Chas. Koenig is consigning to the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. some fine yellow trumpet narcissi and tulips, which are getting better every day.

The McCallum Co. was compelled to move everything out of the basement on account of the flood, but was not inconvenienced otherwise.

M. Blaha, of Aspinwall, Pa., is completing a new propagating house.

Frank Faulk, who has been ill for some time, is convalescing and hopes to be back at business before long.

Hoo-Hoo.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade has kept up remarkably well since the holidays. There has been a great deal of funeral work and it has used up about everything at nearly all times. Roses have been good of late, but the cloudy weather cut down the cuts a great deal; at times there were not nearly enough to go around. Beauties have been in fair demand, but prices are rather high. Carnations have been exceptionally good, but, like the roses, they have been slow in opening during the cloudy weather. Sweet peas are generally good sellers, and, if not sold for corsage work, they are easily worked up in funeral designs. They are commencing to be quite plentiful and will be much more so with a little bright weather. Valley has been rather scarce, with demand rather light. Weddings have not been numerous since the holidays and they always tell on the demand for valley, but quite a few are using sweet peas in preference.

Pot plants are moving quite well, including azaleas, cyclamens, begonias, primroses, ferns, etc. There has been quite a demand for dish ferns since the holidays.

Various Notes.

The inauguration of Governor Cox is the main topic for this week. Society was out in full force January 13. The inaugural ball was held in Memorial hall, which was tastefully decorated for the occasion. It made a fine run on corsage flowers.

Sherman Stephens reports heavy business and finds it hard to get enough stock.

The Munk Floral Co. is making quite a display of baskets, blooming plants, etc., and reports business good.

Graff Bros., the Franklin Park Floral Co., the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., Livingston Seed Co. and Underwood Bros. all say business is good.

G. H. Woodrow is still bedfast, but is improving slowly.

James McKellar has been laid up several days with a bad case of grip.

A SUBSTITUTE FOR PLUMOSUS.

Enclosed you will find a piece of an asparagus plant, which I should like you to name for me. I have several fine specimens of this plant, which I raised from seed, and I have asked the opinion of several florists who have seen it, but they were unable to give me a name for it, as it was new to them.

C. A. R.

Asparagus of this type is not easy to identify by means of a small specimen, but the plant in question seems to be Asparagus Comorensis, a variety that is preferred by some growers instead of A. plumosus nanus.

W. H. T.

THE Review is of daily use in my business, for it contains valuable information on every subject connected with the trade.

OBITUARY.

George F. Kidd.

George F. Kidd, who for five years has held the position of appraiser of seeds, bulbs and plants in the New York customs house, died suddenly in a train on the Ninth avenue elevated railroad Friday morning, January 10, while on his way to his office. His son, George Kidd, of Orange, N. J., was the only member of his family at home at the time, Mrs. Kidd and daughters being in California.

George F. Kidd was born in Scotland sixty-three years ago. He received the thorough training given the assistants of the Scottish seedsmen and, coming to this country, found his first connection with J. K. Bliss. Later he was with J. M. Thorburn & Co., Wm. Elliott & Sons, the Cox Seed Co., the Hinode Co. and Timothy Hopkins, of San Francisco. His last employment before entering the government service was with Elliott & Sons. There had been much friction between the customs house and the importing members of the trade prior to Mr. Kidd's appointment, but his acquaintance with the trade made it possible for him to reestablish friendly working conditions. His sudden death will be widely regretted.

The funeral services were held Sunday morning, January 12, and were largely attended by members of the trade in New York. Burial was in Fairmount cemetery, Newark, N. J.

Samuel Reisner.

Samuel Reisner, of the firm of Reisner & Shafer, retail florists at 1247 Lexington avenue, New York city, died suddenly last week in Bermuda, having been stricken with apoplexy on the day following his arrival there for a winter vacation trip. Mr. Reisner was not married and about 50 years of age. He was a gentleman of excellent character and first-class business reputation. His partner, Mr. Shafer, and Mrs. Shafer, left at once for Bermuda to bring the body home.

Jonas F. Weber.

Jonas F. Weber, of Kirkwood, Mo., a brother of Henry J. Weber, of Nursery, Mo., and John G. Weber, of Clayton, Mo., fell dead of heart disease January 3, at the home of his brother, Henry J. Weber, at Nursery, Mo., where he was visiting. He was 55 years of age. During the greater part of his life he was a nurseryman and farmer, but he had spent the last five years conducting a grocery store in Kirkwood, from which he retired a few months ago. He was a native of St. Louis county and enjoyed a wide acquaintance. He is survived by his widow and three sons, Julius, Frederick and Edward Weber.

William S. Fisher

William S. Fisher, for many years connected with the trade in Washington, D. C., passed away last week. Mr. Fisher was 54 years of age, a native of Virginia. At the age of 15 years he took an apprenticeship under the late John E. Freeman. Six years later he went into business for himself on Pennsylvania avenue and later on Fifteenth street, N. W. He retained the last place for about two years, when he sold out and entered the employ of J. H. Small & Sons. Here he remained for about twelve years. For several years he has been in the employ of the Washington Florists' Co. and had charge of its Fourteenth street branch until it was discontinued. Of late years he has only worked during the winter months, spending a greater part of the summer in Atlantic City and other shore resorts. Two sisters survive him.

William J. Young.

William J. Young, Sr., formerly in business at Germantown, Pa., a brief note on whose death, January 3, appeared in last week's obituary column, was born at Bushmills, Ireland, seventy-seven years ago. He came to this country when a lad of 19, settling first in Germantown. After a short time he was seized with the gold fever and removed to California, where he remained until the commencement of the Civil war, and then returned to Germantown. Soon after he entered the employment of Peter Wright, head of the great shipping firm, and took care of his country place. Later he took charge of the country place of Stephen Morris, on School Lane. Mr. Young's knowledge of gardening and floriculture was entirely gained from practical experience. He learned much from his friend Peter McKenzie, the famous North Broad street florist. Andrew Dryburgh, Hugh Graham, David Joyce and other old-time celebrities were his friends. Mr. Young was enterprising, importing orchids and other rare plants for Mr. Morris.

In 1872 Mr. Young purchased a large property at the corner of School and Pulaski streets, Germantown, not far from Mr. Morris' place. Here he built greenhouses and a residence. He entrusted his newly acquired property to his brother, but later resigned his position with Mr. Morris, to embark in business for himself. At first he forced nectarines, peaches and grapes on his new place, which was considered almost out in the wilds, although now it is in the thickly built suburbs of the city. As houses were built in the neighborhood and people moved into them, the business changed and bedding plants became an important feature. Then, as the demand for cut flowers and for blooming plants and foliage plants came, all were added. A good business in high-grade stock was done in the store. The greenhouses produced part of the stock; the rest was purchased in the wholesale market. Part of the property was sold for building sites, but that on which the greenhouses and store stood remains intact.

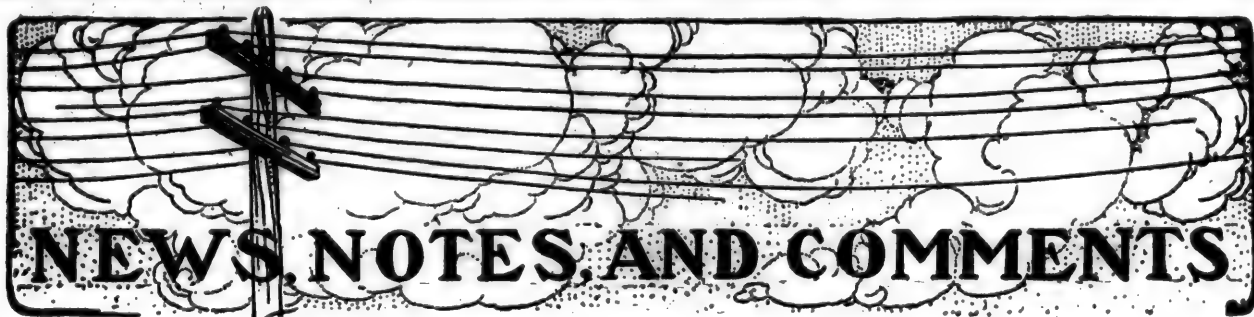

In 1901 Mr. Young retired from business, to live on his lately purchased farm of thirty-one acres, near Pottsville, Pa. Since that time the business has been conducted by his son, William J. Young, Jr., who has kept up a high standard in the stock sent out from this place.

The funeral services were held at the residence of the son, William J. Young, Jr., January 6. Mr. Young is survived by a widow, four daughters and one son.

Angelo Tassi.

Angelo Tassi, 81 years old, a retired florist and fruit merchant, of 909 Boulevard, Astoria, Long Island City, N. Y., died at his home, January 6, from general debility. He is survived by two sons and two daughters.

NEWS, NOTES, AND COMMENTS

Berlin, Mass.—Henry D. Pratt has leased the greenhouses of Samuel Wheeler and will continue the business.

Holyoke, Mass.—Amelia S. Fraleigh says she sold everything in stock for Christmas, and thinks every florist in the city had a good trade.

Guthrie, Okla.—John Furrow was a member of the committee of three appointed by the Guthrie Chamber of Commerce to nominate the directors of the organization for the coming year.

Warsaw, O.—Marion Shepard, who owns and conducts the only greenhouses in this town, has just added another house, to be used for vegetables. The present year has been a favorable one and business is steadily increasing.

Concordia, Kan.—C. J. Lampe, proprietor of the Concordia Greenhouses, reports that his holiday trade surpassed anything in his former experience. "Carnation buds just opening had to go," he says, "and anything that looked like a flower was picked up."

Omaha, Neb.—Hess & Swoboda report that the only fly in the ointment is such occurrences as a department store selling carnations at 15 cents per dozen, which happened January 4. It gives the public the impression that the prices of the real florists are out of line.

Malta, O.—W. C. Scovell estimates that his business in 1912 was fifty-three per cent greater than in 1911 and twenty-two per cent greater than in his previous most successful year. His holiday trade was heavy. His funeral work is steadily increasing in quantity and extending over more territory.

Battle Creek, Mich.—Early in the spring the Battle Creek Sanitarium will begin the erection of four greenhouses, each 34x125, as an addition to the present range. The intention is, it is said, to grow all of the vegetables needed in the dining room of the institution, instead of having a considerable part of them shipped in from the south, as has heretofore been done.

Danvers, Mass.—Percy S. Hooper is a successful grower of asparagus, berries and celery who three years ago branched out into cut flowers for the summer market, growing asters and sweet peas. Last season he had splendid results with Crego asters, some of his blooms measuring seven inches in diameter, and stems eighteen to twenty inches long were the rule. From Ralph Huntington, Painesville, O., he secured seed of a variety he calls Non-lateral White, which he says gave him perfect blooms, scarcely any showing yellow centers, and stems twenty-six to thirty inches long.

Wayland, O.—A. H. Austin Co. shipped a carload of gladiolus bulbs January 13.

Girard, Kan.—A. M. Sourdry has built one of the largest greenhouses in the state for lettuce and parsley. It is 42x400 and has just been planted with 28,000 lettuce plants.

South Paris, Me.—E. P. Crockett has built an addition to his greenhouses and now has an up-to-date establishment of the most durable construction, including cement benches.

Shillington, Pa.—The greenhouses of H. M. Shilling, on Philadelphia avenue, were considerably damaged recently by a fire which originated from a smoke flue that runs through a part of the houses. The plants were badly damaged.

Muncie, Ind.—The greenhouses formerly conducted under the name of Mrs. Geo. F. Miller are now known as Miller's Greenhouses, with Mrs. Miller, now Mrs. A. P. Andrew, as proprietor. Mrs. Miller became Mrs. Andrew nearly a year ago.

Williamson, W. Va.—A. T. Vaughan, proprietor of the Fairview Greenhouses and Truck Farm, has recently built a large addition to his greenhouses, besides installing a return steam trap and making other important improvements. When he came here from Russell, Ky., four years ago, he started business with a small truck farm in the west end of town, but since then he has acquired more land and gradually constructed a first-class establishment. His houses are stocked with lettuce, carnations, ferns and a good assortment of pot and bedding plants.

Princeton, Ill.—Henry Dumke, a florist of this town, has leased some property on Union street, Marseilles, Ill., and is erecting a greenhouse there.

Battle Creek, Mich.—B. W. Kribs built a greenhouse last summer at 236 Coldwater street and is growing carnations for the local market. The house is 34x125 and of Foley construction.

Dayton, O.—Mrs. B. Haschke, who does business as the College Park Greenhouses, says that 1912 was the most successful year she has yet had. She says Christmas trade was large, both in cut flowers and plants, but that it looks to her as though the plants would in future have the lead over the cut stock.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y.—Since the death of the senior T. J. Totten, which occurred February 6, 1912, the business has been continued by members of the family, including Thos. J. Totten, Jr. Recently the family formed a corporation and the firm name is now T. J. Totten, Inc. The establishment is located at the corner of Lake and Nelson avenues.

Leominster, Mass.—The greenhouses on Fairview street, North Leominster, owned by Mrs. S. J. Proctor and recently operated by C. W. Newell, were blown down by a furious gale on the night of January 3. The houses, which covered a space 50x200 feet, were almost entirely destroyed. The storm also broke a great quantity of glass in George M. Kendall's greenhouses, on North Main street.

Cleveland, O.—In order to take care of its expanding business, the Standard Pump & Engine Co. has found it necessary to increase its capitalization from $25,000 to $100,000 and has opened a retail sales department at 1406 West Third street, in the center of the up-town section, where a complete display of water supply systems operating by gas and gasoline engines and electric motors, and also hand water systems as well as a complete line of gas engines and pumps is made.

Portsmouth, Va.—The new year looks good to W. P. Cotton, who does business as the W. P. Cotton Floral Co., and he is making preparations on a larger scale than ever before. He has about 30,000 bulbs planted under glass and about 200,000 bulbs planted in the open, having always found ready sale for all that could be grown. He expects to grow 100,000 asters during the summer. Last autumn he had the largest crop of chrysanthemums ever grown in this section of the country and, while prices were reasonable, he did well with them. One house has been planted to sweet peas, with nine pounds of seed sowed outside. While the entire year of 1912 was good, the Christmas trade brought it to a specially successful finish.

THE amended regulations for the carrying out of the Plant Quarantine Act will be found on page 72 of this issue.

WHAT the trade needs is more young men who can take a task and put it through to conclusion—finish what they undertake.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

EVERY few days The Review receives photographs with no inscription or other mark by which they can be identified. Once or twice distressing results have followed. Please mark all photos.

THE United States Civil Service Commission will hold an examination February 5 to select eligibles for appointment to fill three vacancies as assistant horticulturist in the Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture, at salaries ranging from $1,500 to $1,800.

THE habit of paying bills in full each month is about the most valuable habit a florist can acquire. It may not be itemized on the bill, but usually the slow-pay customer is charged enough to cover interest on the overdue account, with something more as insurance against the possible loss.

WATCH the classified plant ads increase. Ordinarily the issue of Christmas week is the lightest of the year, in space occupied by these busy little liners. Now comes the season of steady increase. This spring the classified ads will break records, for they have proved their worth to all who have small lots of surplus stock to be turned into cash.

THE American Gladiolus Society, L. M. Gage, secretary, South Natick, Mass., has just issued Bulletin No. 6, containing a report of the Chicago meeting, officers' reports, several interesting articles and a list of the members with a key to their professional or amateur standing.

ALBERT POCHOLON, secretary of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery, says that "we florists are not getting as yet ten per cent of the telegraph, cable or mail order business which we will have in a few years, and no one is to blame but ourselves. Do we try to educate the public to this, or do we not? I tell you right now it is up to us florists to let our customers know what we can do and keep it in front of their eyes. The more retail florists take up this proposition, the more we all gain by it."

CUTTING PRICES.

A SOLILOQUY.

(With apologies to Hamlet.)

To cut or not to cut. That is the question:
Whether it is not better in the end
To let the chap who knows not the worth
Have the business at cutthroat prices, or
To take up arms against his competition,
And by opposing cut for cut, end it.
To cut—and by cutting put the other cutter
Out of business—'tis a consummation Devoutly to be wished. To cut—to slash, Perchance myself get it in the neck—
Aye, there's the rub; for when one starts to meet
The other fellow's prices, 'tis like as not He's up against it good and hard.
To cut and to slash is not to end the confusion
And the many evils the trade is pestered with:
Nay, nay, Pauline; 'tis but the forerunner
Of debt and mortgage such a course portends.
'Tis well to get the prices the goods are worth,
And not to be bluffed into selling them for what
So-and-so will sell his goods for.
Price-cutting doth appear unseemly,
And fit only for the man who knows not
What his goods are worth, and who, ere long,
By stress of making vain comparison
'Twixt bank account and liabilities,
Will make his exit from the business.
—Anon. in the H. T. J.

THEY CERTAINLY DO.

While double page spreads are becoming popular with those who want to attract the eyes of all the trade, still there is no advertisement so small that it does not get readers in The Review. The following letter followed a few insertions of a 3-line ad in the For Sale column:

Please discontinue our For Sale ad; we have sold practically all the good pipe we have on hand at this time. Your ads certainly bring results.—Baur Gas Co., Eaton, Ind., January 10, 1913.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The general report is that business was excellent in the first week of January, but that it let down in the second week. There have been days of wintry weather that had the usual effect on transient trade in the retail stores, but out-of-town shipping also has been, if not light, at least spasmodic. It was only because receipts of stock were not heavy that an accumulation has been prevented.

The principal changes in the market have been a strengthening in roses and a weakening in other lines, notably carnations, violets and orchids. Some of the rose growers are completely off crop and few are cutting at all heavily. Short roses are distinctly scarce, for the principal demand is for funeral work. There are enough of the special fancy grades, but most of the houses only are able to fill the orders for medium lengths because the orders run light. The result has been a stiffening in rose values all along the line, but

PLENTY OF FIRST-CLASS STOCK OF ALL KINDS

HERE is nothing at all we cannot supply in any quantity desired, except, perhaps, short roses, and the quality is at least equal to the best to be had on this market.

BEAUTIES

There are two features of our Beauty supply that make the trade marvel—the quality and the steadiness of the cut. All growers get good Beauties once in a while, but ours always are fine and WE ALWAYS HAVE THEM. If you have a trade that calls for Beauties we can be of service to you. The present crop is especially large and fine.

FANCY ROSES

There are three reasons why the thinking buyers are ordering their Roses of us this season:—1st, there is no finer lot of stock; 2d, our growers doubled their glass last summer, giving us quantity, and, 3d, we have a full line. Specially strong just now on the extra long, extra fancy grades.

CARNATIONS

We ask all those not thoroughly satisfied with their present source of supply to try us on Carnations—might try us anyway, for we are known as having the largest supply of strictly high-grade Carnations on this market. The cuts this week are the largest and best of the season to date.

ORCHIDS

We have a big crop of fancy Trianae this week—as fine Cattleyas as have come on this market this season. Try these for your corsage table and fine funeral work; you will find they are a success with all who know choice flowers.

VIOLETS

We not only handle the cream of the crops, but we have, we believe, the largest and steadiest supply of fine Violets that is to be found anywhere in the west. We are anxious for a trial order, as it will mean regular business.

VALLEY! VALLEY!!

Here's where you can get the best grade of Valley any time you want it—we always can ship on short notice. But why be without it yourself? Let us send you a regular supply.

the marked shortage that came about this date last year is not yet in evidence. While some growers are reporting light crops of Beauties, others are cutting heavily. All Beauties and roses appear to be of satisfactory quality and some are notably good.

The increasing supply of carnations coupled with a slowing up in business resulted in a drop in prices last week, but growers are hopeful that the shortening in roses will result in restoring carnations to the satisfactory price levels of the last few weeks. The weather may have checked carnation production to a slight degree, but the crops in this department undeniably are on. If there is any difficulty in getting roses, all demands for carnations can be met. There is a large percentage of splits that are difficult to dispose of.

The violet situation is peculiar. It appears to be possible to sell each day's receipts, but there is difficulty in obtaining satisfactory prices. Cattleyas are coming in heavily, and extremely fine Trianae are to be had at moderate rates. It puts the balance of the Percivaliana crop in a position where only the lowest prices can be realized. Sweet peas are in demand. This is one item on which there is no oversupply, for the crops seem to be coming forward less rapidly than last year. Valley, the other corsage flower, is in large supply, but there are several qualities.

Stevia is passing, and some of the crops of bouvardia are gone, but their place is taken by increased receipts of bulbous flowers. There are more Paper Whites and Romans than at any time heretofore this season and prices realized seem to leave little profit for the growers. Tulips are coming in stronger, but are not yet readily salable, as the quality is not good. Jonquils are more abundant and the good ones sell readily, as these are the only really yellow flowers now in market. Freesia is arriving in quantity; Purity sells well. There is some fancy mignonette, but this flower no longer is grown in quantity. Easter lilies are equal to all demands, but comparatively few callas are seen.

Green goods are selling moderately well. The magnolia leaves have hurt the sale of galax, while Mexican ivy is cutting into the sales of adiantum and forcing down the price.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its monthly meeting January 9, when P. J. Foley handed over the reins to President Guy French. The other officers installed were:

Vice-president—A. Henderson.
Secretary—Wilder Deamud.
Treasurer—E. F. Winterson.
Trustee—H. N. Bruns.

President French asked for further time on some of his standing committees, but named those already decided on, as follows:

Transportation—J. B. Deamud, Fred Lautenschlager, C. W. Johnson.

Reception—Geo. Asmus, P. J. Foley, T. E. Waters, Richard Salm, E. F. Winterson, W. S. McGee.

There was an animated discussion on publicity, during which W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, made a characteristic speech, advising the trade to "Get to it, gentlemen." The matter was referred to the good of the club committee with a request for an early report.

J. K. M. L. Farquhar, president of the S. A. F., accepted the club's invitation to lecture before it March 6. A committee was appointed to visit W. J. Smyth, who has been confined to a hospital for many weeks, and another was named to draft resolutions on the death of John T. Temple, of Davenport. The revised by-laws, including an up-to-date list of members, was ordered printed and distributed. Applications for membership were received from Harry Balsley, of Detroit, and Benj. Kappel, a member of the Schiller staff.

Frank Miller and a neighboring vegetable grower from Columbus, O., were present under the escort of P. J. Foley and spoke a few words.

Various Nctes.

It develops that a year ago Frank Williams made a lease on a store 40x50 at 102 South Wabash avenue, in the building now nearing completion at the southwest corner of Wabash and Monroe street. Muir has a lease on the Monroe street side of the same building. It is on the corner the Mangel and Gallagher stores have occupied for many years. Mr. Williams is in a sanitarium at Kenilworth, so ill that reports of his death have been current, although it is stated that he is slightly improved this week. Mrs. Williams, who conducts the Alpha Floral Co., says the new store will be opened about February 1, under the name of the Williams Floral Co., with Fred Strail in charge. The arrangement of the space is unusual and a store decidedly out of the ordinary is promised.

A. C. Kohlbrand is suffering with rheumatism that cripples his right hand.

A. T. Pyfer says the orders for carnation cuttings have taken a big jump since January 1.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co., Batavia, is busy propagating Beauties.

E. E. Pieser and Mrs. Pieser both are on the sick list.

T. E. Waters, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., reports that the parcel post is proving useful in the supply department, many small packages going that way cheaper than by express. The company has just completed a distribution of artistic calendars.

E. C. Amling's bank at Oak Park will move into a fine new building about February 1. The bank stock, originally issued at $125 per share, now is held at $140. Mr. Amling recently moved into a new residence in Oak Park, next door to the one he has occupied for many years.

It is reported in the market that Henry Wittbold has sublet a portion of his space at Wabash and Randolph to someone starting as a wholesale florist, but it has not been possible to confirm the story. A wholesaler already occupies part of the same floor.

Bernard J. Schmierer, of the North Shore Floral Co., 6566 Sheridan road, has taken an option on property near the Rogers Park station, where he plans to build a store, greenhouses and flats in case other building operations in the neighborhood do not turn out to his disadvantage.

N. J. Wietor and Mrs. Wietor went to Ocean Springs, Miss., January 13, to join some friends in a two weeks' holiday at the gulf resort.

The Cook County Florists' Association will hold its monthly meeting tonight, January 16, at The Tavern. Nomination of officers is the special order of business.

Winterson's Seed Store is daily expecting the arrival of a refrigerator carload of canna roots from the east.

A. Miller, of Henderson & Co., spent Sunday, January 12, at Columbus, O.

The Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Association will hold its annual exhibition of bulbs in the store of A. L. Randall Co., February 7 and 8.

C. W. McKellar says his advices from the east are that Cattleya Triang is in full crop.

Adam Zender was at Milwaukee January 14 to attend a meeting of the Holton & Hunkel Co., at which building plans were discussed.

Henry Wittbold's big job during the last week was a wedding decoration at Evanston in which American Beauties were used exclusively. A decorative partition has been erected between the floor space used by Wittbold and his neighbor.

Co., says that there are so many Paper Whites on the market this year that the returns hardly show the profit for growers the other years have brought.

Charles Erne, of Erne & Klingel, does not believe that violets are as popular with Chicago retail buyers as formerly and points out that the corsages worn now usually are either orchids and valley or sweet peas.

John Kruchten finds some trouble in supplying all those who call for gardenias and has established a list of their needs and will present the same to the local growers in hopes of getting an increase in the supply.

The after effects of the S. A. F. convention are still lingering around. The Chicago Flower Growers' Association has a bill for chairs that is being contested in the local courts. The association rented a number of chairs for one week and now the Chicago Safe & Merchandise Co. is making an effort to collect a bill for three months' use of the seats, which were left on the second floor.

Kyle & Foerster report that violets are holding up well in quality, but hardly seem to be meeting with so heavy a demand as usual. In almost everything else Mr. Kyle says there is a much brisker market than last year at this date.

C. L. Washburn was struck by an electric automobile January 12, but fortunately it did not turn out seriously and aside from a few black and blue spots he is none the worse for the experience. The car was driven by a girl 11 years old, who failed to see Mr. Washburn, who had taken to the middle of the street on account of the icy sidewalks. Hit directly in the middle of the back, the wholesaler was knocked sideways about eight or ten feet, but as he landed in soft snow there were no bones broken.

Allen Gerling, 3228 Lincoln avenue, has removed to Spokane, Wash.

Growers along the St. Paul are up in arms because the switching charge on their coal has been advanced from $4 to $6 per car. The coal dealers have appealed to the Illinois Railroad and Warehouse Commission.

It is reported that John T. Muir will not at once open a downtown store near the corner of Wabash avenue and Monroe street, where he has a lease on a desirable room. The store will be sublet for a time.

The Rising Eastern Market.

There is more business going than usual for the second week in January, with so many more flowers than are generally produced at this time that prices are low. It seems as though every carnation grower who supplies this market had his plants in full crop from two to three weeks after the holidays. Prices have fallen so low that they are scarcely one-third what they were then; perhaps one-quarter would be nearer the mark. It is difficult to find an outlet for the crop at market prices. This is partly due to the warm weather that prevailed during the first half of the week ending January 15, weather so warm that the buyers distrusted the keeping qualities of the divine flower. Golden Spur has joined Trumpet Major, affording splendid daffodils at moderate prices. Freesia, too, has become a staple flower, while sweet peas of all grades and colors are more plentiful. Violets are in heavy supply and there are more gardenias than the market can easily absorb. Cattleyas are in excellent supply. Valley is fairly abundant. Roses, though not so plentiful as a week ago, are sufficient for the demand, except the novelties, which are scarce. Good white roses sell slowly, but the short grades are in request. The out-of-town orders add strength to the market.

The January Meeting.

A thick fog, so dense that the lights on the motors and cabs on Broad street gleamed like fireflies through a midsummer haze, wrapped the city closely. It drifted into the clubroom, giving it an odd appearance, suggestive of tobacco smoke after an all-evening session. The chairs were filled by the club's best array of talent, men who came to listen and learn, rather than to be amused. Routine business over, President Thilow introduced the speaker of the evening, Charles Henry Fox, in a few well chosen words. Mr. Fox opened with an apt story, then told his hearers that wholesalers should never retail and that all should cooperate to prevent the extremely high prices often caused by ignorance of conditions and so, as well as by timely suggestions, increase the need of flowers. Wallace R. Pierson followed with a good speech; everyone agrees that Mr. Pierson is always well worth hearing. Walter P. Stokes was next. He said that, while we are in business for money, business is part of our lives and should be made pleasant by mingling with each other. He believes in moderate prices because the American people dislike being pulled when they want anything. Adolph Farenwald said that it is all very well to condemn high holiday prices, but asked what the poor grower is to do without fair returns for his hard summer's work under glass? Mr. Fox was on his feet in an instant to assert that the prices last Christmas were most reasonable; no fault to find with them. It was the anticipated prices that did harm; for instance, $2 per hundred being asked for violets, although none sold at that figure. Charles H. Grakelow denounced wholesalers who retail in competition with their customers and gave instances. Edward Reid said that the retailers should carry more stock whenever possible, because people want to see what they buy. He gave an instance of an offer that he had made of open American Beauties below the market price to a number of retailers; all declined. A New Yorker, who had first tried several retailers, came to him for Beauties for the funeral of a relative who loved that flower best. Mr. Reid said he did not feel justified in refusing that $50 for his grower, where refusal meant certain loss. Much more was said, but suffice it to add that Mark Patton Mills assured his hearers with energy that his prices were reasonable and that the retailers would generally find a bargain at a grower's place; if not just what they wanted, then something else.

ter out of third class and into the parcel post, subject, of course, to the zone system. The club secretary was instructed to file a protest against this change with the proper parties at Washington.

Rama C. Campbell, grower for the Leedle Floral Co., was elected to membership in the club. In response to the action of the club at its last meeting, Fred M. Wallace favored the members with a most interesting and practical talk on greenhouse insurance. It was shown that practically the same basic rate has been in effect for several decades, without regard to improvements in greenhouse construction. Numerous suggestions were made as to betterments and preventive measures, which would have the effect of earning certain reductions in existing rates. The advantages of the automatic sprinkler system as being applicable to greenhouses were quite forcibly explained as a means of materially decreasing rates and preventing interruptions of business. A general discussion followed and questions were freely asked by members and quite satisfactorily answered by Mr. Wallace. Boiler insurance and inspection were also considered.

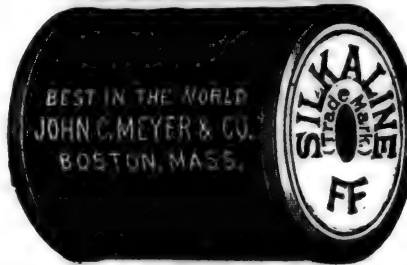

At the conclusion of the session, refreshments were served by the hostess

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Generally speaking, business has been only mediocre during the last week, but this has not been so apparent as would otherwise have been the case, because of the large quantities of flowers used on Monday and Tuesday, when the inaugurations of the six municipalities and the state were held. The floral displays were larger than usual and it is estimated that upward of 200 large pieces were sent. Funeral work was also fairly active.

Various Notes.

FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertisers

George Stollery, of Stollery Bros., is being asked to run for the nomination for alderman in the Twenty-fifth ward. It is believed by his friends that he would be sure to be elected. Mr. Stollery has lived in this ward for twenty-five years, and is well known and liked.

John Farmer, store man for Stollery Bros., reports a good Christmas and New Year's trade. He is justly proud of his window decorations, which last week consisted of primroses in pots, baskets and birch bark hamper.

Word from W. J. Smyth is to the effect that he is progressing as well as could be expected, but that it will be some time before he is able to leave the hospital.

Peter Reinberg has received many congratulations this week on his election to the presidency of the school board.

John Zech, of Zech & Mann, says there is no kick on the way business has been since Christmas and he feels that the year has at least made a good start.

Carl R. Carlson, 71 years old, a city park gardener, living at 7140 Ingle-side avenue, died at his home January 13. He had been ill for several weeks.

Speaking of the retail business, C. A. Samuelson says that trade has been so rushing since the middle of December that he was unable to get down to the market until January 14.

Sidney Buchbinder, manager of the sales department for Buchbinder Bros., has a force busy sending out the firm's new florists' refrigerator catalogue. He asserts that the demands for figures on new ice-boxes since the holidays indicates that the Christmas trade was a record-breaking one the country over. "Everyone seems to be in the buying habit."

January 14 was the date for the annual meeting of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, but there was no quorum. Secretary Haight was out of town.

Visitors: W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, in connection with the affairs of the United Fertilizer Co.; Jas. Cole and his grower, Peoria, Ill.; Henry Kusik, A. Elberfeld and Mrs. Elberfeld, Kansas City; Frank Miller and a vegetable growing neighbor, Columbus, O.

GRENWICH, CONN.

The regular monthly meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held in Doran's hall, January 10, with President Robert Williamson in the chair. Judging by the number of members present and the excellent financial standing of the society, we are justified in looking forward to a prosperous year.

A noticeable feature of the meeting was the large number of splendid exhibits, which received the opinion of the judges as follows:

Geo. E. Baldwin Co., special mention for a well grown plant of white Cattleya Triane and a cultural certificate for a well grown collection of Cattleya Triane of good types.

Robert Williamson, cultural certificate for the now seldom seen Plumbago coccinea, honorable mention for specimen Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and vote of thanks for plants of Primula malacoides.

James Atchison, honorable mention for well grown plants of Primula malacoides.

James Stuart, honorable mention for well flowered spikes of Calanthe Veitchii and Euphorbia jacquiniiflora.

P. W. Popp, highly commended for a yellow sport of Carnation Mrs. C. W. Ward, which the society would like to see more of in the future.

Robert Allen, vote of thanks for two vases of Carnation William Smith and a vote of thanks for Primula malacoides.

What More Should You Expect?

The following is from a communication received from Messrs. Valentin Burgevin's Sons, Kingston, N. Y., January 8, 1913:—

"We wish to say that we find the VERMINE an excellent thing. We used it on a bench planted with Smilax to kill root lice, or maggots, which ate the roots, and after two applications our smilax is taking on new life and has started off to grow."

The following from Messrs. Newman & Legg, of Manasquan, N. J., January 4, 1913:—

"This fall we had occasion to try your FUNGINE on a large house of Sweet Peas. They were so badly affected with mildew that we were going to throw them out—meaning a total loss of the crop."

"We had tried sulphur and all the usual mildew remedies without being able to control it. A caller asked us if we had tried FUNGINE, saying that he had heard that it was good for mildew. We gave them one good syringing with FUNGINE, with the result that in forty-eight hours there was not a particle of live mildew in the house."

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The Nassau County Horticultural Society held its regular monthly meeting at Pembroke hall Wednesday, January 8, with President Brown in the chair. It was decided to accept Elmer D. Smith's offer of a prize of $10 for six blooms of Chrysanthemum Yonkers at the next fall show. The dinner committee reported having made satisfactory arrangements with the Oriental hotel for January 23. A special prize offered by John Canning for eighteen carnations in three varieties brought out a large display of fine flowers. After much deliberation the judges awarded first prize to Oscar Bjorkrein, who put up fine flowers of Enchantress, White Perfection and May Day. Alex. MacKenzie was second, with Mrs. C. W. Wood, Enchantress and White Enchantress. The prizes for tomatoes, violets and freesias were awarded to J. McCarthy, R. Marshall and J. MacDonald. Other awards were as follows: For seedling Carnation Red Spring, certificate of culture to V. Cleres; for Calycanthus praecox, honorable mention to John Johnston; for carnations, honorable mention to R. Marshall. The judges were Messrs. Holloway, Gaut and Adler. John Canning, of Ardsley, N. Y., and W. D. Robertson, of Roslyn, L. I., were elected to active membership. Prizes are offered for three cauliflower, twenty-five sprays of sweet peas and six gardenias at the February meeting.

Vegetable Forcing.

STERILIZING LETTUCE SOIL.

Can you tell me the best way to sterilize soil for a lettuce house, 16x100, containing three benches? I have no steam heat, but use hot water. Could the sterilizing be done by using steam hose, with a nozzle and hose from a portable engine? H. S.

The portable traction engine or boiler would be the best for your purpose, using a few lengths of pipe and a piece of hose to connect the boiler with the sterilizing device. Tile could be laid in the beds and connected across the ends to a box header, with as many holes as there are runs of tile. Cover all well and lay boards or canvas over the soil to hold the heat in the beds. Use three or four runs of tile to a bench and leave the steam on about an hour.

H. G.

A START IN CUCUMBERS.

I am thinking of starting a crop of cucumbers for forcing next month. Will you please tell me which varieties of cucumbers sell best on South Water street, Chicago? Please give me the names, also, of one or two reliable commission houses on South Water street, Chicago. C. P.

The White Spine cucumbers of the long, green, forcing type sell best. There is little demand for the European types. Most seedsmen have special strains for forcing inside, which are selected stock. The Davis Perfect variety is good. Rawson's hothouse strain is used a great deal all over the country. Geo. Midden-dorf Co. and Cohen & Co. are good, reliable Chicago commission firms.

BOWLING

Secretaries of bowling clubs may have their scores published in this column by mailing them to The Review to arrive not later than Tuesday each week.

AT CHICAGO.

The Cook County Florists' Association bowling schedule was resumed January 8, when the squads got into action for the first time since the middle of December. Some good competition developed and in the match between the Carnations and Orchids all three games were won after the 800-mark was reached, the Orchids winning the second game by a total of 890 pins, which was the best team score for the evening. The scores were:

Eight Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

The weather continues to be extraordinarily mild for January, with much dark, rainy weather. Such conditions are not the best for the florists' business, but flowers continue to clean up remarkably well. The hot weather is not liked by the rose growers. Flowers arriving are lacking in substance and consequently in keeping qualities. Mme. Russell and Beauty share the leading position, the first named being in particular demand for high class functions. For all short-stemmed roses the demand is strong and these have advanced in price, but the better grade flowers are not moving so well, nor are prices as they should be. The leading call now is for funeral work, and the short-stemmed flowers are used in this way.

Carnations are still in undersupply and prices are holding up well. The demand for whites has improved, but colored varieties also move well. Violets hold about the same as a week ago. Sweet peas are selling better and valley has been meeting with an excellent sale. Dutch bulbous stock is steadily increasing in quantity, but no glut is in sight. In addition to tulips and narcissi, quite a few hyacinths are also coming in.

Lilies and callas are each in good supply and sell well. In the way of miscellaneous flowers, marguerites are more plentiful and in good demand. Snapdragons sell quickly, also forget-me-nots. Other flowers include coreopsis, calendula, dimorphotheca, wall-flower, English primroses and bachelor's buttons. Cattleyas are inclined to be druggy. There is now a heavy crop of Trianae. Gardenias sell well. For asparagus and ferns, the demand continues good.

Horticultural Society.

The inaugural meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society was held at Horticultural hall, January 11. John K. M. L. Farquhar, the newly elected president, made a forceful address. He urged amateurs and private gardeners to exhibit more frequently, as the commercial growers seemed now to be the more progressive at the society's exhibitions. He pledged himself to give the society the best possible service and urged all members to join with him in keeping in the van of horticultural progress. The reports of the treasurer, secretary and various committees were read and ordered printed in the society's transactions.

On the exhibit table was a nice assortment of plants. Mrs. J. L. Gardner had a fine table of the old double white Chinese primula, well flowered. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. had a table of palms, begonias, cyclamens, etc. Duncan Finlayson received a first-class certificate for Cymbidium Wiganianum, and Donald McKenzie, gardener to E. B. Dane, a similar award for the beautiful, pure white Cypripedium Bulnenianum. From the latter exhibitor also came several other rare cypripediums, Lælia Gouldiana, Lælia anceps alba, Odontoglossum Harryanum-erispum, cattleyas, etc. From Geo. McWilliam, gardener to G. M. Whittin, came a beautiful new white hybrid calanthe, C. Laselliana (C. oculata gigantea x C. Williamsii), which was awarded a silver medal.

We hope to see more of these Saturday exhibits, which used to be a great feature at the old Horticultural hall, on Tremont street.

Various Notes.

No finer flowers of Freesia Purity are coming into the wholesale market this season than those from the Willow Hill Greenhouses. They have long, wiry stems and sell on sight.

The next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, which had been announced for March 28, will be held one week earlier, March 21, on account of special business which it is desired to dispose of early. The meeting will open at 7:30 instead of 8 o'clock. The newly elected officers will be installed and will make addresses. Several well-known artists have been engaged to assist in the entertaining for that evening, and a well-known caterer will supply the refreshments. One hall will be reserved for dancing. A large attendance of members and ladies is looked for.

I noted in Philip L. Carbone's window last week some handsome specimens of Acacia pubescens, also a splendid lot of hybrid amaryllis.

Wilfrid Wheeler, of Concord, has been chosen as secretary of the Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture. We congratulate him on the appointment and also the board for the wise selection they have made. Mr. Wheeler is one of our brightest, brainiest and most progressive young men, and is sure to make good.

Charles Rupp, of Melrose Highlands, who is one of the new local orchid specialists, has a fine cut of Cattleya Percivaliana.

Mrs. J. F. Flood, of Montvale, near Woburn, is now devoting her entire establishment to Asparagus plumosus and A. Sprengeri. Both crops are doing finely. Wm. Martin makes a competent manager and efficient salesman.

Noted in T. F. Galvin's windows, at the Tremont street store, this week were some specially good white Laelia anceps, Vanda caerulea, phalaenopsis and other orchids, also a great supply of Purity freesia.

Mann Bros. were first in the market with Dutch hyacinths, which they now have in quantity. Their Golden Spurs are extra good this season.

Fred E. Palmer and Miss Florence Palmer sailed on the S. S. Joachheim, of the Hamburg-American line, January 11, for a trip of a few weeks' duration to Panama and the West Indies.

Penn, on Bromfield street, is featuring the new Mrs. Charles Russell rose and is having large sales of it. I noted in one of his windows fine vases of

Frank J. McDonald, the genial salesman for F. J. Dolansky, has been walk-cigars freely. It is an 11-pound boy, born January 8. All are well.

Malcolm Orr, of Saugus, is this sea-

Campbell violets. Each crop is doing remarkably well.

William Sim's earliest house of sweet peas is coming into bud. He has a number of houses planted with his great specialty and expects three large ones to be in full crop for the National success with them and his flowers are among the best coming into the market.

dispose of their big surplus, they had to make the price to suit the buyer. From the looks of the consignments that are coming in, all of our local growers are on crop. Carnations are in great abundance in all varieties and all the houses had difficulty in moving them last week. When they did move, it was at a low price, with good stock at $10 and common at $7.50 per thousand. The special quality in roses alone held up in price, but the great bulk of them brought anything but a fair price. Killarneys and Richmonds are the bulk of the varieties coming in. Beauties, too, are coming in fine, but with slow demand. Violets and sweet peas also suffered for want of demand. There are plenty of these to be had at any of the houses. The great glut was in Paper Whites and Romans. The consignments have been so large of late that several thousands of them were dumped. Valley had a slow call last week. Easter lilies and callas sell best of any of the stock in. There is also a large supply of fine stevia in the market. In greens, ferns, galax, asparagus, Mexican ivy, smilax and leucothoe were in good demand during the week.

Club Meeting.

The first meeting in the new year of the Florists' Club was held Thursday afternoon, January 9, in Odd Fellows' hall. The meeting was well attended and the proceedings interesting. President Weber presided, with all the officers present. The publicity committee reported through Mr. Bergstermann, that the fund had reached $200. An interesting discussion followed, with Messrs. Jaenicke, Irish, Ammann and Ogle as the principal speakers. At the close it was decided to invite a committee from the Retail Florists' Association to our next meeting, to discuss with us as to the advisability of giving a flower show next fall and how to

Vice-president Chas. Young, who has charge of collecting delinquent members' dues, made a report. Those still out were given another month to pay up before being dropped from the rolls of membership. The treasurer's report showed the club to be well off. Alex Siegel was elected a member. The bulletin committee was asked to make a final report so as to wind up its affairs, the report to be ready for the next meeting. The question box contained four queries that led to interesting discussion.

The next meeting will be Thursday afternoon, February 13, at 2 o'clock.

John Himmer, head gardener for John T. Milligan, Crescent, Mo., has his two houses, which were recently completed by Robert Thomson, well filled. It is expected that several hundred thousand feet of glass will be built here in the next year or so for Mr. Milligan.

August Hummert, of the St. Louis Seed Co., says his firm has had a big run on sheep manure. This concern has started preparations for handling a big spring seed trade.

Henry Ostertag visited Jefferson City last week to see what was wanted in the decorating line for the inaugural ball, which takes place this week. He returned home with the order. A force of men were at once put to work making preparations for the work and left for the state capital January 11.

The local florists, who have shipping trade to smaller towns around St. Louis, have made good use of the parcel post delivery and find it a great deal cheaper than express.

The Engelmann Botanical Club held its New Year's meeting January 13, at the Missouri Botanical Garden. Moses Craig, of the garden, presented a paper on "Plant Improvement by Selection." Dr. Geo. T. Moore presided and the attendance was large. The election of officers followed the meeting.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE returns from the early catalogues are reported as excellent.

THE seed trade has again reached the time of year when capable assistants are in demand.

W. ATLEE BURPEE and family left Philadelphia January 14 for a holiday at Miami, Fla.

VISITED NEW YORK: L. W. Wheeler, president of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., Palo Alto, Cal.

THE contract growers of beans surely have had their troubles this season getting their crops ready for delivery.

THE amended regulations for the carrying out of the Plant Quarantine Act will be found on page 72 of this issue.

WITH the expansion of gardening the demand for seeds never ceases—seed selling rapidly is becoming an all-the-year-round occupation.

THE sudden death of George F. Kidd, appraiser of horticultural imports at the port of New York, is reported in this week's obituary column.

THIS season's seeds may not respond well under germination tests, but few planters will know the difference; most of them always plant so thickly that poor germination will make no difference in the crop.

THE Jones Seed Co., of Grand Rapids, Mich., has been incorporated, with a capitalization of $12,000. The stockholders are men who were identified with the organization known as the L. F. Jones Co.

THE Imlay Co. has been incorporated at Zanesville, O., with a capital of $20,000, for the purpose of handling seeds, nursery stock, etc. The members of the corporation are John D. Imlay, Hugh A. Imlay, Wm. S. Imlay, Manning Imlay and John R. Stonesipher.

CALIFORNIA seed crops are planted in good condition, but as yet the winter rains have not set in. Consequently the season may be late this year. The Santa Clara valley is having an unusual number of frosty mornings, writes the Laughlin Seed Co., of San Jose.

IN London a grower has recovered $425 damages from a cold storage concern that accepted valley pips with instructions to "stand the cases separately until frozen through and then stack in 26 to 28 degrees," but when the stock came out ten months later most of the pips had made two inches growth. The evidence showed that the thorough freezing before stacking is of vital importance.

for the improvement and rearrangement of the store.

THE germinating tests of this season's seeds should prove conclusively the danger in any law forbidding the sale of seeds that do not germinate up to an arbitrary standard.

THE Holland bulb growers have had a bad planting season—so wet that it retarded operations—and the acreage is thought to be rather less than usual. It is figured that the 1913 crop is not likely to turn out a record for quantity.

GEO. E. EVANS, who established a seed business several years ago in Gainesville, Fla., under the name of the G. E. Evans Seed Co., has sold his interests there to H. J. Babers and will engage in a similar line in Jacksonville, Fla., but on a larger scale. Mr. Evans has already secured a suitable store on Ocean street, Jacksonville, and will confine himself principally to the wholesale trade. Mr. Babers, Mr. Evans' successor in Gainesville, will be assisted by Mr. Evans' brother, Rex Evans.

A CORRESPONDENT in Holland, writing to one of the British trade papers, comments: "As every year a larger area becomes planted with bulbs, and the number of workmen in the bulb district has not increased in proportion, there is in the busiest time a great scarcity of labor. In consequence of this, some growers are now trying to plow in the bulbs instead of digging, but not always with the best results. The next season, however, will teach us more about this question, and if it is possible to plant the bulbs in this manner much labor will be saved."

THE seed trade will be interested in the note on aster seed growing in Oregon that appears on another page of this issue. Herbert & Fleishauer think many other seeds, including peas and sweet peas, can be grown successfully in their section.

DISCLAIMER AGAIN UPHELD.

The seed trade's disclaimer has again been upheld, this time by the Supreme Court of New York, in a case in which the court decided that the stock delivered was not true to name, yet the seller was not responsible.

The suit in which the decision was rendered was brought against the Page Seed Co., of Greene, N. Y. E. L. Page, who is an ex-president of the American Seed Trade Association, thus summarizes the story of the transaction:

"We sold to a Mr. Platts a quantity of peas which we bought and supposed to be, and still think they were, the variety known as Duke of Albany. It seems that Mr. Platts turned these over to a party by the name of Van Voorhis, or at least a portion of them, and a neighbor of Van Voorhis took the balance. For some reason Van Voorhis and his neighbor did not have crops of peas that were satisfactory to them and they claimed they were not the Duke of Albany variety and so consulted an attorney, who took the matter up with us and Van Voorhis claimed damages or sued for $1,600. After action was begun it was claimed by the plaintiff that Mr. Platts was acting as agent in buying the peas for Van Voorhis and Mr. Platts swore this was the fact and he was simply Van Voorhis' agent.

"We endeavored to settle the matter out of court, not because we thought the peas were not as represented, or Duke of Albany, but we preferred to adjust the matter in a satisfactory manner to all parties if possible to do so, and we offered the plaintiff, before the matter had gone into court, to refund to him the full amount paid for the peas, together with all charges, such as freights, etc., and also all expenses of attorney in the matter up to that time, and $50 or $75 besides, but this the plaintiff refused to accept and we therefore defended the action.

"We tried out this suit entirely on the non-warranty or disclaimer clause or condition."

The opinion of the court was as follows:

At an adjourned trial and special meeting of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, held at the Supreme Court Chambers in the City of Oneonta, N. Y., in and for the County of Otsego, on the 25th day of November, 1912.

Present: Hon. Albert H. Sewell, Justice presiding, Supreme Court, County of Otsego, New York. Faye E. Van Voorhis, plaintiff, against The Page Seed Co., defendant.

This action was brought by the plaintiff against the defendant for an alleged breach of warranty in the sale of peas. Issue was joined and the action was duly brought on for trial at a trial and special term of this court held at Cooperstown, N. Y., commencing on the 11th day of November, 1912. By the stipulation and agreement of the parties in open court, a jury trial was waived, and the trial of the cause was duly adjourned to the 25th day of November, 1912, at the Supreme Court Chambers in the City of Oneonta, N. Y., to be heard and decided by the court without a jury. At the time and place last mentioned, the plaintiff appeared in person and by Himes & Waterman, his attorneys, and by Geo. M. Palmer, Esq., of counsel. The defendant company appeared by Chas. Clinton, its attorney, and the cause was duly brought on for trial and heard by the court.

The cause having been thus tried by the court

Lord Kitchener once said to a subordinate who gave reasons for his failure to obey orders, "Your reasons for not doing it are the best I ever heard. Now go and do it." One can usually find reasons for and against almost any circumstance. Growers give reasons why it don't pay them to grow lilies sometimes. There are some, though, who accept no reasons for not making a thing pay, and they are the ones who make money. Things which seemed impossible ten years ago are now being done easily. Any florist can make money by growing Horseshoe Brand Giganteum if he will merely grow them well and use business judgment in marketing the flowers. The bulbs are the kind that you really need in your business—you need lilies all the year around—and Horseshoe Brand Cold Storage Giganteum will take care of that for you. As a man sows, so shall he reap. Therefore in lily bulbs plant the very best you can buy—Horseshoe Brand—and you have laid the foundation for profit in lily growing. Prices are very reasonable—sent upon request. Write now.

The "SPENCER" Type of Sweet Peas.

Burpee's Unequaled List for 1913.—Arranged Alphabetically. Choicest Re-selected Stocks Grown on "Floradale Farm."

SPENCER SWEET PEAS are a great specialty with us! We were the first to grow the seed in America—the stock having been entrusted to us before introduction, even in England, of the original Countess Spencer. We have grown "the original Beauty" and its many "sportive" children with painstaking care each season since. There are but few other growers, either in England or America, who can supply an equal assortment of True RE-SELECTED "SPENCERS" that are uniformly of such choice quality. Seedsmen and planters generally can see how superior our stocks now are by the trials at FORDHOOK FARMS next June or July, while those who may be in California are invited also to inspect the growing crops at our FLORADALE FARM in the beautiful Lompoc Valley. Every planter's garden, however, is really a trial ground and we shall be quite content if any "Doubting Thomas" will send us only a portion of his order and note the difference in character of flowers produced!

BURPEE'S BLUE LIST FOR 1913

The most complete catalogue published for Market Gardeners, Truckers and Florists. For the planter who "knows" it contains complete lists of all that is best in vegetables and flowers, while the grower who is uncertain as to the best varieties suited for his purpose may be guided by the bull's-eye ☉ placed after what is known to be best. In addition full descriptions are given many new and most valuable varieties.

BURPEE'S BLUE LIST FOR 1913 contains 148 pages with hundreds of halftone and engraved illustrations. Within the pages of this catalogue we have condensed an experience of thirty-five years both in handling and the actual growing of seeds.

If you garden for profit (that is, sell your products in the market) you are entitled to a copy of this complete and easily understood catalogue, but if you are a private planter please do not ask for a copy, as we must protect the Market Gardener, Trucker and Florist.

without a jury, upon the issue of fact joined therein, and the proofs and allegations of the respective parties, and arguments of counsel having been heard and duly and fully considered, I do find and decide as matters of facts, as follows:

First—That in February, 1911, the plaintiff ordered from the defendant through one Peter H. Platts, acting as his agent, fifteen bushels of peas of the variety known as Duke of Albany, and that again in June, 1911, the plaintiff, through Mr. Platts, acting as his agent, ordered from the defendant five bushels more of the same variety of peas; that these orders were received and filled by the defendant and the peas were shipped to and received by Mr. Platts, and that Mr. Platts remitted payment to the defendant.

Second—That the defendant understood when these orders were received, and when the seeds were shipped, that it was dealing with Mr. Platts individually, and had no knowledge or information of any kind that the plaintiff or any other person was interested in the sale of the seeds, and had no knowledge of any alleged agency on the part of Mr. Platts until in the fall of 1911, and after the seed in question had been planted and all or nearly all harvested.

Third—That Mr. Platts' agency in the transaction was not disclosed to the defendant until long after the sale of the seeds in question; that he had dealt in seeds for about sixteen years; that he had dealt with the defendant and had been one of its customers for three years or more prior to the purchase of these seeds; that he well knew and fully understood that fact that it was the general custom of dealers in seeds, and particularly the defendant, to sell seeds with a disclaimer of warranty; that the disclaimer and non-warranty condition was in his mind when he ordered all the seeds in question; that he fully understood the disclaimer of warranty condition from having read it on different occasions before the purchase of the seed in question.

Fourth—That the seeds purchased by the plaintiff through his undisclosed agent, Mr. Platts, were not of the variety known as Duke of Albany, but that Mr. Platts, the agent, was fully cognizant of the disclaimer of warranty on the part of the defendant, and was cognizant of all the facts in "Findings Third," above set forth, and well knew and understood that the disclaimer of warranty was one of the conditions of the sales and was a part of the contracts of sale of the seed in question; that the disclaimer of warranty was printed on slips and was in at least three of the bags containing the peas (exhibit five in evidence) and was in the words following:

"The Page Seed Co. give no warranty, express or implied, as to description, quality, productiveness or any other matter of any seeds, bulbs or plants they send out, and they will not be in any way responsible for the crop. If the purchaser does not accept the goods on these terms, they are at once to be returned."

That the plaintiff was chargeable with the knowledge of his agent acquired in the transaction and that this knowledge was present in the mind of the agent, Mr. Platts, at the time of the purchase of the seeds in question.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW.

I find, decide, order and direct:

First—That there was no warranty, express or implied, of the seeds in question.

Second—That the plaintiff failed to establish the cause of action, set forth in the complaint herein.

Third—That the plaintiff failed to establish any cause of action in his favor and against the defendant.

Fourth—That the defendant is entitled to judgment in this action, on the merits thereof, in his favor and against said plaintiff for a dismissal of the complaint herein and a dismissal of the action, with costs to be taxed as provided by law, and judgment is hereby ordered and directed accordingly.

given as 34,438,000, against 28,582,000 for 1911. The comparative figures for each article are:

	1912.	1911.
Tomatoes	14,022,000	9,749,000
Corn	13,103,000	14,301,000
Peas	7,307,000	4,532,000

The figures on peas will surprise seedsmen, as there was complaint early in the season that canners were short of seed, and later the canners made the same report as seed growers, that the crop was light.

SUES FOR FALSE ARREST.

At Port Jarvis, N. Y., J. J. Bell, of Deposit, has brought an action for $25,000 damages against Charles H. Putnam for alleged false imprisonment and libel. The suit is a sequel to Mr. Bell's arrest last spring on complaint of Mr. Putnam, charged with opening mail intended for Mr. Putnam. The complainant in the action alleges that May 25 Mr. Putnam made a verified complaint against Mr. Bell before a U. S. commissioner charging Bell with taking from a letter carrier a letter mailed by Mrs. E. V. Wallace, of Hubbardsville, N. Y., addressed to the J. J. Bell Seed Co., with a design to obstruct the correspondence and pry into the business secrets of the Bell Seed Co. Mr. Bell was arrested and gave bail, but October 10 the proceedings were dismissed and Bell discharged.

Mr. Putnam bought a half interest in the Bell Seed Co. in 1906, and in the following year took over the entire business, paying a total of $10,000. In 1909 Mr. Bell again went into the seed business, under the name of the Deposit Seed Co. Mr. Putnam, in his answer to the complaint, alleges that many of the patrons of the Bell Seed Co. have addressed their letters to J. J. Bell, seedsmen, and that many of the letters have been delivered to J. J. Bell and the orders filled by the Deposit Seed Co.

THE INSECTICIDE LAW.

According to the official figures of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, "during the fiscal year 293 domestic samples of insecticides and fungicides (other than cattle dips and closely allied preparations) and twenty-five foreign or import samples have been examined under the provisions of the insecticide act of 1910. This act was designed to prevent the misbranding and adulteration of such goods, and its good effects can already be seen by users of these commodities. Of the 293 domestic samples examined, 131 were reported to the insecticide and fungicide board as adulterated or misbranded, and of the twenty-five foreign samples fourteen were recommended for detention at the port of entry."

ARE YOU SATISFIED?

Any florist on the Pacific coast not satisfied to do a local retail business can build up a prosperous wholesale trade by using space in The Review to let the buyers know where stock is to be found. This way:

We have found advertising in The Review to be very satisfactory. We have had orders from all parts of the United States, as well as from the Pacific coast, showing that your valued paper has a very wide circulation. At any time we have any special advertising to do we certainly shall send it to The Review.—Hogan & Kooyman, Oakland, Cal.

CYCLAMENS DAMPING OFF.

Can you tell me what is the cause of cyclamens damping or rotting at the crown? The bulbs are hard and the leaves crisp, but I find them wilted a little in the morning. At the crown they are soft and the whole plant can be lifted off. We have them in the same house and treat them the same as last year, and we had no trouble then. They damp three and four a night. If you can tell me the trouble I would thank you greatly. The climatic conditions are those of southern California. S. N. C.

The most probable cause of your cyclamens damping off is too deep planting. If the corm is entirely covered you are sure to have a lot of trouble of this kind. The corm should show clear of the soil, and then there is much less likelihood of any damping occurring. If the trouble is below the corm, poor drainage, causing a sour condition of the soil, will cause the roots to decay, and in such cases it causes a severe wilting of the plants and they can be picked up by the leaves and will come right out of the pot. If the drainage is good and you are not overfeeding the plants, there is no reason why the leaves should wilt. Sometimes when too fresh manure is used in the soil, bringing a crop of worms, they soon close the drainage and cause trouble. Use lime water when this occurs. C. W.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

I surely have never had a more unthankful task than to write the truth about the freeze that occurred here on the nights of January 4, 5 and 6. It was killing in its effect on at least seventy-five per cent of the stock grown outdoors here for cutting, and, in addition to the temporary loss of business owing to shortage of flowers, several small growers have received a set-back from which it will take them years to recover. The freeze was, apparently, just as bad in the usually favored localities as in those not so well situated. Montebello, so long favored, has been hit, and hit hard, while the beach sections, and the southwestern parts of the city generally, are cleaned up as if with a scythe. It surely was fortunate that the frost did not occur a week earlier, when the New Year's business was at its height, for many of the growers of carnations, violets, sweet peas and other stock had cut closely, leaving little in the way of flowers to be destroyed, though many plants are ruined.

The shortage of flowers from outdoors began early in the morning of January 7, when nothing at all arrived and the previous day's cut had been all cleaned out. This gave the indoor growers an opportunity to raise prices, which they promptly did. Carnations jumped $1 per hundred the first day, with too little stock to go around. Roses stiffened in price, but not so much as the carnations. Valley has been away below the demand and at no time has there been enough to fill special orders. Centaureas are out of the running; stocks, bulbous flowers and others are dead and nothing but indoor flowers can be depended on now.

The shortage of cut flowers has helped the sale of plants, and a number of small poinsettias, azaleas and ferns that were hanging fire a little have gone off. The situation in greens has not been changed much, as the frost has not affected the asparagus. Smilax is damaged somewhat, but not much, as far as seen at present. Next week will tell the story more surely. The seed on Asparagus plumosus was in most cases too far advanced for the frost to hurt it, though some of the later seed will probably be lost.

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society was held at Kruckeberg's hall January 7. There was quite a discussion again on park affairs, which had to be stopped by President Payne to allow time for the annual nomination and election of officers, which resulted as follows: President, Charles Winsel; vice-president, H. R. Richards; treasurer, Jacob Dieterich; secretary, Henry Kruckeberg. It was unanimously the feeling of the various purposes were appointed, as all committees are automatically dismissed at the end of each year by the by-laws.

An important committee, consisting of Dr. Houghton, J. J. Jones and Ernest Branton, was appointed to confer with other local societies with regard to park affairs and other matters of interest to all interested in horticulture.

Various Notes.

Chas. E. Morton made a trip to San Diego January 7.

J. Grullemans, of Lisse, Holland, developed a stiff case of the grip when here and had to be doctored at the Hayward hotel. He recovered and left for Denver January 8.

Dieterich & Turner lost a lot of fine stock in the freeze, especially in large specimens of kentias, philodendrons and other decorative stock.

Howard & Smith lost heavily on tender nursery stock.

Polder & Groen lost practically their whole stock and everyone feels sorry for these hard-working young men.

Mr. Cushman, of the Cushman Gladiolus Co., Sylvania, O., has been in this locality several weeks and has about decided to remain here, or at least to return soon and build a home. His son, Ralph, is also en route to the coast and, should he decide to remain, they will probably buy land and go into the nursery business here or in San Diego.

Morris Goldenson had a good deal of the work for the opening of the Morosco theater, including an immense panel, suitably inscribed. Azaleas are still making a fine showing here.

Charles Brazee, of Wilmington, Cal., lost about $700 worth of daffodils, as well as $100 worth of pipe, which burst in the recent freeze.

J. W. Wolters had a large share of the work at the Dominguez funeral, including a fine pall of white roses and valley, which was one of the most costly pieces ever turned out here.

Richard Altman, formerly of the flower department of the Hamburger store, has gone into business for himself in Phoenix, Ariz., under the style of the Phoenix Florist. He is well satisfied with the business so far.

At the Huntington estate may now be seen the rare spectacle of two species of encephalartos in fruit, namely, E. villosus ampliatus and E. pungens glauca. The cone on the latter, unfortunately, was broken in the younger stages. Another interesting sight is a large bed of cyclamens, flowering finely in the open air. They have immense, well colored flowers and foliage like cabbages. The new orchid houses are finished and the plants are in fine condition and flowering freely. A nice white Cattleya Trianae was in flower at the time of my visit. H. R. Richards.

The Market.

The weather is colder at the present writing than it has been at any time this season. The unusual dry spell at the end of last month finally gave way to quite a bit of rain and this was followed by severe frosts. The effect has been to cause quite a shortage of all kinds of stock. With the close cropping of the holidays, which followed ideal weather, we are in the midst of cold nights and colder days. There is nothing outside except violets and these are few and far between, but with the advent of rain they will again

Roses are practically at a standstill, fancy stock being out of the question. There is a fair quantity of short-stemmed seconds, but they are hardly worth the prices asked for them. Narcissi, which should be at their best at this time, are absent. Inside grown daffodils, valley and Romans are not in sufficient quantity to meet requirements. A visit to the establishment of E. W. McLellan & Co., at Burlingame, shows a splendid stock of roses and carnations coming on and also for immediate cutting. The quantity of stock cut and shipped from this place during the holiday season was by far the largest in the history of the company.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

Trade was pretty quiet last week, a not unusual condition after the holiday stimulus. There is a fair supply of all varieties of flowers, but nothing approaching a glut. As soon as the weather improves, the trade will undoubtedly resume its normal condition. Carnations are showing the effect of the want of sunshine in most cases; the stems are weak, but the flowers make up in quantity what they lack in quality. The prices are surely disproportionate; when one week they sell at $2.50 per dozen and the next week at 50 cents, and that course might easily be modified. Roses are not plentiful and the demand is not heavy. Bulb stock is now arriving in good quantities and there is pretty good sale for it. Cinerarias are in demand and there are lots of cyclamens and primulas on sale.

Various Notes.

C. H. Roney, formerly at the Washington park greenhouses of Mrs. L. W. McCoy, is now with the Aabling-Eb-right Co. This firm is extending its business in all lines and is now getting after the wholesale orders in good shape.

H. Hefty, who has been with the Woodlawn Flower Store for some months, returned to Portland, Ore., last week. Julius Schnapp has come back from that city and is taking Mr. Hefty's place in the store.

J. J. Karins, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., is in the city. Mr. Brown, of Brown Bros., Vancouver, B. C., was a visitor here last week.

Gus Bjorkman, superintendent of the greenhouses of Hollywood Gardens, is in the Noble hospital, threatened with an attack of pneumonia. Gus Peterson is at home, ill, and others of the store staff are at present laid up.

Last week we had the heaviest fall of snow in five years. Following low temperatures and frozen ground, it has stayed longer with us than usual, but the present mild weather is moving it fast, so that outside work on the land will not long be delayed. T. W.

The Market.

Business has been moving along steadily. While there is not a great deal going on socially, a steady counter trade and a goodly amount of funeral work are more essential than intermittent business. Roses are a little off crop. The dark weather had a telling effect on the supply. Carnations have been plentiful in all colors, yet not to a degree where any are consigned to

Various Notes.

S. Lubliner has, in addition to cut flowers, a line of fruit and ornamental trees. He has a large space in the rear of his store where they are displayed. Mr. Lubliner recently returned from a trip to Chicago.

The Tonseth Co. recently supplied a large English flag, done with carnations and immortelles. The occasion was the funeral of the English consul.

Wm. Hoffman has a nice batch of cinerarias coming into flower.

...NEWS NOTES...

La Manda Park, Cal.—Charles F. M. Stone is making preparations to start business here as a florist. His specialties will be ferns and roses.

San Diego, Cal.—Miss A. M. Rainford, proprietor of the Flower Shop, has removed to 1117 Fourth street, just across the street from her former location.

Pullman, Wash.—Thomas Neill & Son, whose establishment was formerly known as the College View Greenhouses, have changed the name to Neill's Greenhouses. Their business in 1912 was the best in their experience.

San Francisco, Cal.—Mrs. R. E. Darbee reports a rapid increase in the shipments of California violets going to the florists of the middle west and thinks the stock will prove indispensable once they become accustomed to handling it.

Pasadena, Cal.—James MacGillivray, gardener at the Richard Neustadt place in Altadena, was elected president of the Pasadena Horticultural Society at the annual meeting, held at the Board of Trade. The other officers chosen were: Vice-president, William Hutchinson; treasurer, George F. Nilsson, Jr.; recording secretary, George H. Kennedy; financial secretary, Victor L. Clemence; sergeant at arms, George Marshall; trustee for three years, Richard Thomas.

La Grande, Ore.—The La Grande Floral Co. has filed supplemental articles of incorporation, changing the firm name to the La Grande Seed & Floral Co., and is adding a full line of flower and garden seeds to the store stock. The company had a fine retail Christmas business, being completely sold out of cut flowers and blooming plants by noon of December 24. Two houses will be erected as an addition to the range in the coming spring and about four acres will be planted with outdoor flowers and vegetables.

Our advertisement in The Review seems to have worked three shifts of eight hours each every day. It has brought us all the business we can handle. The Review certainly has been a trade getter for us.—The O. A. Kimball Co., Goldfield, Nev.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1912-1913: Pres., Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa.; Vice-Pres., J. B. Plikington, Portland, Ore.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-eighth annual meeting, Portland, Ore., June, 1913.

THE sudden death of George F. Kidd, appraiser of horticultural imports at the port of New York, is reported in this week's obituary column.

A REPORT from California states that "nurserymen in the San Joaquin valley, particularly in Fresno county, are clamoring for rain, the nursery business has taken a sudden slump and the situation is serious."

THE Los Verjels Land Co., of Bangor, Cal., is preparing twenty acres of land for nursery purposes. F. M. Turner, the manager, is planning to plant 100,000 olive cuttings and 50,000 fig cuttings on the company's property in the near future.

THE nurseries of E. H. Rust, at South Pasadena, Cal., were visited recently by a party of students from the agriculture department of the Los Angeles schools, under the guidance of their instructors. The object of the visit was the study of plant propagation.

R. A. KIRKMAN, of the Kirkman Nurseries, at Fresno, Cal., has purchased, in association with Prior & McCormick, real estate dealers, 160 acres of land in the heart of Sutter county. Mr. Kirkman has made elaborate plans for the improvement of the property.

THE Donald Nursery Co., of Donald, Ore., is now a corporation. The company consists of W. W. Walker, Newton Walker and D. C. Walker. W. W. Walker is the senior member, having been in the nursery business the greater part of his lifetime, and his two sons, Newton and D. C., are now associated with him.

QUARANTINE AMENDMENTS.

Under date of September 18, 1912, rules and regulations for the enforcement of the Plant Quarantine Act of August 20, 1912, were issued. Regulations 2 to 9 are amended to read as herewith set forth:

Regulation 2. Definition.

BETTER UNDERSTANDING

of our firm, its products and its method of doing business, means to you, the buyer, Better Service, Better Goods and Better Satisfaction. Our aim is to produce quality in quantity at reasonable prices.

Better business means to us better employees and to them a better living. We guarantee that you get 100 per cent of what you order in a quality that will be satisfactory to you as a buyer and to us as producers.

Selling job lots at low prices is not a business, and there is no standard of quality in job lot buying. From us you get a guaranteed quality at a price fair to the buyer, and at which there is a reasonable profit and an insurance against damage in transit. Our goods are insured to you against loss. Producing young stock is a business, and job lots at low prices are left-overs and culls.

ENCHANTRESS SUPREME

THE best Sport of Enchantress up to date, possessing all the vigor and freedom that distinguish its parent. Color a light salmon pink—a color that is not only very attractive, but also one that endures full exposure to the sun without bleaching. A good all-round Carnation that retains its color at all seasons. Calyx is longer and narrower than that of the parent variety, and distinct from the latter. Has shown no inclination to be a burster. The weak points of Enchantress seem to have been lost in this Sport, and a trial of four years' duration convinces us of its great value.

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

Toledo florists have had one of the best holiday seasons in the history of the city. Every year the demand for flowers and plants for gifts grows larger. As usual after the holidays, trade is now rather quiet. The florists were kept busy in the first part of the week with orders for the funeral of Dr. Donnelly, one of our prominent physicians. There has seldom been a greater demand here for funeral flowers of the choicest kind, and seldom has more artistically arranged work been seen.

Toledo, like many other cities, has been in the clutches of a fierce sleet storm. While no damage was done to the glass, the damage to fruit and shade trees was great. Two deaths from electrocution, due to the wires being down, were the result of this storm.

Various Notes.

Mrs. McPhail, daughter of S. N. Peck, has gone to Homeland, Ga., for the benefit of her health.

Mrs. Rogers, formerly with Paul A. Timm, has left that position.

One of our leading dry goods houses started a flower department, but it was of short duration.

Julius Dilloff, of Schloss Bros., New York city, paid Toledo a visit last week.

New American Beauty GERANIUM

We take great pleasure in introducing to our many customers for 1913 our new American Beauty Geranium. For the first time, after working on it for nearly three years, we are offering it for sale.

Our Claim for American Beauty Geranium is that it surpasses all other Geraniums in its real American Beauty color. The individual blooms measure 2 3/4 inches across. It is semi-double, medium dwarf, of stately shape. It has come to stay as a money maker. Prices to the trade: 2 1/2-in. pots, 50c each, $5.00 per doz.; 3-in. pots, $1.00 each, $10.00 per doz. cash. Write for circulars in natural colors and prices on large lots.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Trade was fairly good last week. Stock is still scarce. Roses are nowhere near being equal to the demand. Carnations are arriving in larger shipments than for some time, but still the supply is inadequate. Lilies are also unusually scarce. Bulb stock is becoming more plentiful as the season advances. Yellow daffodils and freesias are already in fairly good supply and are selling readily. The same is true of Paper White narcissi. A few tulips are arriving daily and selling at sight. Some fine sweet peas are now available. Valley is selling by the thousands. Greens of every description are in heavy demand.

Various Notes.

Robert Jean, proprietor of the Scribner Floral Co., is much pleased with the manner in which business has opened up this year. This firm was the first in this city to use an auto for delivery purposes and has just secured a Ford car to replace the former machine.

The Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association is being extensively advertised by its secretary, Albert Pochelon, of Detroit. It also has a walking delegate in the form of Sam Seligman, of Wertheimer Bros., who has his sample case and order book pasted over with circulars recently issued by Mr. Pochelon.

A felon on one's finger is nothing pleasant under any circumstances, and when a man so full of business as Michael Bloy is compelled to put in three sleepless nights on account of having a felon on his finger, it is serious, indeed.

S. S. Skidelsky has been in the city for a week, negotiating some important business.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange has been awarded the contract to supply the southern smilax to be used in decorating for the automobile show. The order calls for two carloads of smilax, which is the largest quantity used here on one decoration for some time. This firm has just put in a carload of a fine grade of sphagnum moss.

Hubert Pearce has been in Colorado for some time, installing steam traps.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Fettes treated their whole staff, from the errand boy and his best girl to the head book-keeper and her best fellow, to a full course dinner. During the evening the party was entertained by Mrs. Fettes and all enjoyed themselves immensely.

The Detroit Cut Flower Supply House is constantly adding more shipments of first-class stock.

The regular meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club will be held Monday evening, January 20. An exceptionally good attendance is looked for, as the members are well rested after the rush.

For two years the best Red in 100 class at the Cincinnati Flower Show, 1911, St. Paul and Cleveland Flower Shows, 1912.

The Herald is an early, free and continuous bloomer, giving a heavy crop by October 1 and continuously afterwards. Cuttings propagated in March made large plants and were in full crop by October 1. They gave a heavy cut for Christmas.

The flowers are large; full and deep calyx, which is absolutely non-bursting; stem long and stiff; color is a clear, even shade of scarlet.

Cuttings, strong and well rooted, ready for delivery, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000. All stock guaranteed.

STANDARD VARIETIES READY

We are propagating from flowering stems only, not from cut back stock. Propagating from stem cuttings only insures perfect health and the most free-flowering qualities.

Renew your standard varieties by getting healthy cuttings from the stock that produced the blooms which won more prizes at the fall exhibitions than were won by the flowers of any other grower.

The Market.

A general air of satisfaction seems to prevail among our local florists, and business continues to be most encouraging. There are plenty of parties, dances and receptions to keep the pot plants and the choicer grades of cut flowers on the move, while the brisk demand for funeral work uses up the shorter grades of stock. Both roses and carnations are abundant. Bulbous stock, such as hyacinths, narcissi and daffodils, is daily becoming more plentiful. Easter lilies are still shy, and hard to get at any cost, while callas are more plentiful. There is a good call for azaleas, which are equal to the demand. Smilax and asparagus are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The Miami Floral Co. sent several large designs and corsage bouquets to Columbus for the inauguration of Governor Cox.

H. H. Ritter is confined to his home by illness.

J. W. Rodgers was called to Cincinnati on business last week.

One of the prettiest house decorations of the season was that done by W. G. Matthews for a reception at the Peter Kuntz residence last week. Three different color schemes were worked out in the different rooms; one was red, another green and white and the other pink and white.

The 12-week-old son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Schaefer has been seriously ill for several weeks, but is reported to be improving.

Last week ended with unpleasant weather and lots of rain, which brought on high water. The boiler pits of the Dayton Floral Co. were flooded, as their plant is located along the river, and it was necessary to keep a pump working in order to keep their fires in.

Leo Asher is again on the sick list.

Arthur Schmidt is just recovering from a severe attack of the grip.

Jos. I. Schaefer has some exceptionally fine specimen plants of Primula malacoides, for which he finds a good sale.

Mrs. J. C. Ewing says that trade in her new store has started out excellently.

Miss Olive Ritter returned last week from a week's visit to Greenville, O.

Martin Reukauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was a visitor last week; also H. P. Smith, of Piqua, O., and W. E. Wyldes, of the Peters & Reed Pottery Co., Zanesville, O.

Warren G. Matthews is quite ill with quinsy.

The inauguration of Governor Cox was instrumental in creating a good trade in this city January 13, as many flowers were sent from here to Columbus for that occasion, to say nothing of the numerous orders for corsage bouquets to be worn at the inaugural ball.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Owing to the extremely warm weather stock of all kinds is coming in plentifully, with the exception of roses. Some of the growers who sent in thousands for the holidays are sending only a few hundreds now. Prices remain good. American Beauties and white roses are still rather plentiful. Carnations are taking the place of colored roses. These are in full crop and, while the drop in prices prophesied last week has not yet materialized, the quantity that is being brought in must surely drop the values at an early date. Sweet peas are to be had from $7.50 to $10 per thousand. Jonquils have made their appearance. Poinsettias may still be had in limited quantity. Locally grown Easter lilies are coming in and promise to be in sufficient supply to meet all demands. Callas are also in good supply. Orchids are more plentiful than they have been. There is a good supply of pot plants, including azaleas, cyclamens, begonias, etc.

Various Notes.

H. F. Michell and Joseph Goudy, of Philadelphia, were in town during the week.

The death of Wm. S. Fisher is recorded in this week's obituary column.

At the January meeting of the Florists' Club considerable discussion was had on the tariff question. Mr. Hammer, who brought the matter to the attention of the club, is in favor of a reduction on both pipe and glass. A resolution was adopted whereby the secretary of the national association will be informed of this and asked to have suitable action taken. A committee consisting of Fred Kramer, Edw. Schmid, N. L. Hammer, George Cooke and Otto Bauer was appointed to arrange for a special train to take the members to the New York show and to get enough members together to fill such a train. William F. Gude, Otto Bauer and George Cooke were appointed as a committee to arrange for the holding of the annual banquet of the club, to take place in connection with the installation of officers at such time as will not interfere with the Easter business or the attendance at the New York show.

The conservatory at the rear of the store of F. H. Kramer will next week take on the appearance of a young menagerie, Mr. Kramer having given permission to a club of cat fanciers to hold their annual exhibition and show there. C. L. L.

New American Beauty Geranium

We take great pleasure in introducing to our many customers for 1913 the New American Beauty Geranium. For the first time, after working on this wonderful new Geranium for nearly three years, we are offering it for sale. It originated from a novelty collection and has stood the test now nearly three years.

Our Claim for American Beauty Geranium

is that it surpasses all other Geraniums in its real American Beauty color—

1. In brilliancy of color.
2. In size of its large blooms.
3. In earliness of bloom.
4. In constancy of bloom.
5. In vigor, strength and stocky plants.
6. In propagating quality.
7. In number of large clusters of blooms.
8. In selling quality.
9. In a wonderful ability to retain its color in cool or the hottest weather.
10. In a Geranium that has come to stay as a money maker.

AMERICAN BEAUTY is semi-double, of the purest American Beauty color. It is so distinct that no difference can be detected in the color of an American Beauty Rose. The only Geranium of its color ever introduced. It flowers freely the entire season. It grows compact, medium dwarf, of stately shape with lustrous green foliage, slightly corrugated, with a brownish circle. It produces gigantic flower heads very freely the entire season. We claim it to have larger flower heads than any other variety of its kind. The individual blooms measure $2\frac{3}{4}$ inches across and have as many as eight fully opened, gigantic flower spikes and several half open and more in bud, in eight-inch pots.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

The New Year's business of the local florists was the same splendid one as heretofore, especially in the cut flower line. Plants in general did not sell in such great quantities as at Christmas.

January 6 marked the inauguration of this year's carnival season, by the holding of the first official ball. Like an almost endless chain, elegant balls, receptions and other festivities will from now on follow each other in rapid succession, until the lenten season begins. Although this period of merry-making is the shortest this year that it can be, nevertheless it will go down in history as having been as gorgeous as any ever known in the city. All our florists will be kept constantly busy during this time, and their full forces of help will be taxed to their utmost capacity. As in former years, Chicago will furnish the main part of the enormous quantity of choice cut flowers of all kinds used during this season. The flowers received from the Chicago shippers during the recent holidays were highly satisfactory to the local buyers and they all expressed the hope that the flowers to be used during the carnival period will be just as satisfactory.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

Although weather conditions are almost perfect, the supply of stock will not be great for some weeks to come, and the shortage seems to be general throughout the province.

Walter Calvert and Mark Henderson, after experiencing a highly successful season, are already making arrangements to double their glass area in the coming spring. The Dale Estate is also contemplating a further extension of its premises. At the last mentioned establishment a large pumping station, 25x60 feet, has just been completed, for the purpose of forcing manure water from large cement tanks through special piping distributed over the greenhouses. Far better results are hoped for in connection with this improved system.

T. W. Duggan, manager of the Dale Estate, was again elected mayor of the town by acclamation last week, and Wm. J. Beatty, an employee of the same firm, was appointed deputy reeve of the municipality.

THE NEW PINK CARNATION.

NORTHPORT.
Color, cerise pink. This variety has been thoroughly tried out for the past five years and we offer it today with every confidence that it will ultimately take first place as the premier dark pink. The color is similar to Mrs. C. W. Ward without the objectionable streakiness and tendency to burst the calyx of the latter variety during the dark weather. The growth is wonderfully free and continuous and Northport will produce more flowers per plant than any other variety of its type. The calyx is practically non-bursting. Rooted cuttings, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

We have for immediate delivery A1 rooted cuttings of Enchantress, White Enchantress and Beacon at $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

IMPATIENS IN FULL SUN.

Will the improved Impatiens Sultani, with its fine colors, succeed in full sun? I think not, but if they would, I should like to grow them in such a situation and undoubtedly some of your readers have tried the experiment.

W. C. E.

Impatiens Sultani, I. Holstii and its hybrids and the beautiful pink I. Oliveri succeed well planted outdoors in partial shade. Near the seashore I have seen them blooming profusely in full sun, but inland they have not done so well, being scorched somewhat during heat waves. In partial shade they grow and flower beautifully. The flowers are more easily damaged by rain storms than are balsams, but for all that they are a charming annual in the open garden. I have found it an advantage to mulch them, as if they once become badly dried up they are of little further use. I would say that, provided the plants have sufficient moisture, they will bloom continuously from June until cut down by frost.

Business Session: Election of Officers.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The fourteenth annual dinner of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, at the Florence Inn, on the evening of January 8, was the best in its history. The attendance was seventy and many of the city's leading men graced the occasion. The decorations were excellent and consisted of American Beauty, Killarney Queen, Richmond and Shaway roses, William Eccles, British Triumph, Northport, Commodore, Ward, Benora and Enchantress carnations, with some fine plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. The contributors were: C. H. Totty, Scott Bros., the F. R. Pierson Co. and the private gardeners, many of whom came from neighboring societies. W. Tricker and M. C. Ebel, of Madison, N. J., and Geo. V. Nash, of Bronx park, New York, were among the visitors. The speakers were Hon. Chas. P. McClellan, Hon. F. L. Young, President Chas. H. Tibbetts, R. A. Patterson, C. S. Davison, Seth Bird, Hon. Frank V. Millard, Mayor F. R. Pierson, Mr. Nash, visiting gardeners, and the press representatives. J. Austin Shaw.

GREEN FLY ON SNAPDRAGONS.

Please let me know what to do for green flies on snapdragons. I am afraid to kill them by fumigating with tobacco stems.

J. H.

Try one of the tobacco papers, like Nico-Fume or Aphis Punk. These will not harm the plants in the least. Tobacco dust can also be used with perfect safety. A light fumigation with tobacco stems would not harm snapdragons if you were careful not to allow them to catch fire. The tobacco stems, however, leave a disagreeable odor behind them, and, with so many more cleanly fumigants on the market, are practically out of date.

The Market.

Last week was one of many variations in weather conditions. Extreme cold kept the people off the streets and business was not too brisk. On one or two days the conditions were so bad that walking was most difficult, but we are glad to say that the sun came out and stock is now more plentiful. Early bulbous stock is now on the market and relieves the carnation situation considerably. Roses are good and find ready sale for funeral work. Plants find some sale at this time, but are used more to make a show in the stores, which naturally creates some demand for them.

Various Notes.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held and the reports of the flower show read. All business is now closed and, while we did not make money, the members feel satisfied, considering the many things in the show's favor.

William Weber, who was the cemetery man for the William Scott Co. for many years, has nearly recovered from his serious illness. He is now employed at the Forest Lawn cemetery.

Edward H. Altman was taken sick just at the busy time and, had it not been for the ever ready Miss Altman, the store would have been greatly handicapped. We are glad to say that at this writing Mr. Altman is feeling much better and will return to his duties soon.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of the Heating Department, describing their troubles or asking any questions regarding the heating of greenhouses, the piping or boiler-room. But please do not ask us to make a choice of apparatus for you. Each boiler advertised in The Review is a good boiler, and the advertisers sell them on their merits.

A SMALL, COOL LEAN-TO.

One of my customers has a small lean-to in which he wishes to grow an assortment of plants, and he wants to know the best method of heating it, with the minimum of attention, without harming the plants and without going to the expense of piping the room. Would a stove, burning coke, be injurious to the plants? He would use an oil stove, but is afraid of fire. Any suggestions from your heating expert will be thankfully received. The outside temperature here, in the extreme south of Illinois, seldom drops lower than 15 degrees above zero, and he just wants to keep the place above the freezing point.

Had the size of the lean-to been given, a better idea of the requirements would have been furnished, but if the house is not more than ten feet wide and fifteen feet long a stove would more than keep out frost, and coke could be used without danger of injuring the plants. Even if the house is twenty-five or thirty feet in length, if the smoke pipe can be carried to a chimney at the farther end of the house, it would be possible to maintain a temperature of 40 to 50 degrees in cold weather. Provided the floor is of earth or concrete, there would be little danger of fire from using an oil stove, of modern construction, if it is kept away from the walls and benches.

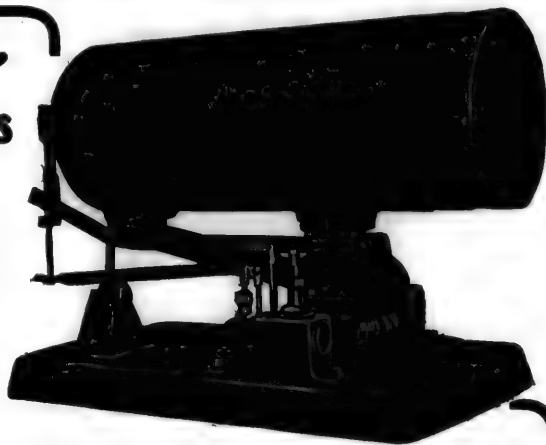

THREE PARTITIONED HOUSES.

Kindly let me know how to pipe the three houses shown in the enclosed sketch, for low pressure steam; also please say what size of boiler will be needed. Our location is western Pennsylvania. C. B.

The sketch shows three parallel houses, with the boiler at one end. House No. 1 appears to be 20 x 100 feet, and a temperature of 60 degrees is desired at one end of this house and 56 degrees at the other. House No. 2 help to maintain a uniform temperature throughout the houses by keeping steam coils free and clear of condensation.

"Detroit" RETURN TRAPS

By automatically returning the condensation directly to boilers at almost evaporation temperature, "Detroit" Traps effect a great saving in coal.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Summing up last week, it can scarcely be called an ordinary one. Practically all the offerings were of the best quality, but even that did not induce buying as it should have done. The rainy weather of the first part of the week seemed to put an effective damper on business. The people did not come out and buy from the retailers except when absolutely necessary, and the latter seemed to forget to buy from the wholesaler. January 10, however, things were much brighter and by the close of the week almost everything was cleaning up nicely, although the prices realized were hardly normal for the time of the year.

The demand seemed to be mostly for roses, carnations and the like. There seems to be a decided falling off in the call for small flowers for corsages, due to the small number of receptions and balls. Single violets, all Princess of Wales, are of elegant quality. A few tulips and snapdragons are seen. Plumosus, which was short in supply last week, is back to normal, while smilax and Sprengerii continue to arrive in quantities.

Various Notes.

E. G. Gillett received some boxes of Keizerskroon tulips this week that found a good sale.

Al. Heckman has been confined to his home since January 10, by a severe attack of neuralgia. During his absence Alex Ostendarp is having to do some tall hustling at the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange.

Frank Farney, of the M. Rice Co., and Sam Seligman, of Wertheimer Bros., are in town.

The increase in Miss Mae Carroll's business reminds one of the old adage, "Great oaks from little acorns grow."

R. Witterstaetter has taken a jaunt to Panama to have a look at the "big ditch."

January 11 the deal was closed whereby Al. Forder acquired Miss Shanahan's store in Avondale.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Conger spent the latter part of the holidays with Mr. Conger's mother at Chicago.

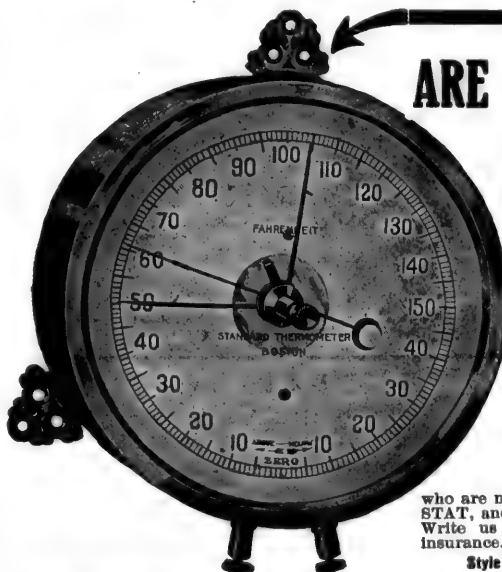

Martin Reukauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., was a caller last week.

I have used the Imperial Plant Food, both in Powder and Biscuit form, and have always found it safe and reliable, as well as very marked in its effects on all classes of plants on which it has been used. For the commercial florist or private gardener who needs a really high-grade and quick-acting fertilizer, there is nothing superior to the Imperial Plant Food. Many skilled growers have been using it for years, and I have yet to meet one who does not commend it.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade has been good since the holidays. There has been considerable funeral work and decorating for numerous social events. Roses have been in unusual demand, the local cut being inadequate to meet the demand. American Beauties have not been quite up to the standard. Sweet peas are offered in larger quantities and are finding a ready market. Orchids, violets and valley are finding some demand. Paper Whites and Romans are used in funeral work, outside of which they are not in much demand. Jonquils have been receiving a better call; however, the quality is nothing extra.

Various Notes.

Miss M. Carroll, of Norwood, O., spent a day with the trade this week.

George Wiegand writes from Florida that he is picking strawberries and oranges. He leaves for a ten days' trip to Cuba this week.

Alfred Brandt is to move two doors north in the near future.

Hartje & Elder have been cutting some excellent carnations lately.

Sidney Smith is getting daily bulletins from San Antonio, Tex. It looks as though he had the Texas fever pretty bad.

Walter Bertermann is receiving considerable newspaper publicity. He is given credit for inventing the idea of converting used automobiles into delivery autos. Several years ago he secured a second-hand chassis and had it equipped with a delivery body. This was so successful that recently the Bertermanns installed another.

Jacob Forrest, of Greenfield, was a visitor recently. Mr. Forrest states that he is to have some competition in Greenfield.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey, of Ft. Wayne, are shipping quantities of orchids into this market. H. L. W.

Massillon, O.—The N. E. Peck Floral Co. expects to erect two more greenhouses, each 25x150, as early as possible in the spring.

Daytona, Fla.—Mr. and Mrs. Leon Despland, known in the trade as the Daytona Floral Co., have opened a store in the fine new Staples & Cutten building, on Magnolia avenue, a few doors from the postoffice. The show window is said to be one of the prettiest sights in town.

THE SOIL CARRIER IN USE.

SAVES TIME, LABOR ^A_ND MONEY

We call your attention to our Gravity Carriers for conveying soil into and out of greenhouses. You are aware of the great amount of labor necessary for changing the loam in your benches. It requires but a few feet of our Gravity Carriers to reduce this expense.

Carriers are made in eight and four foot sections, which can be instantly joined; the rollers are of the best seamless steel tubing, ball bearing, and are 14 inches in length by 2 1/4 inches in diameter. Cut shows how they operate.

A run of carrier is set up with one end projecting through a window and a cart containing the loam is placed at this end. The loam is shoveled into the boxes, which are pushed or conveyed by gravity into the house and dumped into the benches. Empty boxes are pushed back to cart over same run of carrier. When the beds within a convenient radius are filled, the carrier is set up at another window and the work continues until all benches are filled. For removing soil the process is, of course, similar.

We shall be pleased to furnish further details relative to construction and durability of the carriers; also, upon receipt of information relative to size of your greenhouses, furnish an estimate of the cost of a system for your requirements.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

Business is active, every day being a busy one for the florists. Funerals, weddings and social decorations have been plentiful. Flowers of all kinds are in abundance. The weather has been favorable all along, with the exception of last week, which gave us more rain than was wanted, and as a result the Ohio river at this point is over forty feet, being several feet above the danger point.

Various Notes.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. has been busy and is cutting enough flowers to supply the demand. This concern is well supplied with roses, carnations and other flowers. Some nice Easter lilies were on display at the store, as well as other plants.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are busy with funerals and decorations. They are cutting immense quantities of roses and carnations.

Emil Niednagel and Miss Olga Schmidt were married January 9. The wedding was a quiet one, only the members of the immediate families being present. The couple left the same evening for several weeks' stay in Florida and Cuba.

C. L. Niednagel is still cutting American Beauty of extra fine color. Killarney is off crop, but he is cutting a considerable quantity. He is drying off My Maryland, intending to start anew in a short time.

J. C. Elsperrmann keeps busy. He is cutting excellent carnations and finds a ready sale for them. His Easter lilies are showing up nicely and will be about right for Easter.

Miss Nellie Goodge has been quite busy, having about as much as she is able to handle. She has almost recovered from her recent illness.

Henry Seymour has had considerable funeral work lately. His carnations are good.

Louis Fritsch is gaining trade steadily. His carnations are in good condition.

Royston & Fenton are off crop with roses. Their smilax is coming along well and will be ready to cut in February. E. L. F.

Oconomowoc, Wis.—The new greenhouse of the Otto Sylvester Co., on Silver Lake street, has been completed and stocked with ferns, violets and chrysanthemums.

You Can't Hammer Our Bar Clasp On

We figured it out that any clasp that can be pushed on can be pushed off. We didn't want any such thing to happen. So we made a clasp that is securely held to the eave plate by screw-head bolts.

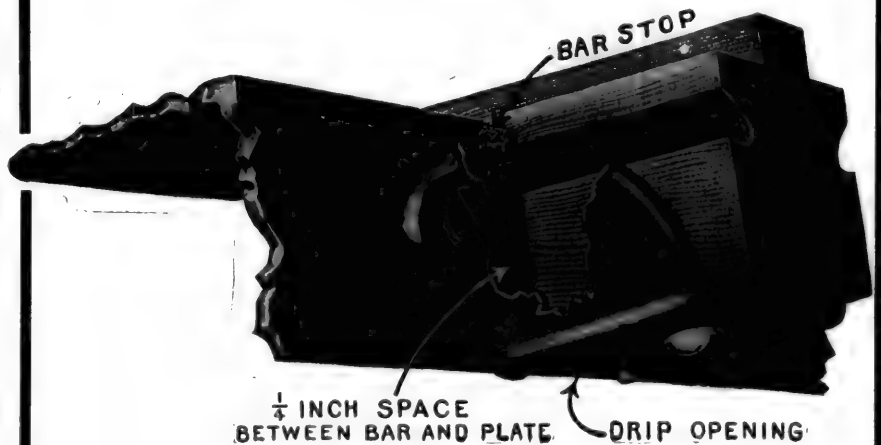

As every foot of our Patented Eave Plate sold by us is accurately spaced and drilled for the clasps, there is no bother in spacing them—no danger of variation in width between bars.

As this Angle Iron Ice Clearing Eave Plate is patented, none but such greenhouse builders as we have licensed can use it without making both themselves and you liable to suit.

The other side of the question is: We will be only too happy to sell you all of it you want, at a price so reasonable that you can't afford not to use it.

How many feet do you want?

Let us know and we will be glad to state the price.

Interior of 34 x 600 ft. Flat Rafter House—Bassett & Washburn Range

If you have never gone through a range of modern, up-to-date flat rafter greenhouses, you can hardly appreciate the great advantage they have over the old style semi-iron houses. If you expect to make money from your stock and keep ahead of your competitors, you must build first-class greenhouses. There is nothing you can do right now that will do you more good than to write for our Bulletin No. 15. It will tell you about our flat rafter house and about the famous Bassett & Washburn range at Hinsdale, Ill.

FLORIST.....

McKINLEY DAY.

McKinley day has not developed in the way hoped for by the trade, but in certain localities it has taken hold in fair shape and there will be a considerable demand for colored carnations January 29. In localities where the day is observed florists will do well to do a little extra advertising for the occasion, and even in the towns where no increased business was apparent January 29 last year it will be well for retailers to devote at least a part of their regular newspaper space to reminding the people of the anniversary. One hardly can expect the public to recall these special flower days if the trade does not remember them to the extent of advertising them for a few days in advance.

BEHIND THE SCENES.

Where the Real Work is Done.

While it is necessary for a retail flower store to present an attractive appearance, appearances are not the only essential if a large business is to be handled. The time has passed when a florist could do a satisfactory business with nothing but selling space. Such facilities as will serve for a candy shop, or a shoe store, are not adequate for an up-to-date retail flower business of any size. If a volume is to be done to warrant the high rents downtown it is not possible to make up the work behind a screen in the back of the store. With the expansion of the business adequate workroom facilities have become of prime importance and are as much to be considered as is the store itself.

During the last summer the Fleischman Floral Co., Chicago, completely refitted the store, putting in new fixtures throughout, all in Carrara marble and nickelplated brass. The store is quite the most elaborate in Chicago. One large display refrigerator, at the right of the entrance, is used for roses, while another of almost equal size on the opposite side of the store is used for cattleyas, valley and violets. Across the back of the room are the book-keeper's quarters, which are much more complete than in the stores where transient trade is catered to; practically all the Fleischman business goes on the books. The office equipment is all in mahogany, but it is the only wood in the store, the fixtures being marble, plate glass and mirrors. There are, of course, no counters, this feature of retail equipment having long since been discarded in good stores.

Fleischman's Workroom Facilities.

While refitting the store, which occupies the space between the street and the rotunda of one of Chicago's finest office buildings, equal attention to detail was devoted to the expansion of the facilities behind the scenes. All making up was done in the basement. The store always had afforded ample selling facilities, but the pressure had come upon the working space. Consequently, the front half of the basement under two adjoining stores was secured and fitted up to afford facilities equal to any demand. As a first essential, a large storage box was put in for cut flowers. The box is forty feet long, twelve feet deep and eight feet high. There are not many wholesale cut flower establishments which have larger storage space. The box, which is shown in one of the accompanying illustrations, is one room, but access to the stock is had by means of four doors, two of which swing to the right store employees can operate it. The machine cools the big storage box in the workroom and the two display cases in the store. It operates on what is known as the brine system; that is, in the top of each box there are tanks of brine through which the ammonia pipes pass. Running the machine for a few hours will reduce the temperature in these brine tanks to a point where they act the same as cakes of ice. When the temperature in the boxes has thus been reduced to the degree wanted, the motor is stopped and the brine holds the temperature down for the greater part of the day. Of course the rapidity of rise in the temperature when the machine is not running depends on the weather and the frequency with which the boxes are opened, but ordinarily the apparatus need be operated only a few hours a day.

Cost of Mechanical Refrigeration.

The refrigerating outfit represents an investment of about $2,500. This includes the cost of the big storage box, the ice machine, the motor, the piping and installation. It was put in by the United Refrigerator and Ice Machine Co., which built the box as well as the machine. While it is figured and two to the left, making for the greatest ease of entrance.

Where the Money Comes In.

(This is not a bank—just the cashier's window in the refitted store of the Fleischman Floral Co., Chicago. The entire store is in marble and nickel.)

At the end of the box a small room is partitioned off with glass. Here stands an electric motor and the compressor for a refrigerating plant. The space occupied is negligible and, within the glass enclosure, the apparatus operates noiselessly. It is simplicity itself. A chart on the wall gives directions for starting and stopping. Any of the

that the mechanical refrigeration will prove cheaper than ice, and enough so to more than pay the interest on the investment, the principal gain in this instance will be the freedom from the muss and interruptions caused by the men with the ice cakes, who would otherwise be almost daily visitors.

Along the front of the basement, partly underneath the sidewalk, illuminated by the skylights, is a space nearly 100 feet long devoted to the making up of work and filling orders. A customer visits the store: The salesman writes the order on the blank provided for that purpose; it is passed through the cashier's window, into the hands of the bookkeeping department and thence goes into a conveyor to the desk of the order clerk in the workroom below.

Being on Time.

In one of the illustrations the order clerk's desk is shown, with its equipment. A conspicuous feature is the plain-faced clock above the desk, which makes it inexcusable for any order to fail to receive attention on time. In this store it is appreciated that there is no more important detail in the flower business than being on the minute with deliveries. Down the left of the orderboard there is a special division for rush orders, those on which some special hour of delivery is designated. This section is again subdivided into six divisions of the day, so that each order must come up in ample time for attention. The main orderboard is divided according to destinations, so that the automobiles need make no unnecessary trips; in other words, so that all the orders for a given section will go out together.

At the left of the order clerk's desk is a cabinet of large, square divisions in which the completed parcels are assorted in the same manner as are the order sheets. Beyond this are locked cabinets where a large stock of ribbons is carried, the average inventory of this department being between $2,000 and $3,000, for this store is a large user of ribbons, chiffons and corsage accessories—the stems of corsage bunches are not wrapped with tinfoil in this establishment; ribbon is used instead.

At the right of the order clerk's desk is a long, zinc-covered work table, with stock tables between it and the big storage refrigerator. A large part of the basement is double-decked, to provide storage space for cut flower boxes.

It is an important detail that the workroom is wide rather than deep. The stairway from the store comes down close to the order clerk's desk, almost in the center of the long room, where waste steps will be minimized.

Facilities and Work Related.

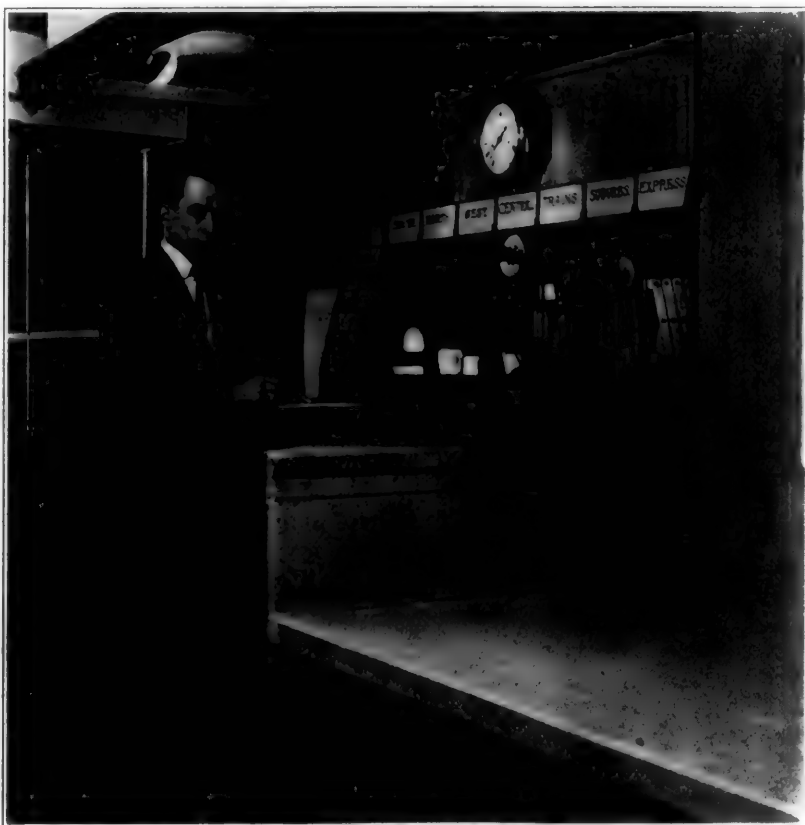

The fixtures in the workroom all were built to order. There is nothing ornate about them, yet they so apparently fulfill the purpose for which they were designed that they give the impression that sight has been lost of the fact that no customer ever comes here, or even knows the room exists. But perhaps a reason for the expenditure is a recognition of the fact that first-class work never comes from a slovenly factory; that factory, workmen and output usually seek a common level. And the Fleischman workroom is as immaculate as the store. There is a place for everything, and everything is kept in its place, in perfect order. There is nothing that can become a receptacle for refuse and each afternoon, when the orders are out, a sweeping puts the room in condition to receive critical inspection.

George W. Wienhoeber is the florist of the concern. He says that he now has facilities which will enable him to handle $1,000 of orders every day in the year without special effort and that half again as much can be handled without trouble when a specially good day comes along. The president of the Fleischman Floral Co. is B. Rubel, who is endowed with a genius for merchandising. He does not hesitate to use full page spaces in the highest priced newspaper in Chicago, nor does he hesitate at providing facilities that are the best that modern genius can devise.

ILLINOIS STATE FLORISTS.

The Illinois State Florists' Association, through its executive officers, has made arrangements for holding a flower show in the Gold Room of the Jefferson hotel, at Peoria, in connection with the society's annual convention, March 4 and 5. The exhibition will be free to the public and will be the first affair of the kind ever attempted by the state organization.

The executive committee, which includes President Charles Loveridge and Messrs. Walraven and Siebenthal, of Peoria, met recently with Chairman W. E. Hull, of the Association of Commerce committee on conventions, and made all preliminary arrangements for the entertainment of visitors to the convention.

TRANSPLANTING SMILAX.

I have 2,000 smilax just coming up. If I pot them up now, can I plant them in the beds next August, or do you think these plants will be too small at that time? I want to ship them next fall. J. G.

The young smilax should be potted off into 2¼-inch pots and later given a shift into 3-inch or 3½-inch pots. August is pretty late to plant out in the beds; your plants will have become matted with roots and have a starved appearance before that time. Try to do the planting out in beds sometime in June, and certainly not later than the early part of July. Plant in soil that is well enriched with rotted cow manure and fine bone. Put strings on the plants before they can become entangled. Give them a tolerably warm house, which need not be a strictly modern or light one. You will have a crop of well ripened strings ready to cut in the fall. C. W.

THE WESTERN ASSOCIATION.

The prospects for a good bulb show at Chicago, Friday and Saturday, February 7 and 8, are increasing daily. The idea of showing bulbs as well as flowers, while a new departure, is a good one, and should appeal to both grower and wholesaler. From 9 to 12 Saturday, the trade is cordially invited to come and inspect the exhibits and aid in the discussions of the association. Diseases and remedies will come in for their share of attention. The growing of both gladioli and dahlias has reached mammoth proportions and thousands of dollars are invested in the business, and every indication shows that the business is just in its infancy. Anything that can be offered that will aid in growing better stock, keeping it free from disease, and creating better selling and handling conditions, will be heartily welcomed. The growers are necessarily scattered, but the mails bring us all near together, and it is to be hoped that a large turn-out of the growers will be the result of the invitation. Come on these dates for a business trip to Chicago. There may be other things you may need that will help to pay expenses.

The associate members, as well as all amateur flower growers, are invited to the afternoon session Friday, as the flowers under discussion at that time will interest them. All outdoor flowers will be included in the after discussions.

The following additions and changes have been made in the program: The 4:15 discussion on new bulbs will be transferred to the evening discussion of Friday at 9 p. m. At 4:30 p. m., Friday, a paper on the dahlia, its culture, and the marketing of cut flowers, will be read by J. T. Fitchett, Janesville, Wis. At 8 a. m., Saturday, election of officers will take place and changes in the by-laws will be considered. E. S. Thompson, Sec'y.

Sylvania, O.—Word has been received from E. H. Cushman, who is on the Pacific coast, that he has purchased an orange grove of twenty-three acres at Redlands, Cal. Newspaper clippings state that the consideration was $30,000.

PLANT GROWERS' DEPARTMENT

CYCLAMEN CULTURE.

[A paper by Christ Winterich, of Defiance, O., read by Simon Humfeld before the Northern Indiana Florists' Association at Columbia City, Ind., January 15.]

The time to sow cyclamen seed varies according to when you want them in bloom. The latter part of July or the first part of August is a good time to sow in order to make good plants in fifteen to sixteen months, or by the second Christmas after the sowing. Other sowings can be made until January. Seed sown as late as January would, perhaps, with good culture and everything favorable, make strong 4-inch and 5-inch pot plants, but do not expect them to bloom as early as those from seed sown in August.

Your success in growing cyclamens depends greatly upon the strain of seed used. Always get the best seed grown, and of the highest standard, and your disappointments, at least in the flowering qualities, will be less. This I want to emphasize as of the utmost importance.

Sowing the Seeds.

We are sowing our cyclamens in flats 12x20x3 inches, inside measure, in rows one and one-half inches apart, and we drop the seeds about one-fourth of an inch apart in the rows. Of course we usually make a sowing of from 50,000 to 75,000 at a time. For a florist who only grows from 100 to several thousands, I would advise that he sow the single seeds about one inch apart each way, grow them on until the plants have a nice ball of roots established and then shift them into flats, about two to two and one-half inches apart, or into 2½-inch pots. I recommend the latter method, as they are thus handled better, and make stockier plants.

A good soil to sow in would be a loose mixture of about two-thirds leaf-mold, with some loam and sand added. This compost may do, also, for the first shift. For each successive shift add more loam and old hotbed soil. For the last two shifts we use some horn shavings or meal, mixed with the soil in the proportion of a 4-inch potful to a bushel of soil.

Set the seed flats, thinly covered with sand, on a mild hotbed with not too much ventilation, or in a greenhouse where you can keep the air moderately moist until the seeds germinate, which takes about four to five weeks. Keep them shaded and moist and increase the light gradually as the seedlings make their appearance. Loosen the soil around the plants with a label and keep the moss removed, should any form. Do this every two or three weeks, as this is essential to the growth of strong and healthy plants.

Shifting Along.

We transplant the first batch into other flats about eight to ten weeks after they germinate, planting them about one and one-half inches apart. We then set them on shelves near the glass and give them an average night temperature of about 52 to 55 degrees, with 10 degrees more heat in the daytime. Give them plenty of fresh air; never let the air become close, or the plants will weaken, and such plants are hard to get through the hot summer months. Do not shade cyclamens from the middle of October until the first part of March. Give all the light possible until you see the plants are in danger of wilting; then, with some fine sprinklings, you might have to shade them only during the hottest part of the day. A sprinkling two or three times on a hot day will help to make large bulblets, and, of course, the plants will greatly benefit by it. I use a spray that produces a fine mist, as a coarse spray would keep the plants wet and soggy, which should be avoided. The idea is to keep the small bulblets moist. This also can be accomplished by using a thin mulch of half rotted leaves. I found this excellent for such plants as fell behind the balance of the lot, and also to start 2-year-old plants on with, but this growing a cyclamen the second year should be abandoned, as they will only produce fine plants with the best of care and plenty of fertilizer.

Pot up the plants so that the bulblets are just covered after the first watering. I warn everyone not to plant too deeply, as that would make spindling plants and weak bulbs. If planted too high, the bulbs grow hard and will never make thriving plants. This is important enough in the growing of cyclamens to look after well while potting.

Hotbed and Frame Culture.

We manage to have our plants from the first sowing in 3-inch or 4-inch pots by the end of March, when they go on a mild hotbed. In the beginning keep the bed rather close, until you notice their root action. Shade them only in bright sunshine and sprinkle the plants at least once or twice a day, according to the weather. Keep the bottom heat at about 70 to 80 degrees. Gradually give more ventilation and maintain a temperature of about 55 to 65 degrees above the plants; a much warmer atmosphere will make spindling plants and a much cooler one will give them a backset. Shift whenever the pot ball is fairly well rooted. Do not let them get potbound and do not give them too large a shift. Put in about one-fifth drainage, for which washed coal ashes or coarse sand is the best material. Cyclamens, more than any other plants, enjoy clean pots. They also enjoy a mild hotbed, though this is not absolutely necessary.

A greenhouse facing to the north, and one that will not get too hot during early spring, will produce good plants, providing you maintain a moist atmosphere until you have a coldframe, which was used as a hotbed for bedding plants, ready to plunge them in, ashes being the best plunging material.

When shifting into larger pots, set the plants so that the bulb is about covered by the soil. The first watering will then settle the soil to about three-fourths or one-half the bulb. If planted too high the bulb will get hard too soon and may burst and set on the buds too early. On the other hand, when planted too deeply the plants get spindling and the flower stems rot easily.

The Commonest Mistakes.

Most of the mistakes are made in watering, by keeping the plants too wet and soggy. Let them dry out fairly well before you give another watering. This will keep the soil sweet, which is of the utmost importance in growing choice cyclamens.

The shade should not be too dense. I use sashes made out of 1½-inch strips the length of the sash, with an open space of about 1¼-inch, the entire sash 3x6 feet. These we lay over the plants so that they can be watered without lifting the shades, but they should be removed towards evening, so that the night dew can freshen the plants up and keep them short.

The last shift we usually make in August or September. It then is advisable to set the plants so that the bulb stands about one-half in the soil. This is important to the setting of the buds. The plants bloom with more flowers at one time; also, the buds are not so liable to rot off and the plants are more easily kept clean.

In the latter part of October we commence to house the plants. Up to this time we have the beds covered with mats during cold nights. Do not make the mistake of setting the plants too close together, as this is the time when the plants should have all the room you can spare them, to make shapely specimens. No shade now is required. Should the sun make it unpleasant for the plants, give them a fine sprinkling to keep them from wilting. But they should have been gradually accustomed to the bright weather while they were out in the beds.

Air Is Needed.

A free circulation of fresh air is beneficial. Water carefully; never drop the water right on the head of the plant, as it might rot the buds and leaves close to the bulb. The plants should be set over almost every two weeks. They will need more room every time you clean them out. Pull the flower and leaf stems right out; do not cut them off, as they might rot down to the bulb.

Do not try to force a cyclamen by raising the temperature, for if this is done the plants will become spindling and the flowers will be small and imperfect. The only way to help a cyclamen along in bringing it to bloom early is to give a good, bright house, with a night temperature of from 55 degrees to not above 60 degrees, with some ventilation to give a good circulation of air around the plants. Some growers set the plants on inverted pots to get the latter result.

Should it be desired to hold them back until late in spring, or for Easter, Field of Liliu magnificum in Japan, Photographed July 1, 1912.

it can be done by giving them as low a temperature as 42 degrees.

After the plants are well rooted in their blooming pots, it is beneficial to water them with cow manure and soot water, to give them the finishing touches of glossy foliage and larger flowers, with a good color.

Clearing Out the Insect Pests.

As to insects, the green fly and thrips are the only ones that injure cyclamens. The green fly is easily kept in check by using the nicotine solution regularly once a week. It is advisable not to make the solution too strong, as it may burn the leaves and spot the flowers. The thrips is bothersome if it gets a hold and may spoil the whole year's work if not attended to at once with a solution of sugar and Paris green. Here is the formula: Take at the rate of five pounds of brown sugar to one pound of Paris green; mix dry; run through a fine screen to take out lumps. To apply: take two ounces of the mixture to two gallons of water and spray in the afternoon, late, and, if clear the next day, syringe off to prevent the leaves burning. If used once a week it will keep the plants free from thrips. It is also sure death to them on the carnations.

To grow good cyclamens they must never be neglected in any way. Common sense should be used in growing them and if a good strain of seed is procured they should be among the most profitable plants, as well as the favorite of both the grower and his customers.

LILIUM MAGNIFICUM.

The accompanying illustration is prepared from a photograph of a field of Liliu magnificum made near Yokohama, Japan, July 1 of last year. The field, which Ralph M. Ward says is one of the largest of the variety grown last season, was located on the top of the hill some distance south of Yokohama. Mr. Ward, who made a trip to Japan last summer, says he does not believe the trade will ever again see magnificum as cheap as it has been during the last few years. He says that the crop this year was shorter than anticipated and that the demand for the variety is increasing steadily, as it has good commercial value, flowering profusely and yielding a good return in the market. It is a flower that has many uses in retail work.

MISBRANDED INSECTICIDES.

In giving notice of judgments under the insecticide act, the U. S. Department of Agriculture includes one which will be of interest to florists. The circular is signed by W. M. Hayes, acting Secretary of Agriculture, and is as follows:

"On July 29, 1912, the United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Michigan, acting upon a report by the Secretary of Agriculture, filed information in the District Court of the United States for said district against F. A. Thompson & Co., Detroit, Mich., a corporation, alleging shipment and delivery for shipment on May 27, 1911, from Detroit, in the State of Michigan, to Indianapolis, in the State of Indiana, of a quantity of an insecticide, known as 'To-Bak-Ine Liquid Poison,' which was misbranded within the meaning of the Insecticide Act of 1910. The article in question was packed in cans or tins labeled as follows: 'To-Bak-Ine Liquid Poison. One Pint size. 120 teaspoonfuls. Price $2.00. Positively kills green and black fly, mealy bug, red spider, thrips or any insects on flowers, plants, trees, vegetables, etc., also parasites on domestic animals of all kinds. * * * Prepared only by the Detroit

"Analysis, examination, and efficiency tests of samples from the said article in the United States Department of Agriculture showed that the cans or tins of the articles in question contained less than one pint; that the article consisted partially of water, an inert substance, which does not prevent, destroy, repel or mitigate insects; and that the article was not effective in killing mealy bug, red spider, or 'any insects on flowers, plants, trees, vegetables, etc.,' nor 'parasites on domestic animals of all kinds.' Misbranding within the meaning of section 8 of the Insecticide Act of 1910 was alleged in that the labels on the cans or tins containing the article were false or misleading for the reason that they bore the statement 'One pint,' whereas in truth and in fact the said cans or tins contained less than one pint of the article; for the reason that they bore the statement that the article would kill mealy bug, red spider, or any insects that infest flowers, plants, trees, vegetables, etc., also parasites on domestic animals of all kinds, whereas in truth and in fact the article was not effective in killing mealy bug, was not effective in killing red spider, and was not effective in killing parasites on domestic animals of all kinds; and in that the article consisted partially of an inert substance, namely, water, which does not prevent, destroy, repel, or mitigate insects, and neither the name nor percentage amount of the inert ingredient, water, nor the name and percentage amount of each and every ingredient of the insecticide having insecticidal properties and the total percentage of inert ingredients present, were stated on the label.

"The cause coming on to be heard on August 6, 1912, F. A. Thompson & Co. entered an appearance and filed a plea of nolo contendere, and on the same day the court imposed a fine of $25."

The trade always has understood that the nicotine products in general use are approximately sixty per cent water, the pure nicotine not being useful for insecticides, as it will not mix with water under the usual conditions. Consequently, the insecticide manufacturers make the solution, after which it can be further diluted at the user's pleasure.

popularity, and no one can go far wrong in stocking up heavily on them. For the benefit of those who may not be acquainted with the best bedding varieties, and who may require to buy stock, I give the names of some of proven merit: Beaute Poitevine, semi-double, a fine light salmon variety; S. A. Nutt, more grown than any other dark red variety; Marquise de Castellane, reddish crimson, fine trusses; Mme. Jaulin, peach pink with white border; Jean Viaud, bright mauve rose; Mme. Buchner, pure white; Countess de Harcourt, pure white, grand trusses; Alphonse Ricard, bright vermillion, a great favorite; Jean Oberle, peach pink, lighter edge; La Favorite, a grand white; Mrs. Lawrence, salmon pink, and Mme. Landry, salmon apricot, white eye. The foregoing are a safe, reliable lot of doubles.

In singles a few varieties of excellence are: Snowdrop, pure white; Paul Crampel, bright vermillion scarlet; Jacquerie, crimson scarlet, large trusses; Rosalda, rich pink, splendid constitution, immense trusses; Granville, rose pink, white blotches on upper petals; Mrs. E. Rawson, bright scarlet; Tiffin, rich scarlet, fine bedder, and Claire Freuit, huge trusses, light rose, veined with rosy salmon and shaded with delicate pink, an attractive and desirable sort introduced in 1908.

AMERICAN BEAUTY GERANIUM.

John Bauscher, who has something over 100,000 feet of glass at Freeport, Ill., and who does a large business in bedding plants, thinks that his lucky star was in the ascendant the day he discovered in one of his novelty collections the geranium he now calls American Beauty. It struck him as being such a good thing that he has been busy working up stock for several seasons. He has been using it on his local trade and claims it to be one of the STOCK FOR BEDDING.

Propagation is in Order.

The work of propagation of geraniums should now be pushed right ahead. The sand in the cutting bench is steadily warm at this season and the percentage of loss from damping off should be small. If the cuttings are inserted singly in 1½-inch or 2-inch pots, using sandy loam, and stood on a bench in the full sun where they can also have some bottom heat, they should be making roots within a month. This latter plan entails somewhat more work, but it is really the best, as the cuttings are liable to be left too long in the propagating benches, and of course when lifted many roots are destroyed.

It will be necessary to keep a sharp watch on the plants now in pots. It is easy to spoil them by neglecting necessary potting. I do not believe in large shifts. A plant put into a 4-inch pot from a 2-inch, or a 2½-inch size, may do well if carefully watered, but it would be more certain to thrive if first potted into the 3-inch size. A common error is to give generous shifts, the idea, of course, being to economize on labor. Few plants, and those only the most vigorous growers, will succeed under this treatment. Try, for instance, moving 3-inch stock of primulas, cyclamens, calceolarias, or fibrous-rooted begonias into 6-inch pots and you will find that plants given an intermediate shift easily beat them in vigor.

Rapid Growth Comes Now.

Geraniums are now making quite rapid growth and some spacing out on the benches will frequently be needed or much of the lower foliage will be lost. When spreading them out, be sure to remove dead and decaying leaves and weeds, and scratch over the surface soil of any requiring it. Geraniums prefer a dry, airy house and should not have their foliage sprayed over. This makes the leaves soft and they prove an easier prey to bacteria. Geraniums are not semi-aquatics and it is one of the greatest mistakes made by some growers to keep the soil constantly damp. The moister they are kept at the root, the ranker and softer will their growth be, but it will always be at the expense of flowers. Of course, flowers are not needed now, but continue this overwatering and you will be wondering in spring why your plants do not bloom as they should.

Always avoid, also, a soil containing fresh manure, and for that matter manure should be left out altogether unless old and well decayed. Spent mushroom manure is serviceable and some fine bone should always be added at the final potting. This builds up a short, stocky growth which will give an abundance of flowers.

While increasing the stock of zonal bedding varieties, do not overlook the popular scented-leaved kinds. Every purchaser each year wants a few of these, and the old rose, apple, lemon, nutmeg and similar sorts are useful not only for their delicious fragrance in the gardens, but the individual leaves are used considerably as a background for small boutonnières and finger bowls, and the shoots arranged in bowls impart a refreshing odor to the living-room; therefore work up a good stock of these.

Some Dependable Varieties.

Geraniums are still easily far in the lead of all other bedding plants in best all-around geraniums he ever has handled. He named it American Beauty because the color of the flower is almost identically the color of the rose. The accompanying illustration shows the habit of the plant. It is a semi-double variety. In his bedding work he has found it a free and continuous bloomer, and says its color is not affected by extremes of weather.

New Geranium American Beauty.

LADIES' S. A. F.

Mrs. Frank H. Traendly, president of the Ladies' Society of American Florists, has appointed three directors to serve two years, as follows: Mrs. W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; Mrs. C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee, Wis.; Mrs. Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.

The following committees also have been appointed to serve at New York and Minneapolis:

Reception—Miss A. M. O'Mara, chairman; Mrs. J. C. Vaughan, Miss Matilda Meinhardt, Mrs. James W. Boone, Mrs. Chas. Critchell.

Theater—Mrs. Chas. H. Maynard, chairman; Mrs. U. J. Virgin, Mrs. B. Hammond Tracy, Mrs. Walter F. Sheridan, Mrs. Julius Roehrs, Jr.

Working—Mrs. J. Manda, chairman; Mrs. E. M. Bullock, Mrs. J. S. Wilson, Mrs. Geo. Cooke, Mrs. J. Donaldson.

BOSTON.

The Market.

January has proved to be a month of remarkable mildness and it is surprising, under the conditions through which we are passing, that business has held up so well. Both roses and carnations seem to be somewhat off crop with most growers. Roses in particular have suffered from the unusual spell of dampness and high temperature and are much lacking in substance. The call for short-stemmed stock continues good, but prices on the better grades are not quite so satisfactory. Retailers are finding Prince de Bulgarie popular, probably because, like Mrs. Russell, it is yet rather scarce. White Killarneys are moving rather better than the colored ones for funeral work. Of the yellows, Ward sells the best.

Carnations are more plentiful and show some decline in price. Violets have also taken quite a little drop. Sweet peas and yellow marguerites sell well. Tulips, double and single daffodils and Dutch hyacinths are now good. In tulips Thomas Moore, Yellow Prince and La Reine are leaders and sell well. There is still an abundance of Paper Whites and Romans. Freesia continues in good supply. Of lilies the supply is adequate. Cattleyas are in oversupply and gardenias are more abundant. Valley has been moving quite well. Bachelor's buttons sell well among small miscellaneous flowers, and snapdragon cleans up quickly. The call for asparagus has been good.

Club Meeting.

Ladies' night and installation of officers attracted an attendance of over 300 to the opening meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club for 1913, January 20. The newly elected officers were each given an opportunity to make short addresses. President Kennedy made a vigorous speech, which was heartily applauded, as did H. H. Bartsch, the new vice-president. Messrs.

"WHO'S WHO—AND WHY"

Miss Gusta Alost.

SOME years ago The Review ran a series of sketches entitled "The Men We Meet"; in the present instance let the title stand amended: "The Women We Would Like to Meet." Miss Gusta Alost is one of the well known and popular florists of New Orleans, a city famous for the beauty of its women. She is secretary of the Rose Villa Nursery Co., of which her father, J. A. Alost, is president, and her sister, Miss Therese Alost, is treasurer. The sisters are said to be the first lady growers of chrysanthemums in their neighborhood and to have made a notable success in their chosen occupation.

P. M. Miller, W. C. Rust, W. J. Patterson and R. S. Edgar all pledged themselves to work loyally during the year. Treasurer Peter Fisher's report showed the club's finances to be in good shape, receipts for 1912 dues being the largest on record. Secretary W. N. Craig stated that the largest attendance at a meeting in 1912 was 340; average attendance for the year, 175. Awards made by the exhibits committee during the year included four reports of superior merit, thirteen reports of merit, three honorable mentions and thirty-eight votes of thanks. Forty-eight new members were admitted in 1912. Five new members were elected to start 1913.

In support of the National Flower Show the club voted $50, and a like amount to the Sweet Pea Society.

Following the regular business, which was shortened somewhat, a pleasing entertainment was given, the artists including James Singer, Miss Singer, Miss Bews and Neill Miller. James Singer responded to three enthusiastic encores. After a collation had been served, dancing was enjoyed until midnight to the strains of Hutchins' orchestra. The floor directors were P. M. Miller, Joshua Lawson and W. J. Patterson.

Exhibits included Cymbidium Wig-anianum, from Duncan Finlayson, awarded a report of merit; Carnation Princess Dagmar, from M. A. Patten & Co., awarded a report of superior merit; Freesia Purity, from A. A. Thorndike, awarded a vote of thanks.

Various Notes.

J. Streiferd & Son, of Weymouth, are marketing some fine primulas. They have a fine lot of acacias and genistas for Easter, including many standards. In addition to roses, now somewhat off crop, they have nice lots of mignonette and snapdragon.

The Halifax Garden Co. has a heavy pick of carnations. Mr. Lenk still grows Enchantress in quantity, as it does finely in his soil. He expects next season to drop cucumbers and plant roses in their stead.

J. J. Fisher, for some years with

W. W. Edgar Co., as salesman, has left their employ and is now with A. M. Davenport, Watertown.

W. H. Elliott continues to cut large quantities of fine Christie Miller roses. F. H. Houghton speaks highly of this variety for retailing. Mr. Elliott's Wards are fine. He is not favorably impressed with Killarney Queen, Double White Killarney and Sunburst. He expects the coming season to plant quite a few carnations, which he can use in his shipping trade.

Work on the new wholesale flower market is being pushed as rapidly as possible. It is now hoped to have it in readiness about the middle of February.

Willow Hill Greenhouses are sending in well flowered standard and bush genistas.

Israel Quint, of Roxbury, is strong on Dutch hyacinths, double daffodils and other bulbous stock.

Frank Bornay, of Wellesley, is this season having good success with Beacon, White Wonder and Enchantress carnations.

There are many visitors these days to Thomas Roland's mammoth sweet pea house at Revere, now in splendid bloom. Mr. Roland has a grand lot of acacias and other hard-wooded plants for the National Flower Show.

Lively & Bond, of Holbrook, in addition to carnations, are now having a heavy cut of single and double daffodils, Paper Whites and other bulbous flowers.

Carbone, on Boylston street, has this week a grand show of Azalea mollis in one of his big show windows.

M. B. Dallachie, of Newton Center, is one of the decreasing number of successful growers of double violets. His Campbells this season are good.

January has proved a rather extraordinary month. The first seventeen days showed 170 degrees excess temperature. Last year the same days showed a deficiency of 155 degrees.

The Scituate Greenhouses, of Scituate, Mass., are having good success now with snapdragons. They have these in several colors and all sell well. R. O. Kimball, of Waban, has a pink variety, which moves quickly.

Wm. A. McAlpine now handles the entire cut of carnations, mignonette and other flowers grown by Frank P. Putnam, of North Tewksbury.

The Boston Cut Flower Co., on Bromfield street, is always a hive of industry. Mr. Rosenthal reports funeral work as good and his casket shower sprays are often asked for.

Paine Bros., of Randolph, now have a heavy lot of bulbous stock. Their La Reine and Yellow Prince tulips and single and double daffodils are of top notch quality.

J. J. Casey, of the Rosery, on Boylston street, reports business as good this winter. The new Copley Plaza hotel is nearly opposite his place, and this brings much additional trade.

John McFarland's Easter lilies are coming along in good shape and will be in flower in season. He continues to have a fine daily cut of valley. He had on exhibition January 18 a beautiful hybrid cattleya, for which he received a silver medal a year ago.

S. J. Goddard showed some flowers of the new English carnation, Lady Northcliffe, last week at the Boston Flower Exchange. This is of a beautiful salmon pink color, just the color the market needs. Mr. Goddard has one or two other English sorts under trial. W. N. Craig.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

A scarcity of roses, especially of the lower grades, has been the feature of the wholesale cut flower market during the last week. This has held the market steady, but its influence in behalf of other varieties has not been felt and carnations had a bad week, the selected stock, including the novelties, falling to 3 cents, and most of the arrivals declining to 2 cents and even at times to as low as $10 per thousand. American Beauties were scarce and high up to last week's end, a top quotation of 75 cents being reached for the selected. Nothing of value fell below 50 cents, the limited arrivals being spoken for in advance. The warm, sunny weather will increase the shipments and doubtless restore normal conditions. Of other roses there is no shortage, except of novelties; of these there is never a surplus. The lower grades of the old varieties were in wide demand all the week and 3 cents was the general quotation. Rose shipments are expected to increase heavily before the week is over.

There seems to be an oversupply of orchids; prices are low and unsteady. For valley 4 cents is the extreme quotation and only the best of the stock reaches this figure, most of it selling at from 3 cents down. There is no shortage. Lilies are holding well at 6 to 8 cents. Gardenias are more abundant and lower. Callas are plentiful, and $1.50 per dozen is quoted for the top grade. There is an abundance of narcissi, freesias, wallflowers, stocks, lilac, daisies and daffodils. Violets must be extra good to command 35 cents per hundred; any accumulations go to the department stores at the buyer's figures, which are unmentionable. An occasional street merchant is seen dodging the police and helping to distribute the surplus.

Various Notes.

The weekly meetings of the National Flower Show Committees grow in interest and importance as the great exhibition draws near. Everything promises success.

The Horticultural Society of New York will hold its first exhibition of the year Saturday, January 25, at the American Museum of Natural History, Central Park West and Seventy-seventh street, from 1 to 5 p. m. The exhibits will be orchids and carnations. A lecture will be delivered at 4 p. m. by George T. Powell, on "The Educational and Financial Importance of Horticulture to the Community."

The horticultural banquets continue. January 21 the annual effervescence occurred at Red Bank, N. J., and on Thursday evening Glen Cove will celebrate, preceded by a bowling match between the Nassau county and Westchester societies. Tuesday, January 28, the annual dinner of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society will be held at Morristown, N. J. Wednesday, January 29, the Oyster Bay Society will enjoy its initial banquet. The same evening the New York and New Jersey plant growers will celebrate at the Hotel Martin in New York city and Thursday, January 30, the Yonkers Horticultural Society will hold its fourth annual banquet at the Park Hill Inn.

The Oyster Bay Horticultural Society will inaugurate an interesting contest for prizes in order to interest school children in the study of horticulture this year, through its subsidiary garden association.

The National Flower Show committee has decided to receive bids for the privilege of selling plants and flowers during the exhibition April 5 to 12, 150 square feet of space being provided free. Bids will be opened February 15.

L. B. Coddington is back from his trip to Panama, L. A. Noe is home from Florida and Sydney Wertheimer from Bermuda.

The plantmen are exceedingly busy because of the early Easter. March 23 is only eight weeks distant.

Ed. Roehrs, of the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, who has been living for some time on his ranch in New Mexico, is visiting the old folks at home.

W. A. Manda, of West Orange, is making his annual trip to Europe.

David Adam, formerly with Thornburn & Co., and lately with H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, has returned to New York and is now one of the force of Peter Henderson & Co.

W. E. Marshall is away in the west, one of many in that branch of the trade now scouring the country for the spring orders with great success.

Mrs. Meissner and her son have opened a branch retail store at 233 Kingston avenue, Brooklyn.

Alexander McConnell had the decorations for the wedding of Helen Gould at Tarrytown, January 22, probably the most notable job of the season.

J. Austin Shaw.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Business last week was quite good and there was little change in prices over previous quotations. For the first time since last winter there are not enough roses to go around, but this condition is counteracted by the exceptionally heavy supply of carnations, which are in full crop. Sweet peas are also in full crop; in fact, there seems to be no limit to the supply. However, the demand is heavy enough to enable the dealers to clean up nicely each day. Easter lilies are plentiful and snapdragons, daisies and callas are also in good supply. Lilacs, while fairly plentiful, are not coming to the market in sufficient quantities to meet all calls for them.

Fine primroses, begonias, cyclamens and azaleas are to be seen in the stores.

Various Notes.

The local trade is greatly disappointed at the stand taken by President-elect Wilson as regards the holding of the inaugural ball. A number of florists and other business men have voiced their sentiments in the columns of the public press. A knowledge of trade conditions makes explanation unnecessary.

Henry Diedrich, of Anacostia, was last week the victim of what is believed to have been a mad dog. While walking along Alabama avenue he was set upon by a large pointer, which bit him in the left hand.

A novel design was resorted to last week by George Cooke, at the Mac-Veagh dinner. Pieces of galvanized wire four feet in length were twisted together with loops at intervals. These were then arched and upon them were laid 500 wired roses, with the blossoms bent upward. This had the appearance of a huge quantity of flowers gleaned from a garden and strewn on the table, something out of the ordinary.

Among the visitors last week were Edward J. Fancourt, of S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.; Robert Shoch, of M. Rice
Co., and J. A. Goudy, with H. A. Dreer, all of Philadelphia. C. L. L.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

The weather does not encourage trade; consequently flowers are only used whenever they are an absolute necessity. The death rate was not so heavy last week, and the quantity of flowers consumed in funeral work did not compare with the week previous.
There were few weddings, parties or receptions.

It is quite evident that carnations are becoming more plentiful, as some retailed as low as 35 cents a dozen last week. The damp weather is hard on them, as they come in soft and go to pieces in a few days. There is also an abundance of roses on the market, but they are not so plentiful as the carnations. Lilies seem to be scarce everywhere. Bulbous stock is becoming more plentiful every day; even tulips are now added to the list of varieties.

Azaleas, primroses, cyclamens, etc., sell as well as anything else.

Various Notes.

Everything in the greenhouses of W. W. Horlacher is in a flourishing condition, one of the prettiest sights being his orchid house, in which he has some fine cattleyas in bloom.

Mrs. Henry Walters is quite seriously ill. Mr. Walters is the efficient designer at John Bochner's greenhouses.

Mrs. Claude Leslie entertained about seventy of her friends in honor of her birthday January 13.

Leo Asher spent the week's end at Indianapolis.

Walter Matthews is quite ill with the grip.

Florence Phebus is on the sick list.

Warren G. Matthews, who was confined to his home last week with a severe attack of quinsy, is again able to be on duty.

E. E. Schaefer, of the Advance Floral Co., is having trouble with water, which has got into his boiler pit.

The Edgemont Floral Co. reports business entirely satisfactory since its opening, which was a month ago.

The Heiss Co. had a big wedding decoration last week, which consisted of bouquets for the bride, four bridesmaids, a patron of honor and a basket for the ring bearer; also the home and church decorations. The large plate glass window in the Main street store was broken recently.

Mrs. J. W. Rodgers and daughter, Elizabeth, of Monroe, O., spent a few days of last week with Mr. Rodgers, who is obliged to carry his arm in a sling, on account of blood poisoning in his hand.

The Dayton Floral Co. has been successful in securing the store adjoining its Third street establishment in the Phillips Hotel building. The partition will be torn out and the stores remodeled. R. A. L.

ATLANTA, GA.

January has been notable for the large quantity of funeral work called for.

The Atlanta Floral Co. has had two weeks of active business. Mr. Borg reports that sales have exceeded those of any previous season.

Wachendorf Bros. are so gratified with their success that they are adding another house. They have remodeled their office, macadamized their walks and drives, and under a thorough and intelligent management present a well-equipped establishment.

Mr. Matthiessen, of the Ponce de Leon Floral Co., has supplied quantities of valley, Easter lilies and narcissi to the wholesale trade.

The Alto-Vista Floral Co. reports a fine business during the entire month of December, with a steady increase from the first of the month into January. Their decorative pots, attractively arranged for the holiday trade, sold well.

At Dahl's they express themselves as being gratified with their share of the business, having enough blooms to meet all orders.

The West View Floral Co. has quite a number of carnation houses, which were in fine shape when a visit was recently paid the plant. The cyclamens were excellent and in full bloom. A bunch of callas was in splendid condition. M. B. W.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting January 15, at Kolb's German Tavern. Herman Doescher presided and Secretary Panter was at his desk. There was a larger attendance than for some months. Some elegant exhibits, as well as a highly interesting discussion, aroused the interest of all.

A resolution was adopted to instruct the secretary to apply to the Southern Pan-American Fair for the stock subscribed by the association, so as to put it to practical use.

The enormous amount of money sent north during the whole year for carnations brought forth a lively and interesting discussion, during which J. A.
Newsham, Harry Dressel and Richard Eichling expressed their views. The constant humidity and the hot spells from September to May were considered the greatest drawbacks to the successful culture of the best paying varieties of carnations in this section of the country. A fortune awaits the person who can solve these difficulties.

C. R. Felton's application for membership was received, to be acted upon at the next regular meeting.

H. Dressel, rose grower for the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., exhibited a vase of Radiance roses with 4-foot stems. The perfection of bloom and foliage would have done credit to any northern grower.

A Visit to Newsham's.

J. A. Newsham, the local orchid specialist, extended an invitation to the members of the New Orleans Horticultural Society, at the January meeting, to visit his place. An invitation to the public in general was also issued.

The visiting members of the society, as well as the large number of other visitors, were treated to such a gorgeous display of Cattleya Trianae as they had probably never beheld until then. The large show case was a veritable bower of elegant specimen plants in full bloom, some of them bearing five flowers to the stem. One house, 150 feet long, was one mass of Trianae in bloom, about 1,800 flowers, all of perfect size and color. In another house was a bench of Oncidium splendidum, with about 1,000 flower spikes in bud, and in another was a bench of Cypripedium insigne, while still other varieties gave promise of a fine crop in the near future.

Mr. Newsham filled, January 16, probably one of the largest single orders for orchids in the United States, when he delivered 500 corsage bouquets, made of Cattleya Trianae, to the United Fruit Co., to be distributed to the ladies attending a reception in honor of the Western Fruit Growers' Association, in session here at that time.

Mr. Newsham's colleagues and the public in general bestowed upon him great praise for his successful efforts in orchid culture in the south. R. E.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Last week's market proved, at the best, to be only a fair one. Many times some good stock had to be sacrificed in order to move it. The average price was ordinary. Shipping business is good.

The supply of Beauties was just about taken up by the call for them.
Pink roses, particularly Killarney, sold fairly well all the week. Red at times accumulated. White roses never cleaned up. The medium stock sold the best.
The best sellers in the market right now, relative to supply, are Easter and calla lilies, choice sweet peas, daffodils, tulips and single violets. All of these are enjoying a good call and it is not often that any of them accumulate to a great extent. Carnations continue in large supply. They sold well at the opening and at the close of last week, but during the interim the sale was only fairly good. The prices continue low. Paper White narcissi are a glut.
Double violets, valley and orchids find only an ordinary market. Novelties, such as forget-me-not, mignonette, etc., find a good market. The supply of green goods of every kind is adequate.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell received large shipments of elegant sweet peas last week, which sold well.

Al. Heckman, of the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange, is again at his desk.
In order to oblige a friend, he joined a suit club and won out on the first drawing.

E. G. Gillett spent part of last week in Springfield, O., attending the funeral of his uncle.

George Klotter's mignonette has been selling at sight at L. H. Kyrk's.

The marriage of Miss Clara Mack, daughter of Ernst Mack, and Otto R.
Keller was solemnized January 16.

The recent high water was up over some of the benches at both Henry Floeter's and Conrad Schepp's plants. Fortunately, however, the warm weather minimized their loss.

Fred Backmeier was on the sick list for several days last week, with a severe attack of grip.

Peter Weiland says his jonquils have been selling up easily each day.

J. A. Peterson & Sons have some elegant houses of primulas and cyclamens. Their force has already potted the first large lot of rooted cuttings of begonias.

Visitors: Chas. Steidle, of E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.; Ellis Woodworth, representing the Sefton Co.; Frank Farney, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia; Sam Seligman, of Wertheimer Bros., New York; L. A. Fennel, of Cynthiana, Ky.; Robert Spero, representing Charles Finn & Co., New York; A. Miller, of Henderson & Co., Chicago, and Mr. Fulle, of Richmond, Ind.

OBITUARY.

Christian Soltau.

Christian Soltau, a pioneer florist of Jersey City, N. J., died at his home, 199 Grant avenue, January 13, at the age of 82 years. Retiring from the silk importing business in New York city many years ago, Mr. Soltau became a florist in Jersey City. He is survived by six sons and one daughter. He was succeeded in business some years ago by B. Soltau.

A. H. Chadbourne.

A. H. Chadbourne, of the nursery firm of A. H. Chadbourne & Co., Worcester, Mass., died recently at his home in that city. Besides his Worcester headquarters, he had grounds on Lyceum street, Geneva, N. Y., and he had a wide acquaintance in both localities.

B. Susuki.

B. Susuki, well known to the trade throughout the United States, died suddenly in Japan, December 13, 1912. For a number of years he was connected with the Yokohama Nursery Co., New York, and became well liked among both seedsmen and florists.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Oyster Bay Horticultural Society was held in the Board of Trade rooms, January 17. Vice-president Jos. Robinson occupied the chair. The dinner committee reported that all the necessary arrangements had been made to have the dinner at Mr. Rothman's East Norwich hotel, January 29, at 7 p. m. Mr. Rothman's motor bus will meet all trains and convey guests to and from Oyster Bay free of charge. The secretary reported a good advance sale of tickets and a good time for all is anticipated.

A. G. Hodenpyle, of Locust Valley, was elected to honorary membership, and Frank Carson and Milmot White to active membership.

Messrs. A. Walker, F. Blowers and John Sorosick acted as judges and their decision was as follows: For basket of chicory, F. Petroccia was awarded the club's certificate and F. Kyle was awarded honorable mention. The gentlemen gave interesting talks on the various ways in which they grew their exhibits.

Duncan Beaton was appointed to act on the executive committee for 1913. F. Blowers stated he would give a lecture on fruit and outdoor grape culture at the next meeting.

J. T. Ingram, Sec'y.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Business in the last week has been none too good. The weather conditions were more like those of late spring than midwinter. Roses are considerably off crop, with the exception of possibly three or four consignors at the most. There are few good roses coming to this market. Carnations are in excellent condition and it is anticipated that there will be a good supply for the rest of the season. A visit to the various growers indicates that all are aware of the fact that Easter this year is considerably earlier than usual, at least judging from the looks of their Easter plants.

Various Notes.

Knoble Bros. did something unusual in the way of advertising by taking an entire page in colors in the Sunday Plaindealer.

Among recent visitors in town, aside from the many Dutch bulb salesmen, have been Martin Renkauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co.; Frank Farney, of the Rice Co.; Milton Alexander, of Lion & Co., and James Smith, of William Boas Co.

It is with a great deal of regret that we report the death of Francis Asbury Friedley, father of Frank Friedley, superintendent for the J. M. Gasser Co., January 16. Mr. Friedley was taken violently ill with pains in his head. This was about 8:30 in the morning, while he was at work in the greenhouse. He was immediately removed to his residence, but never regained consciousness and expired at 4:30 p. m. Death was due to a rupture of a blood vessel in the brain. Funeral services were held January 19 from the family residence. The local florists attended the funeral in a body. It was easy to recognize the high esteem in which Mr. Friedley was held by his many friends if floral tributes are indications. There were many offerings and of the costliest varieties, solid wreaths with clusters of orchids and valley predominating. It surely must be a great source of comfort to the bereaved to receive such tokens and to know that their friends are really friends in need.

PRINCETON, ILL.

The W. E. Trimble Greenhouse Co., through its foreman, George H. Jennings, reports a rushing business in all three branches of the trade, cut flowers, pot plants and rooted cuttings. The Rock Island dining car system increased its order from 65,000 roses and carnations to 91,000, and up to date the only complaint is "The carnations are too long." Fred Robinson, of Columbus, O., John Lindgren and E. Hickman each have a rose section to take charge of. Messrs. Henry and Carl Dumke, who were formerly with the Chicago Carnation Co., of Joliet, have charge of the carnation sections and are making good. Wm. H. Ross, of Greenwood, Ind., and F. H. Hanson will have charge of the rooted cutting and pot plant ranges.

Gilbert Hennessey, of La Porte, Ind., who is a specialist on vegetable plants and pot tomatoes for forcing, has charge of 200 hotbed sashes. Just now this company is taking advantage of the parcel post and moving goods from all departments during this warm weather at quite a saving to the customers. The senior member of this firm, Wm. C. Trimble, is 82 years old and takes as much interest in the business as he did in former years.

NORTHERN INDIANA FLORISTS.

The Northern Indiana Florists' Association met in regular session at the New Clayton hotel, Columbia City, Ind., January 15. The morning was spent in visiting the greenhouses and arranging the exhibits. Dinner was served at 12:30, after which the regular business session was held, J. D. Connor, Jr., the president, occupying the chair. A discussion as to the advisability of holding a flower show was held, but the matter was dropped as undesirable at present.

Having received numerous invitations to meet with the Indiana State Florists' Association, after free discussion it was decided to invite the state organization to meet with Northern Indiana Association at the next meeting, which will be held in Portland, April 16. The president was instructed to appoint a committee of two to confer with a like committee from the State Association to arrange for future joint meetings. The committee consists of A. J. Wagoner, Columbia City, and N. N. Dederick, of Warsaw.

A paper prepared by Christ Winterich, of Defiance, O., on "Cyclamen Culture," was read and received with much favorable comment.

The committee on exhibits reported as follows:

Christ Winterich, Defiance, O., sent a fine display of cyclamens and some excellent primulas.

Harry White, North Manchester, Ind., showed fine 8-inch cyclamens, Boston ferns and Asparagus plumosus. He also had one vase each of Pink Delight, White Enchantress and Enchantress, color and flowers good, and one vase of Bride roses.

The Wagoner Floral Co. had a vase of White Perfection.

W. Frank & Sons, of Portland, staged a vase each of Killarney and White Killarney roses, exceptionally fine; also a vase each of May Day and Mrs. C. W. Ward carnations, fine in color, form and stem; also seedling which promises to be a coming carnation for commercial purposes.

The Chicago Carnation Co. showed a vase of its new red, The Herald, the flower good, stem strong and color beautiful.

The Johnson Floral Co., Kendallville, displayed gladiolus bulbs and Dracena indivisa.

Wm. Terrell & Son staged a vase of fine White Enchantress.

Mt. Gilead Pottery Co. showed samples of pots.

The A. L. Randall Co. exhibited white and purple ruscus and a large line of florists' supplies.

A. A. Arnold showed a large line of cut flower boxes.

Simon Humfeld, of Muncie, exhibited a new mole trap.

At this meeting seven new members were added. A. J. Wagoner, Sec'y.

INDIANA FLORISTS MEET.

The annual meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association was held in the Commercial Club, Indianapolis, January 14, with about forty members present. From the standpoint of exhibits and attendance this was one of the best meetings the association has had. The following officers were elected:

President—W. W. Coles, of Kokomo.

First vice-president—John Hartje, Indianapolis.

Second vice-president—W. J. Vesey, Jr., Fort Wayne.

Secretary—Oliver Steinkamp, Indianapolis.

Treasurer—H. L. Wiegand, Indianapolis.

One of the topics before the meeting was whether the association should have four instead of twelve meetings a year. After much discussion it was decided to let it stand as it always has been, twelve meetings a year. An invitation by Theodore Dörner to hold the February meeting at the Dörner establishment, in Lafayette, was accepted. Mr. Dörner stated that the carnations were never in better shape; also that they have 12,000 seedling carnations in the bench at this time. Stuart & Haugh's invitation to meet in Anderson in March also was accepted, as was Mr. Vesey's invitation to meet in Fort Wayne in April. The meeting was followed by a banquet.

There was an unusually good lot of exhibits. W. J. Vesey, Jr., Paul O. Tauer and W. W. Coles were appointed to judge them and submitted the following report:

Stuart & Haugh, of Anderson, showed a white carnation named Merry Go Round, a fair flower, stem and calyx; also White Enchantress, Winter Cheer, Rose-pink Enchantress and Washington, excellent stems and colors, flowers of good size.

The E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, showed Carnation Commodore, red, color and stem very good; flowers appeared to have been picked prematurely.

Baur & Steinkamp, of Indianapolis, showed Carnation St. Nicholas, color, size and stem excellent; also Carnation Radiance, color and size extra good; flowers held up by an exceedingly good stem; would say it is good commercially. Some good vases of Rose-pink Enchantress, Enchantress and Dorothy Gordon were shown by this firm, also Shasta, a good fringed white.

Scott Bros., of Elmsford, N. Y., sent British Triumph, arrived in poor condition; also Lady Northcliffe, pink, color and stem good, but flower small; also William Eccles, red, arrived in poor condition, although from appearances it must be a good carnation, as it has an extra strong stem, good calyx and size.

Hartje & Elder, of Indianapolis, staged the best display of carnations, consisting of some exceedingly fine White Enchantress.

The Chicago Carnation Co., Chicago, Ill., showed The Herald, deep red, good stem and color.

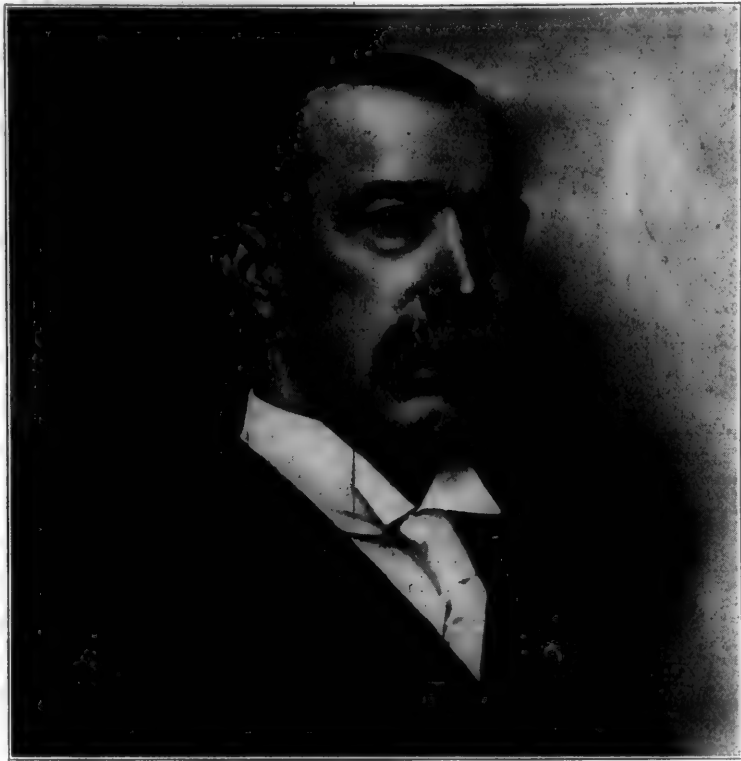

F. Dörner & Sons Co., Lafayette, showed seedling No. 271, a flesh-pink of excellent texture, stem, calyx and ideal form, having the appearance of a good commercial variety; also Yellow Prince, an exceedingly good yellow carnation; also seedling No. 31, the best cerise pink that has come under our notice; also Yellowstone, good color, calyx and stem; also seedling No. 188, deep flesh color, extra large in size, and we consider it the best carnation we have noticed in that color, an exceedingly good exhibition carnation, a strong 4-inch flower; also seedling No. 254, an exceedingly good red with an exceptional stem, extra large, looking like a winner in the red class; also No. 251, a rose-pink in color, deserving of honorable mention; also No. 111, very good red; also No. 42, a good light pink; also a vase of good mixed seedlings, some of colors that will be heard from later. The F. Dörner & Sons Co. seedlings are an advance in the right direction and have created comment among all the members present.

W. W. Coles, of Kokomo, showed several vases of good commercial carnations.

Trendly & Schenck, New York city, showed Carnation Salmon Beauty, a beautiful salmon color, but it arrived in poor condition.

A. Pittet, of Indianapolis, showed Sweet Pea Rose Queen, one of the finest sweet peas to be found on the market wherever you go, and we certainly give it an exceedingly good recommendation; also two other vases of sweet peas showing good culture.

Vaughan's Greenhouses, Western Springs, Ill., showed a collection of plants.

W. W. Coles.

(President Indiana State Florists' Association.)

Having been invited by Baur & Steinkamp to visit their place in the morning of the annual meeting day, about twenty-five of the members took advantage of the opportunity to inspect their stock. Mostly carnations are grown here, both for cut blooms and for cuttings. The carnations coming from this place have a reputation of being always of excellent quality and the stock this year is quite up to their usual standard. Everything is planted on solid beds and the fine appearance of the stock would indicate that, for growing carnations at least, these beds are the equal of any raised bench. The bright particular star on the place just now is their scarlet seedling, Radiance. As a Christmas red this would be hard to beat. It is slated for dissemination next year, and a large stock is being worked up.

There are beds of all the standard varieties, all in fine shape, including St. Nicholas and Pocahontas. A bed of Pink Delight carried over from last year caught the eye of everyone. The plants in the new house were especially strong. These plants were planted in beds in the open, where the house was to be built, and the house was built over them.

The cutting bench, containing about 100,000 cuttings, had been full from end to end, and a good start had been made on filling it the second time. A good demand is taking their cuttings as fast as they are ready to ship. St. Nicholas, Pocahontas, White Wonder, Gloriosa, Pink Delight and Enchantress seem to be especially in demand.

Geraniums are being shipped from 2-inch pots. Only about ten varieties are grown, but these are grown in large quantity and propagated in big batches. The trip was followed by luncheon at the Commercial Club.

The following were present:

Barick, M. A., Seymour.

Little liners in the Classified department of The Review are excellent business bringers. Of course these advertisements do not reach any except those who are looking for an opportunity to buy; if the advertiser is looking for someone to sell to, he should use strong display. But the liners give excellent returns, like this:

Please change my advertisement to the enclosed as I have already sold over $100 worth of the stock previously advertised in The Review. —Hugo Kind, Hammonton, N. J., January 19, 1913.

To sell "over $100 worth" cost Mr. Kind $1.80, including the issue only just out when he wrote.

Beaumont, Tex.—Mrs. Bessie O. Weis-singer, of the Beaumont Floral Co., has purchased a residence and five lots at the corner of Spruce street and Collier's Ferry road. The property fronts on Spruce street. It is Mrs. Weissinger's purpose to add a greenhouse and otherwise enlarge her business, which has already developed into gratifying proportions.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

GREENHOUSE building appears at present to be progressing faster in the southwest than in any other section.

THE classified ads in this issue show an increase of three and one-half columns over last week, all unsolicited orders from those who know the value of these little liners.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves
the bother of annual renewal by sending
The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-
two visits of the paper.

THE schedule of premiums for the twenty-second annual exhibition of the American Carnation Society has been mailed to members by Secretary Baur. The exhibition and convention are to be held this year in conjunction with the National Flower Show at New York, April 8 to 10.

ONCE more: People who do not sign their full names need expect no answers to their inquiries. The Review does its best to answer all inquiries that show full name and address, but all anonymous inquiries go into the wastebasket.
Strange to say, it frequently is three or four a day.

THE annual proceedings and bulletin of the American Rose Society has just been mailed to members by Secretary Hammond. It contains a full report of the meeting at Detroit a year ago, including the essays read there, also a number of other papers on roses, the premium list for the rose section of the approaching National Flower Show and a list of the members of the society.

ADDRESS WANTED.

The Review has an inquiry for the name and address of the manufacturer of the George Schubert sprinkler. Will some reader kindly supply the information?

ADVERTISING RATES.

When a trade paper begins cutting rates and offering gifts, to make a showing of business, it puts itself in the position of the Bowery clothing store that showed a suit of clothes marked in large figures "$10." Thought the prospective buyer: "They ask ten; they want eight; they'll take six; it's worth four; I'll offer two."

EASTERN GROWERS, NOTE.

Now and then there is a florist in the east who, though he himself is a reader of The Review, looks upon it as a western publication, because it is printed in Chicago, forgetting that its circulation is national. Such a one sometimes thinks, "It wouldn't pay me to advertise my little lot of surplus stock in a paper published in Chicago." For any who have such an idea, the following letter from an advertiser located at Rochelle Park, N. J., will be interesting:

Please stop my advertisement and hold to my credit any money due me, as I will have more advertising soon. I was simply deluged with orders; received orders for 30,000 in one mail, and they were coming from every part of the United States and Canada. C. H. Rice, Rochelle Park, N. J., January 20, 1913.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

A rather erratic market has resulted from the various weather changes that have taken place in the last week. Both stock and demand have been rather uncertain in the face of the activities of the weather man, who has favored this region with almost every kind of weather possible. Preceding January 17 and 18 conditions were hardly the best, as it was sloppy under foot and at times there either was snow or a drizzling rain. However, the change January 17 brought about the best conditions possible for the retailers and the following day proved one of the best since the holiday rush. Again, however, the weather took another change January 19 and 20, when the second snowfall was recorded, followed by a drop of the temperature to 13 degrees.

As for the market, the changes were about as frequent as in the weather.
Roses were considerably on the short side and of the shorter lengths, the kind needed for funeral work, there were hardly enough to go around. Of the longer grades the market was more freely supplied, but even these were not in oversupply and brought excellent returns. Beauties are reported to have suffered from the warm spells and, besides the fact that these have gone off crop, the quality of both stems and blooms has suffered to some extent.
Killarneys are more freely cut than any other variety. Richmonds hardly could be found. Melody, Sunburst, Mrs.
Aaron Ward and the other novelties were exceeding short of the demand.
Carnations, however, were plentiful and there was no trouble experienced in filling all orders. While the stock now has plenty of stem and blooms of good size, the changes in temperature

A LARGE SUPPLY OF HIGH GRADE CARNATIONS

DON'T OVERLOOK THE EMPHASIS ON HIGH GRADE

AND THE PRICES ARE DECIDEDLY REASONABLE.

T HERE now is an abundance of Carnations in this market (indeed, they are so plentiful that exceedingly low quotations are being made on quantities), but THERE ARE NOT SO VERY MANY THAT ARE STRICTLY GOOD.

It is not what you PAY but what you GET that determines value—and the more you think about it the more certain you are to order your Carnations of Amling. As always, we have a large supply of strictly first-class stock.

VIOLETS

We not only handle the cream of the crops, but we have, we believe, the largest and steadiest supply of fine Violets that is to be found anywhere in the west. We are anxious for a trial order, as it will mean regular business.

ORCHIDS

We have a big crop of fancy Trianae this week—as fine Cattleyas as have come on this market this season. Try these for your corsage table and fine funeral work; you will find they are a success with all who know choice flowers.

VALLEY! VALLEY!!

Here's where you can get the best grade of Valley any time you want it—we always can ship on short notice. But why be without it yourself? Let us send you a regular supply.

LILIES

A large crop of good lilies now ready; can supply in any quantity.

BULB STOCK

Plenty of Jonquils, Tulips, Freesia, Romans, etc., first-class quality.

BEAUTIES

There are two features of our Beauty supply that make the trade marvel—the quality and the steadiness of the cut. All growers get good Beauties once in a while, but ours always are fine and WE ALWAYS HAVE THEM. If you have a trade that calls for Beauties we can be of service to you.

FANCY ROSES

There are three reasons why the thinking buyers are ordering their Roses of us this season:—1st, there is no finer lot of stock; 2d, our growers doubled their glass last summer, giving us quantity, and, 3d, we have a full line. Specially strong just now on the extra long, fancy grades.

It is quite the neatest corgage box we ever have seen for Valentine's day use; will appeal to high-class trade, yet is so cheap you do not need to count the cost. Two sizes, nested, one for 200 Violets, the other for 150 Violets in corgage; two to a nest. Price only 50c per nest. Order now to make sure of your supply.

GREEN OAK FOLIAGE

Once you stop to think of it you will appreciate how absolutely indispensable our Prepared Green Oak will be for the Spring decorations. Fireproof—can be used anywhere, and in many places the insurance underwriters won't let you use anything else. This is the same splendid article we sold in such large quantities all over America in red, russet and golden brown for Autumn work, except that for Spring it is bright, rich, cheerful green.

Write for our interesting proposition to supply you with this useful article.

have tended to make them soft. Prices weakened somewhat as a result. There still are many splits. Orchids were in big supply in the local wholesale stores, possibly due as much to the absence of any demand from out of town as to an increase in supply. Violets were in no great demand unless it was the locally grown singles. Doubles from the New York growers at times met with hardly any demand at all, and sales of these were mostly forced. Valley was more plentiful and the quality was first rate. Sweet peas have again taken an important place on the market and the supply is steadily increasing each day. Easter lilies are in large supply in some quarters, with few arriving elsewhere. Callas cut no figure. Snapdragon is seen less frequently than last season and much of it is of low grade. There is not much mignonette, but all the market needs. A few daisies are arriving. All bulbous stock is plentiful. There continues to be a glut of Paper Whites and Romans. Jonquils are not so plentiful and sell fairly well.

Freesia is more abundant. Tulips are improving in stem and flower, but the same can not be said of the price.

Greens are plentiful and no change in either the supply or prices has been noted.

Association Meeting.

At the meeting of the Cook County Florists' Association January 16 the principal business was the nomination of officers in anticipation of the election which occurs in February. H. N. Bruns was nominated for the presidency, but declined to permit his name to stand. A. C. Kohlbrand and N. P. Miller were nominated and each tried to retire in favor of the other, but was not permitted to do so. For vice-president, George W. Wienhoeber and A. Zech were nominated. For secretary, A. T. Pyfer, the present incumbent, was the only nominee, and this was the case with Treasurer John Zech and Sergeant-at-arms Mike Fink. For trustee, five to be elected, the following were nominated: Walter Scott, E. C. Amling, P. M. Brodbeck, A. Henderson, H. Wehrman, J. L. Raske, William Graff, J. W. Fink, H. N. Bruns, R. Schmidt, N. P. Miller, W. J. Kiemel.

A. E. Marine, Herbert F. Craig, James Novak, John Evert and Martin Goerger were elected to membership. Applications were received from Otto Strobach, E. W. Siebrecht, John Swanson and Fred J. Rose.

The exhibits of the evening were two vases of carnations, staged by the Chicago Carnation Co. The Herald was given the association's certificate of merit. The flowers staged were excellent, large, full and a clear, even shade of scarlet on stems thirty-six inches long, carrying the flowers erect. The exhibit was of special interest because a considerable number of the members had bought the variety for trial next season. The other exhibit was seedling No. 246, a pink that was well thought of. Mr. Pyfer asked for suggestions as to its name, and some wag suggested Ida Klein, in honor of the nominees for the presidency. Other suggestions were Jolly Pink, I Will and Pink Glory.

Various Notes.

Several local growers who are selling their own stock on the Chicago market will make a change of location February 1, according to the statement given out by H. H. Wilkerson, manager for Henry Wittbold. The change will affect Frank Ben, H. C. Blewitt, Hunt Bros., A. E. Hunt & Co. and Sol. Garland, who will hereafter be located at 56 East Randolph street, with H. Wittbold. With the exception of the last named, who, it is understood, has formerly shipped to Percy Jones, those concerned in the move have been selling their stock at 82 to 86 East Randolph street, renting space on the floor occupied by J. A. Budlong, Sinner Bros. and M. C. Gunterberg, who will remain at their present location. Henry Wittbold will continue to do business in the same quarters, merely subletting space to the others. Outside of Sol. Garland, all have been located in the same quarters before, in the days of the Chicago Flower Growers' Co.

For the second time in less than a month the residence of John Poehlmann was ransacked by burglars January 19. The robbery was committed during the absence of the family. The principal loss was $100 in currency which Mrs. Poehlmann had secreted in a dresser; neither the family silver nor other valuables were disturbed. Consequently Mr. Poehlmann thinks the burglar must have been looking for the means to foot Christmas bills, while Mrs. Poehlmann avers that when they returned home the sleeping apartments looked as though Mr. Poehlmann had just finished hunting for a collar button when overdue at the store. Burglar insurance had been taken out since the first visit by thieves.

John Muno, Adam Zender and Charles Hanisch are all driving Cadillac touring cars.

H. R. Hughes, the West Van Buren street retailer, whose original window decorations have made him widely known, has invented a special St. Valentine's day cut flower box and has made an arrangement with the A. L. Randall Co. to become his selling agent.

George M. Garland, president of the Des Plaines concern that bears his name, is at the King Edward hotel, Los Angeles, Cal., and will remain the rest of the winter studying trade conditions there.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. has recently put a year's supply of valley

A Grower's Advantage

in the use of mechanical refrigeration lies more in the improved condition in which his stock reaches the market than it does in the saving in cost—though it has been found that Brunswick refrigerating plants can be operated at a saving of fully one-third as compared to the cost of ice. The grower of cut flowers who operates his cooling and storage space with a has an absolutely even temperature at all times, with just the degree of humidity he wants. His stock reaches the market in condition to command the best prices. The gain is especially great in hot summer weather, but is important at all seasons.

The grower who has a Brunswick equipment can store his valley pips, lily bulbs, etc., on his own place. Among the well-known growers who have found Brunswick apparatus simple, safe, durable, economical and efficient are: Henry Hentz, Madison, N. J.; Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., Gibsonsia, Pa.; Briarcliff Greenhouses, Scarborough, N. Y.

Retail florists will find Brunswick equipment infinitely better than ice. Pennock Bros., Philadelphia, have for more than five years used our one-ton machine to cool a cut-flower display refrigerator 16½x9x3½. Formerly it cost $500 per year for ice. Electric power to drive our machine averages $300 per year and there has been practically no expense for repairs.

FOUR NEW ROSES Every Grower Will Want This Year.

Irish Fire Flame: The dainty new Single Rose, trimmest and sweetest little bud ever seen, and well named as to its lovely color. A Dickson seedling of strong, vigorous growth; very free, particularly during the winter; color, fiery crimson, shading to a rich orange salmon at the base; foliage, a dark green, reverse side of leaf deep bronze; a new departure in Roses, a distinct novelty; beautiful and charming; a favorite wherever shown; nothing to compare with it.

Mrs. Charles Russell: A new American pedigree seedling. Of American Beauty size and fragrance; color, a lighter cerise that does not fade to blue, but to a lighter rose as the flowers age; a strong, vigorous grower; good heavy stems; flowers carried erect, no weak necks; no blind wood like Beauty; very prolific, remarkably so considering its size. As tested in the various shows over the country this fall, it has proven a wonderful keeper and established itself at once as a rose of unusual merit, creating a sensation wherever shown and attracting not only the commercial man, but the public as well.

Good, strong, healthy plants of these varieties, guaranteed stock. Delivery: Grafted, March; Own Root, April or later.

Milady: A strong, sturdy grower; excellent foliage; flowers large and double; open perfectly at all seasons; similar to Richmond in color, although richer in color in the bud; form of flower resembles Gen. Jacqueminot; very prolific; good keeper; the coming Red Rose. Grafted or Own Root, $30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000.

Mrs. George Shawyer: A free flowering pink Rose, very highly recommended by some of our best rose growers; has been selling exceptionally well in the New York market this season. Grafted or Own Root, $30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000.

necessary, else perfection in bloom is lost. Carnations have recovered somewhat. The height of the crop is past and the market is taking hold at the present moderate prices. The warm weather makes great care necessary in selection for shipping; many of the flowers have been grown too soft. Daffodils continue to increase; they are extremely popular. Tulips have arrived; Mon Tresor and La Reine are here in sufficient quantities to depend upon. Freesia is plentiful and sells when it is of good quality. Paper Whites are difficult to market. White lilac is good and plentiful. Sweet peas are coming in freely. Greens have been dull.

Roses show evidence of becoming scarcer. Richmond is the only variety difficult to obtain so far, although Beauties can now be had only in the long fancy grade; the medium are absent and the short crippled. Fancy flowers of pink and white roses are not wanted nearly so much as the medium and short grades.

Out-of-town orders are fairly good.

Retailers Organize.

The second meeting of the retail flower dealers of Philadelphia was held in Horticultural hall Tuesday, January 21, to hear the report of the committee on publicity appointed at the first meeting and to formulate plans for educating the public in the use of flowers and plants. The President's Visit.

When the President of the United States came here a year ago, he was escorted down Broad street by the First Troop, Philadelphia City Cavalry. When he reached Broad and Chestnut streets a man on the curb said to a friend, "Now is your chance to take off your hat to the President." His friend said he wouldn't, in language more forceful than elegant. Hearing this, a Quaker rushed forward, doffed his hat, and shouted "Hooray!" A feeble cheer from the crowd followed.

The enthusiasm that greeted President Taft when he reached this city to attend the Clover Club banquet in the Bellevue-Stratford January 17 was in marked contrast to his former reception. The streets were crowded, the people cheered, and the distinguished men who gathered at the dinner gave him a hearty reception. The decorations arranged in the palm garden, used for the first time for such an affair, were most effective. The center table, made in the shape of a cloveleaf, was hollow, surrounding a group of palms and ferns. From this table ran other long, narrow tables in the fashion approved for bringing many persons in reach of the speakers' voices. Spring flowers, chiefly daffodils and sweet peas in vases and baskets, decorated the tables. The sides of the room were ornamented with banks of foliage. The work was tastefully executed by J. J. Habermehl's Sons.

The Midwinter Ball.

Those who are accustomed to seeing Horticultural hall would scarcely have recognized their old friend when dressed for the ball last week. William Graham, who had the decoration entrusted to his care by J. J. Habermehl's Sons, did a splendid piece of work. The electric lighting was increased to a degree that made the hall bright as day. There were arches and ful, are arriving in sufficient quantities to meet the demand. On the whole, conditions are fairly good, but a little cold weather would make them better.

Club Meeting.

At the annual meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association, held January 13, the officers elected were as follows: President, John Dunbar; vice-president, George Arnold; secretary, H. B. Stringer; treasurer, W. L. Keller; trustees, W. H. Dildine, Wm. Price, A. H. Salter. With the exception of George Arnold, they are the same officers as for 1912. In addition to the election of officers, the association elected five members to the board of managers of the Rochester Industrial Exposition Association. These were George B. Hart, John Dunbar, C. B. Ogston, F. W. Vick and C. H. Vick. The following members were elected as delegates to the State Federation of Florists' Clubs, which holds its annual meeting in Ithaca February 12: John Dunbar, George Arnold, F. W. Vick and E. R. Fry.

The growing of carnations was the discussion of the evening. Mr. House brought in a grub for examination. He called it a geranium borer. The new members voted in were H. J. Head, George King, of Avon, and H. E. Bates. Mr. Bates has recently come to Rochester to be the local representative of Lord & Burnham Co. The fine buffet luncheon of the evening was given by him. From all appearances, the grub brought in by Mr. Bates was more thoroughly examined than the "grub" brought in by Mr. House.

Various Notes.

George B. Hart has been making alterations in his cooler. He is providing for more room in which to handle his increasing business.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THERE was a generous fall of rain in the central California seed growing district during the last week and growing conditions are now favorable.

CHARLES N. PAGE, Des Moines, Ia., returned January 18 from a trip of six weeks to California, much improved in health. Mrs. Page and children are wintering at their home overlooking San Diego.

J. M. THORBURN & Co., New York, make the claim that they catalogue more varieties of both flower and vegetable seeds than any other house. The 1913 book is the one hundred and twelfth annual edition.

THE European trade press is printing frequent articles with regard to the Holland bulb growers having devised means by which hyacinths may now be had in flower at the beginning of December. The method of preparation, however, is not given.

FROM all over the country come reports of new sweet peas that combine the characteristics of Countess Spencer with the early flowering qualities of the Zvolanek winter bloomers. Many growers who have worked up their own stocks of seeds are now sending cut flowers to market in considerable quantity.

THE count of the Holland bulb salesmen shows between seventy and eighty now on tour in the United States. Twenty years ago not more than a dozen made the annual trip. A number of firms have sent men for the first time this season, partly because their trade in England is in such condition that they feel the necessity of enlarging their list of customers.

SENATOR KENYON, of Iowa, is opposed to the congressional free seed distribution and to the end of starting a campaign looking to its discontinuance has introduced a resolution in the Senate directing the postmaster general to furnish to the Senate an estimate, if possible, of the expense to the government for the last four years in carrying seeds, plants and bulbs franked through the mails free of postage by members of congress and government officials.

THE Sioux City Seed & Nursery Co., of Sioux City, Ia., and Alpena, Mich., has filed suit against the Detroit & Mackinac Railway Co. for $10,000, on account of damage alleged to have been done to the seed company's interests by the building of the new Detroit & Mackinac passenger station on Tenth street. The seed company's warehouse is just west of the new station. Before the erection of the station it was possible for vehicles

It is our desire to have every pound of Seed sent out under this trade-mark in time become a growing advertisement of the integrity of this concern.

THE Lake Erie Seed Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., has instituted suit against the Pennsylvania and Nickel Plate railroads with reference to a track crossing at the seed company's Lackawanna plant. It is alleged that a farm crossing was provided in a deed of 1881, but that the railroads have recently closed the crossing, compelling the seed company to carry its goods over by hand.

W. ATLEE BURPEE & Co., Philadelphia, have just issued a revised edition of their monograph by G. W. Kerr, entitled "Sweet Peas Up-to-date." Twenty-four pages have been added to the original work, containing a list of all the sweet peas introduced since the original edition in 1910. In the introduction to the appendix it is stated that "We have for the last four years been hybridizing the original winter-flowering varieties with the finest Spencers, with a view to evolving a new race of winter-flowering Spencers, and we are now able to say that we have accomplished this even beyond our most sanguine expectation, as we have now winter-flowering Spencers in many exquisite colors, though it may be a year or so before we have sufficient stock to offer to the public. Our separate selections of this new race last year number 220, the results of the first two years' crosses alone. As this new type will be of inestimable value to cut flower growers, we anticipate a great demand for it, as it will entirely supersede the varieties now grown under glass for winter and spring flowering."

of the American Seed Trade Association were given to understand that the committee would set apart a few minutes for any statements the trade might wish to put in the record. The committee filed a telegram, and a number of individual seedsmen sent letters, the tenor of which was that it is of far more importance to the seed trade to maintain the principle of specific duties than to make changes in existing rates. Emphasis was put upon the point that the specific duties in the present law have largely done away with the difficulties that arose under the ad valorem rates of previous tariff laws. A committee of nurserymen appeared to urge the same points with regard to the paragraph in which that trade is interested.

ing the consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill in the House last week. After an extended debate the motion was ruled out of order by the presiding officer, on the point of order raised by Mr. Mann.

In offering an amendment to the postoffice appropriation bill providing that these trade articles should be carried by parcel post, Representative Byrnes, of South Carolina, said that while the parcel post law included all farm products, it excluded seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions and plants. "At least sixty or seventy per cent of the merchandise that the farmer would receive or send by parcel post," he said, "is excluded from the benefit of the lower rates granted by the parcel post." He said it discriminated against the farmer, and quoted a letter from W. C. Geraty & Co. to that effect. Along the South Carolina coast, he said, the cabbage plant industry is highly developed and in the shipping season six and ten cars are shipped a day. The plants are perishable. The farmers anticipated that with the parcel post they could save time and expense involved in the express business by receiving the plants, seeds and bulbs on the free delivery route, but under the law seeds and plants can be mailed at a cent for each two ounces. The object is in the saving of time and expense rather than in the rate. Mr. Lever said the situation ought to be corrected, as seeds for planting and wheat for planting can not take the parcel post rate, but full-grown cabbage and wheat to be ground can. Mr. Lever said that if time had not pressed so hard when the measure was put through last session the situation would not have existed. Mr. Martin thought it was remarkable that it got into the law. Unless the matter was remedied the farmers would have to "bear the burden instead of enjoying the blessing of the parcel post."

Representative Mann, in opposing the proposition, said that the American Seed Trade Association had opposed the inclusion of seeds in the parcel

Boddington's Quality Cannas

Are true to name, have two to three good eyes, are well cured, sound and dormant, and give absolute satisfaction. Our sales last year were nearly 700,000, and not an overgrown kick. The Canna crop this year, however, is very short, and we advise placing orders early to secure stock. Delivery can be made at purchaser's option. Remember, you may deduct 5% if cash accompanies the order.
